STATE BOARD OF EQUALIZATION, STATE OF CALIFORNIA

SACRAMENTO 14, May 2, 1945

*Honorable Joseph A. Beck, Secretary of the Senate
State Capitol, Sacramento, California*

RE: SENATE RESOLUTION No. 98

DEAR MR. BECK: This is in response to your letter of April 26 with which you transmitted a copy of the above-numbered resolution, pertaining to the effect of reductions in California taxes, adopted by the Senate upon motion of Senator Crittenden.

Inasmuch as this board administers the Sales and Use Tax Law, we assume that the Senate desires that we direct our answer specifically to the effect of a reduction of the rate of these taxes. What follows relates, accordingly, to this phase of the subject matter of the resolution.

Under present Federal income tax statutes California retail sales taxes may be deducted from gross income of individuals in the computation of their taxable net income. Obviously, the many taxpayers avail themselves of this deduction but it is difficult to ascertain the amount of sales tax payments thus utilized to effect reduction of Federal income tax liability. The Collector of Internal Revenue informs us that no statistics on the subject are available.

Apparently the extent to which sales or use tax reimbursement paid to vendors is thus applied to minimize Federal income taxes lies somewhere between 23 and 90 per cent of that portion of sales and use tax reimbursement paid by individual consumers and between 25 and 80 per cent of sales and use tax reimbursement paid by corporations. These percentage ranges result from the graduation in Federal income tax rate schedules for individuals and corporations, respectively. In those instances where the rates applicable to net income are relatively low, the saving resulting from claiming deduction on account of State sales tax reimbursement would be relatively small but where the Federal rates are high the value to the taxpayer of the deduction for State tax payments would increase substantially.

It is difficult, therefore, to be specific in answering the question asked in Senate Resolution No. 98, viz., what percentage of the saving resulting to consumers in reduction of the sales and use tax rate will be offset by a corresponding increase in Federal income taxes resulting from the fact that the amount of sales tax payments available as a deduction from gross income in computing net income for Federal tax purposes will be lessened. Much will depend upon the circumstances applicable to the particular tax return. Moreover, the methods employed by the Federal Government in the computation of individual income tax obligations will also have a bearing on the extent to which a change in the rate of State sales and use taxes will be reflected in Federal tax payments.

Introduction of the "short form" return seems to have minimized the amount of State sales tax payments utilized for purposes of reducing the basis for Federal income taxes. There are no recent statistics showing the percentage of California taxpayers using this short form, but it appears likely that its use is quite prevalent. All taxpayers having annual incomes of $5,000 or less may deduct amounts equivalent to 10 per cent of their incomes to cover, among other deductible items, State sales and use tax reimbursement in arriving at their taxable net incomes for Federal purposes. In California under our community property laws this means that a husband and wife having a combined income of $10,000, by making separate returns, could deduct between them $1,000 in the computation of their Federal tax base without any specification as to the amounts actually paid out by way of sales and use tax reimbursement. Such tax reimbursement is only one of the factors taken into account in the flat 10 per cent deduction and it seems unlikely that there would be any change in the percentage of this reduction even though the State sales and use tax rate might be lowered.

Because of the obvious difficulty of keeping an accurate record of sales and use tax reimbursement paid out during a year, Federal income tax payers have resorted frequently to estimates. The United States Treasury Department does not encourage this practice but there is some precedence for the allowance of approximately 1 per cent of individual income as a sales and use tax deduction. For example, it would be estimated that an individual earning $3,000 had paid out $30 during the course of the year as sales and use tax reimbursement and a deduction would be allowed, accordingly, in the computation of his Federal income tax. To what extent this practice might affect the results of a reduction in the rate of the State sales and use tax is difficult to say. Strict compliance with Federal statute would require the taxpayer to keep an accurate account of all sales and use tax reimbursement items for purposes of deduction unless in pursuance of the short form procedure he takes a flat 10 per cent deduction to cover a number of deductible items in which sales and use tax reimbursement would be only one factor.

It would appear unlikely that a large percentage of any reduction in the State sales and use tax rate would be reflected immediately in increased Federal income tax payments of individuals in California. This will be true, we believe, because of the three considerations that we have discussed, viz., (1) the general use of the short form Federal return by taxpayers having incomes of $5,000 or less or married couples having combined incomes of $10,000 or less; (2) the disinclination of many taxpayers to claim a specific deduction in the computation of their Federal taxes on account of State sales and use tax reimbursement because of the detailed record keeping involved and (3) the relatively small annual burden upon any individual Californian resulting from the amount of sales and use tax reimbursement passed on to him in connection with his retail purchases.

In contrast, corporate income tax payers would find their Federal income taxes increased much more sharply as a result of reductions in the rate of California sales and use taxes. The underlying reasons for this difference are (1) corporate income tax brackets, on the average, are much higher than those of individual taxpayers; (2) many corporations pay large amounts of sales and use tax reimbursements for supplies and equipment used in their businesses, keeping accurate account of this outlay as business expense obviously deductible in the computation of their Federal net income tax liability. Thus, not only is the amount deducted by the average corporation on account of State sales and use taxes much larger than the corresponding deduction made by the average individual, but the saving in Federal taxes is greater because of the higher rate applicable to the corporate income. Hence, any reduction in the amount paid out as a result of the State taxes would mean a substantial increase in the amount of Federal taxes, tending to offset to a large extent any ultimate gain to the corporation from the lower State tax rate.

Again it is difficult to be specific as to the effect of a downward revision of State sales and use taxes on the amount of Federal income taxes. We have already pointed out that the Federal tax on corporations ranges from 25 to 80 per cent of their net income. Possibly 50 per cent is a fairly representative figure. If it is, approximately one-half of any savings that might otherwise result to corporations from a reduction in the rate of the State sales and use tax would be absorbed the following year by higher Federal income taxes.

Although we have available statistics disclosing the amount of sales and use taxes self-assessed by retailers classified according to the commodities sold, there is no way of determining precisely who bought these commodities. Thus, we can not inform you as to the extent to which sales and use tax reimbursement was passed on either to (1) individuals or (2) corporations. Nor can we inform you as to the extent to which this reimbursement was passed on to (1) individuals and corporations who were able to utilize reimbursement to reduce Federal tax payments substantially or (2) to individuals and corporations who were unable to make such use of the sales and use tax reimbursement. Consequently, no categorical answer to the question asked in Senate Resolution No. 98 is possible.

The attached table prepared by our Division of Research and Statistics with reference to sales taxable under the Retail Sales and Use Tax Law for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1944, will disclose these items according to commodity classification. Some interesting and informative deductions may be made from this table.

For example, it will be observed that 8.75 per cent of the total taxable sales were of industrial and transportation supplies and equipment. It is reasonable to assume that most of these sales were made to corporations paying substantial Federal income taxes in the computation of which the sales and use tax reimbursement would be a deduction. The same observation could be made with respect to automotive supplies and equipment inasmuch as individual purchases of such items have been reduced drastically under war conditions. These transactions accounted for 10.61 per cent of the sales tax yield. For similar reasons, sales of building materials and hardware, accounting for 8.09 per cent of the tax base, were probably made to corporate purchasers to a large extent.

Thus, from the sales of the three classifications of commodities mentioned, more than 27 per cent of the tax yield may be traced and it is reasonable to assume that most of this was passed on to corporations or individuals who would claim the full amount thereof as deductible business expense in the computation of their Federal income taxes. Probably at least half of any reduction in sales and use tax reimbursement would be absorbed immediately by higher income tax payments of these same corporations and individuals.

It will be further observed that the largest single category of taxable sales is "General Merchandise" representing 27.68 per cent of the total. As indicated by sub-classifications, this category covers a large number of items. Many of the sales are doubtless to individuals who pay relatively small Federal income taxes but there must be a substantial volume of transactions in this classification in which the purchasers are corporations or individuals enjoying large incomes and hence paying high Federal rates thereon.

Next in volume are sales of meals and drinks, representing 19.89 per cent of the total. These, it may be assumed, are to a large extent individual expenditures. Whether a reduction in the rate of sales tax would affect materially the outlay for such items is problematical. If the experience since July 1, 1943, when the rate of tax was lowered from 3 per cent to 2½ per cent, is to be taken as a guide, the conclusion might well be that no perceptible difference in individual expenditures is to be anticipated. This will mean, of course, that the Federal income tax payments of the individuals will not be affected materially. It may mean, however, that to the extent that the vendors' business expense is reduced through lower sales tax payments to the State, their Federal income tax base will be higher and the saving which they might otherwise have enjoyed from the rate reduction will be to a large extent absorbed by higher Federal taxes.

Finally, we should like to report that while precise data are unavailable it seems probable that those California consumers who will note any substantial diminution in their expenses by reason of a reduction in the rate of sales and use taxes will probably note a corresponding increase in the amount of Federal income taxes that they must pay, absorbing approximately half of the sales and use tax reduction. There will undoubtedly be individual instances when the resultant increase in Federal taxes will be more or less but after reviewing the entire situation as thoroughly as the time permits, we believe that the foregoing is a reasonably sound generalization. Accordingly, we submit this as our report to the Senate in response to its Resolution with the hope that the data may prove of some value to the Members of the Senate in their deliberations.

Respectfully yours,

DIXWELL L. PIERCE, Secretary

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE

SACRAMENTO, May 2, 1945

Honorable J. A. Beek, Secretary of the Senate
State Capitol, Sacramento, California

DEAR MR. BEEK: Senate Resolution No. 98, by Senator Crittenden, requests the State Board of Equalization and the Department of Finance to submit data showing the amount of any reduction in California taxes that would be immediately taken up by an increase in Federal income taxes. In compliance with this request, I take pleasure in submitting the following statement:

Until recently it was true that payments to the State under several tax levies had a direct effect upon the amount of Federal income taxes paid by taxpayers, both individual and corporate. State taxes are deductible in computing the amount of Federal income taxes; hence, a decrease in State levies tended to increase the Federal tax base and the amount of Federal taxes, while an increase in State taxes resulted in lower Federal levies.

Recent amendments to the Federal income tax law have changed materially the effect of adjustments in State taxes upon the Federal income tax due from individuals, however. Since the inauguration of the so-called "short-form" (1040A) in 1942 and the withholding tax form (W2) in 1945, increases or decreases in State taxes do not affect the amount of Federal income tax paid by the majority of persons. Under these optional methods of filing, all deductions, including deductions for State and local taxes, are allowed in terms of a flat percentage of net income. In general, it can be said that single individuals with income of less than $5,000 and married persons with community income of less than $10,000 using the withholding or the short-form return would pay the same amount in Federal income taxes regardless of increases or decreases in any State tax. Thus, the great proportion of the people in the lower Federal income tax brackets who use the withholding or the short-form of return would enjoy the full benefit of any reduction in State taxes.

With respect to the relatively smaller number of persons using the long-form of Federal return and to corporations, it is still true that a decrease in State levies tends to increase the amount of Federal income tax. Hence, a part of the savings which would result from a reduction in the State taxes paid by these taxpayers would be taken up later by larger Federal taxes.

With the exception of the personal income tax, data are not available which would afford the basis for an accurate estimate of the effect of a change in State levies upon the amount of Federal income tax. The retail sales tax, for example, is paid by both individuals and corporations, but there is no precise information regarding either the relative proportions paid by each or the Federal income tax rates to which taxpayers in each group are subject. Again, it is pointed out that individuals filing the withholding or the short-form Federal return will realize the full benefit of any reduction in the State sales tax; those using the long-form will receive only partial benefit, since between 25 per cent and 80 per cent of any reduction in the State tax will be taken up the following year in the Federal income tax, depending upon Federal income tax rate applicable to the taxpayer. Between 25 per cent and 80 per cent of any reduction in the amount of sales tax paid by corporations will subsequently be taken up in larger Federal taxes. There is no means of arriving at an average for either group.

A reduction in the bank and corporation franchise tax, would be similar to that of a reduction in State sales tax upon corporations. A part of the saving in State taxes would be absorbed by the Federal Government in larger taxes, but the exact ratio would depend upon the Federal normal tax, surtax, and excess profits tax rates paid by the taxpayer.

The Franchise Tax Commissioner's Office has prepared data showing the effect of reductions in the State personal income tax upon the amounts of Federal income tax due from taxpayers in the various income brackets. The estimates show that continuation of the temporary exceptions and rates allowed in 1945 will result in a $20,038,200 reduction in State revenue below the amount which would be received if the law were allowed to revert to the permanent basis. Of this total, $7,942,650, or 39.6 per cent, will be later taken by the Federal Government and $12,095,550, or 60.4 per cent, will accrue to the taxpayers. The data on savings in four principal income brackets are shown in the following table, which was transmitted by the commissioner's office to the Senate Committee on Revenue and Taxation:

Personal Income Tax Estimate of Reduction in State Revenue Resulting from the Adoption of Various Proposed Amendments Based on 1943 Income

Totals -----	$1,574,830	$20,038,200	100.0	$7,942,650	$12,095,550	60.4	39.6

In this table, attention is called to the fact that California income taxpayers with less than $5,000 annually will retain approximately 76 per cent of the reduction in State taxes, while in the highest bracket only 26 per cent will remain as a benefit to the taxpayer. This general principle would apply to any adjustment in the State tax. When reductions are made in the lower income brackets, a great proportion of the benefit inures to the taxpayer. As reductions are concentrated in the higher brackets, a greater proportion of the savings in State tax is absorbed in larger Federal taxes.

This material demonstrates the fact that while a majority of the citizens with net income of less than $5,000 (single) or $10,000 (community income of husband and wife) would receive full advantage of any reduction in State taxes, a reduction in the State sales, franchise, or personal income tax would not result in an equivalent net saving to all California taxpayers immediately. A part of the revenue lost to the State Government would go to the Federal Treasury. It should be pointed out, however, that the tremendous war expenditures will carry our National debt to more than $300,000,000,000. The financial resources of this Country must be concentrated upon the liquidation of this debt, and every dollar of tax revenue unneeded by the State and local governments should be relinquished to the Federal Government. This is not only a duty, it is, as well, the most fundamental way by which our taxpayers may be freed from the heavy burden of Federal taxation. Every additional dollar paid to the Federal Government at this time will hasten the day when Federal taxes can be reduced. Thus, what appears to be a diversion of revenue from the State to the National Treasury will ultimately result in absolute tax reduction for the people of California.

Very truly yours,

JAMES S. DEAN, Director of Finance

COMMUNICATIONS

The following communication was received and read, and on motion of Senator Tenney, ordered printed in the Journal:

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

SACRAMENTO 14, May 3, 1945

Hon. Jack B. Tenney, Senate Chamber

RE ASSEMBLY BILL 1087

DEAR SENATOR TENNEY: I learned from the morning paper that a copy of a letter addressed to me by one Paul Sheedy and A. Beldon Gilbert was caused by you to be published in the Senate Journal yesterday. While these gentlemen have not done me the courtesy of sending me the original of the letter, I hasten to reply to it through the same medium and know that you will do me the courtesy of causing this reply to be printed in today's Journal.

The bill in question was drawn by my office at the request of the District Attorney of San Diego County and was introduced by Assemblyman Kraft. The need for the bill became apparent when it was discovered that ex-convicts were using simulated police badges to facilitate their operations in short-change and petty extortion rackets.

Last week a representative of my office appeared before the Assembly committee in the company of some Los Angeles peace officers who were also supporting the bill for reasons of good law enforcement.

The Assembly committee gave the bill a favorable recommendation, and I hope that when the bill comes to the Senate you will support it. I know that you will find the bill to be supported by practically all of the established law enforcement organizations in the State of California.

Mr. Sheedy's letter attempts to draw me into a discussion of political ideologies, but I do not think we should let a red herring be drawn across an honest effort of peace officers of this State to stop a badge racket. You know as I do that there is a good deal of truth in the old aphorism that patriotism is the last refuge of scoundrels.

It is quite true that I did have a telephone conversation with Mr. Sheedy Monday and that in the course of it I told him that if he and his associates were sincere in the advocacy of any cause, at least in America they would not need the assistance of Brown Shirts, Black Shirts, Klan night-shirts or fake police badges. I also told him that he was resorting to cheap demagoguery in order to cover up a fake badge racket and that I would support Assemblyman Kraft's bill to the extent of my ability.

Very truly yours,

• ROBERT W. KENNY, Attorney General

PRINTING OF REPORT IN THE JOURNAL

Pursuant to the motion of Senator Donnelly, made on May 1, 1945, the following report of the Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Japanese Resettlement was ordered printed in the Journal of this date:

STATE CAPITOL, May 1, 1945

REPORT OF THE SENATE FACT-FINDING COMMITTEE ON JAPANESE RESETTLEMENT

To the President and Members of the Senate of the State of California:

GENTLEMEN: The committee appointed under the authority of Senate Resolution No. 122, Session of 1943, to investigate the questions of Japanese resettlement involving the relocation of Japanese internees and evacuees conducted such investigations as directed.

The committee held hearings at Modesto, Turlock, Merced, Watsonville, Salinas, Madera, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Tulalake, and San Francisco. The committee investigated particularly violations of the Alien Land Law and problems related to its enforcement, Japanese language schools, fishing by Japanese in the coastal waters of California, and relocation of Japanese during and after the war. The committee also made some study, particularly from a legal point of view, on the question of dual citizenship. During the considerations of the committee a riot occurred in the Japanese Relocation Center at Tulalake, and an investigation of the riot was conducted at that location.

Alien Land Law

The Law Has Not Been Properly Enforced

The committee finds that the Alien Land Law has not been properly enforced in California at any time since its adoption in 1913. There appear to be several reasons for this failure to enforce this law. The more important of these are as follows:

1. The Federal authorities since the beginning have not looked with favor upon the enforcement of the law just as they opposed its enactment in the beginning. The principal reason for this attitude appears to have been that expressed by William Jennings Bryan when, as Secretary of State, he came to California in opposition to the enactment of this law. He stated that the enactment of the law might turn a now friendly Nation into an unfriendly Nation. Undoubtedly the attitude of the Federal authorities on this matter has been an important influence. Since the unprovoked attack on the United States which occurred at Pearl Harbor, there will probably be no further resistance on the part of the Federal Government to enforcement of the Alien Land Law.

2. Another, and perhaps more important reason the law has not been properly enforced, has been that inadequate provision was made for its support. The responsibility for enforcement rests primarily upon the district attorneys. No direct provision was made for financing such prosecutions. Thus the district attorneys must secure the money from the county boards of supervisors. Even though an escheat results from the prosecution no part of the funds go to the county or are available to offset the cost the counties may have incurred.

3. Prosecutions of this type are extremely difficult and expensive. The principal reasons are—

(a) The information required is of such a nature that it is difficult to secure evidence to adequately support an escheat of property.

(b) Due to the very nature of the transaction all parties desire to withhold the facts from the prosecutor.

(c) Land titles themselves are an involved and intricate field of law and extensive researches are sometimes required to solve problems which appear simple.

4. Because of the amount of money involved and the magnitude of the operations of the Japanese they were able to employ the most competent of counsel to prepare their transactions with the greatest of care and to dispute actions taken to defeat their purpose, carrying any disputed question to the highest court.

5. There has been a decided apathy on the part of the public generally to enforcement of acts of this kind, and ample support has not been given to officials charged with the duty of enforcing this law.

Investigation Since the Beginning of the War

Beginning in February, 1944, the Attorney General started an investigation through the district attorneys of land occupancy by Japanese through the various counties. There was active cooperation from the district attorneys of about 40 counties. Upon receiving the various reports, the Japanese occupied property was plotted upon maps, and this significant fact became immediately evident, * * * that the Japanese were settled at vital or strategic points; that almost every utility line, canal, or airport had one or more Japanese families immediately adjacent, while areas apparently as desirable for their purposes but not containing any strategic installations have often been entirely free from Japanese. There was no evidence to explain just why the Japanese settlements were so distributed. That can only be left to inference, but it does not seem possible that it could have been a mere coincidence that the Japanese were distributed in such a strategic manner.

Escheat Proceedings

In seven counties a limited amount of investigating work has been done and an appreciable number of proceedings have been filed. In the opinion of the Attorney General at least twice that number of counties would be very fertile fields for investigation of Alien Land Law violations.

Up to the end of 1944 the following escheat proceedings have been filed under the Alien Land Law:

FRESNO COUNTY

People vs. Shirakawa, et al., Sup. Ct. No. 66293
People vs. Chiamori, et al., Sup. Ct. No. 66806

People vs. Hirota, et al., Sup. Ct. No. 35286

People vs. Watanabe, et al., Sup. Ct. No. 35327

VENTURA COUNTY

People vs. Akitomo, et al., Sup. Ct. No. 27409

People vs. Toyohara, et al., Sup. Ct. No. 27498

Additional proceedings were also being filed in the Counties of Fresno, San Diego, and Ventura. In addition, investigations were being carried forward in the Counties of Contra Costa, Kings, Madera, Merced, San Luis Obispo, and Stanislaus, and there has been some activity in Santa Barbara County. In other counties, as for example, Riverside and Tulare, the district attorney states that they are without sufficient personnel to undertake the work.

Cost of Alien Land Law Investigation

It is the opinion of the Attorney General that approximately 15 competent investigators would be necessary to handle investigations of this type, and that the total cost of such investigations would be approximately $90,000 annually. This figure includes only field work and does not include the cost of services of attorneys of the legal staff who would be required to be regularly assigned to prosecute these cases, nor does it include the cost of bringing the cases to trial nor the cost of the appeals which would undoubtedly be filed in many cases.

Responsibility for Prosecution

Under the present law the responsibility for prosecution rests with the district attorneys, and the costs of such prosecution are chargeable as county expenses. It is felt that the prosecutions could be handled much better if the general work of handling such prosecutions throughout the State were more centralized, permitting the use of more experienced personnel and taking advantage in each county of information gained from all others. It is not felt by the committee that the responsibility should be removed from the district attorneys, but it is felt that responsibility should be imposed upon the Attorney General to coordinate the work and give assistance to the counties; that a large part of the cost of investigation and preparation of cases should be chargeable to the office of the Attorney General; that the Attorney General's Office should aid the district attorneys in the actual trial of the cases.

Apportionment of Escheated Assets

The committee feels that the present provision of the law by which the responsibility and cost of prosecution of these cases must be borne by the county, but under which the money escheats to the State, should be changed. The committee recommends that the provision should be for the actual cost of investigation and prosecution in each case whether the costs were borne by the Attorney General or the district attorney, to be taken from any proceeds of the escheat proceedings, and that any excess thereafter should be divided equally between the State and the county in which the action was brought. Your committee has introduced Senate Bill 139 to accomplish this purpose.

Undoubtedly funds should be appropriated to finance prosecutions under the act. It is the understanding of the committee that a number of escheats have taken place under the cases recently filed amounting to many thousands of dollars. From this it is seen that any reasonably successful prosecution of evasions of the Alien Land Law should be more than financed by property which would be escheated to the State under the Alien Land Law.

Procedure for Escheat Proceedings under Alien Land Law

It appears that the present Alien Land Law should be amended in certain respects to clarify, simplify, or expedite procedure, but it is doubtful whether such proceedings could be made retroactive, and since practically all of the violations occurred years past not much could be accomplished in most cases by amendment of the law. It is the opinion of the committee that careful consideration should be given to these factors before acting on any proposed amendment to the law relating to procedure, and it appears desirable that the advice of the Attorney General should be sought. There is one provision, however, which it appears clearly should be modified. The Statute of Limitations, insofar as it relates to Land Law violations, should be amended to prevent the running of the Statute of Limitations in such cases. The committee has introduced Senate Bill No. 461 to accomplish this purpose.

Japanese Language Schools

In the opinion of your committee the Japanese Language Schools have been used very largely for propaganda in support of the Japanese Government. They are devoted to promoting militarism and emperor worship; to glorifying the Japanese system and belittling Democracy.

The committee feels that beyond any question these schools should be placed under further regulation. The act of 1943 does not provide sufficient funds to the Department of Education to make proper investigation. The committee feels that a small license fee, probably $10 per year, should be collected, and that an adequate appropriation should be made to the State Department of Education to conduct the necessary investigation. This legislation should, of course, not affect colleges or other like institutions which teach languages as a part of their curriculum, but should be directed to those schools which are devoted to instruction in foreign languages. Since, of course, many private foreign language schools are beyond suspicion, no unnecessary burden should be placed on such schools as a class in order to make possible the control or elimination of schools which are anti-American in their purpose and effect.

The committee has introduced Senate Bill 73 to fix a $10 license fee for schools engaged particularly in the instruction of foreign languages, and feels that sufficient funds should be appropriated in the Budget to the Department of Education to make the necessary investigation.

Japanese Fishing Boats

The committee gave little consideration to the problems of the use of fishing vessels on our coast owned and operated by Japanese, since this matter seems to have previously been covered by legislation. The committee, however, feels that there is danger of the present statute being declared unconstitutional, on the grounds of discrimination, since it is directed against alien Japanese. It is believed that this legal question can probably be eliminated by an amendment which has been proposed to the bill which would make it apply to any alien who is ineligible to citizenship.

The committee has introduced Senate Bill 413 to make this change in the statute.

Dual Citizenship

The investigation of the effect of dual citizenship of the Japanese in California has led us to the conclusion that this is a strictly Federal problem. There appears to be nothing that the State of California can do directly to effect the problems arising from dual citizenship. The committee has, however, presented a joint resolution calling the attention of the Federal authorities to the problems in California arising from the dual citizenship of the Japanese, and urging that appropriate steps be taken to deal with the problems so arising.

Tulelake Riot

The committee filed a partial report at the Extra Session on January 27, 1944, dealing with problems of control at the Tulelake segregation center. The report was made at that time because it was believed a violent outbreak at the Tulelake Relocation Center justified bringing the committee's report and recommendations on that problem immediately before the Legislature in special session. This final report will not go into the question of the Tulelake Center, except to summarize the findings made by the committee in its partial report. Extracts of the transcript of the hearing conducted in Tulelake which support the findings may be found in the original partial report, or in the Senate Journal of January 27, 1944. Attention is particularly directed to these extracts from the transcript, as, in the opinion of the committee, they clearly demonstrate the attitude of the Japanese at this relocation center, and demonstrate the dangers which may arise from failure on the part of the State of California to properly recognize and deal with the problems arising from the Japanese in this State.

The findings of the committee contained in the preliminary report are as follows:

The committee spent five days in investigating and holding hearings at Tulelake and in the Tulelake Segregation Center. Many witnesses, including employees, former employees of this center, and citizens residing outside the center were examined, and also including the Project Director, and the Western Regional Director.

The evidence introduced before this committee brought forth the following facts as to the Tulelake situation:

1. That, in August of 1943, a segregation of the disloyal Japanese from the supposedly loyal Japanese was put into effect; that many of the so-called loyal were taken out of Tulelake and sent elsewhere; and that the known disloyal Japanese from the centers throughout the Nation were concentrated at Tulelake, with the result that on or about November 1, 1943, there was in the camp approximately 16,000 such Japanese.

2. That the testimony shows and this committee finds, as a fact, that there were in the center Japanese subversive organizations.

3. Beginning with the segregation and prior thereto, the Japanese internees commenced a series of demands, refusal to work, demonstrations, and riots.

4. The Japanese internees were being given sufficient and wholesome food, the food being supplied by the Army Quartermaster Corps from the same source which our uniformed forces are being fed; that in addition thereto, they were supplied vegetables and other balanced diet obtained in the community.

5. Their living conditions were satisfactory and ample.

6. They were provided with sufficient entertainment and recreational facilities.

7. They were provided with adequate hospitalization and competent physicians and nurses.

8. The administration of the camp afforded opportunities for work for which they were paid, in addition to their accommodations, such work being farming and construction, handling supplies and the raising and slaughtering of meat and other camp activities.

9. The committee believes that most of these continued demands, refusals to work, and requests that were made upon the WRA authorities in charge were not warranted by the facts, but were made a part of a definite plan of the disloyal Japanese in the center to dominate the center and the authorities in charge.

10. That the policy of handling the situation and the camp was that of conciliation, of granting one request after another, and that as soon as one request was granted there were always further demands made. There was no end to it. The administration of the camp lacked firmness and was utterly void of any definite policy. The Director of Tulelake, R. Best, admitted on the stand that no definite policy was given to him by any higher authority to handle this camp, composed of known disloyal Japanese, any differently than so-called Japanese centers or camps.

11. That under the plan that was followed in the administration of the Tulelake Center, no order or directive could be given to any internee. He could simply be requested to cooperate through a Japanese spokesman.

12. That there was a total lack of any adequate internal security under the WRA administration; that to handle a camp of approximately 16,000 mostly disloyal Japanese, there was only a police force of seven men, none of whom was permitted to carry weapons. That there was no protection by a proper man-proof fence between the living quarters of the Caucasian personnel or the administration center and the Japanese colony up to the time of the military taking control, and that the Japanese had free access at all times to the areas occupied by the Caucasian personnel, the administration building, warehouses, and garages, and were constantly found in these places.

13. That such Japanese were continually using toward the Caucasian personnel vile, obscene, and indecent languages, complaints of which were continually made by the personnel to the superiors without any apparent attempt upon the part of such superiors to correct such abuse.

14. That among the Caucasian personnel were certain employees who, as shown by testimony, advised the Japanese internees that if they continually made demands and applied pressure, they could get anything they wanted.

15. That the Japanese internees were organized under the leadership of known hostile segregees who staged a number of anti-American demonstrations such as the celebration of the emperor's birthday and the birthday of the grandfather of the emperor at which celebrations the Japanese flag was prominently displayed and at which celebrations they made obeisance to the Emperor of Japan.

16. That thousands of knives were stolen or made; that great quantities of meat were wantonly destroyed; that hundreds of acres of vegetables were lost or destroyed because of the refusal of the internees to harvest them, the contention being that the harvesting of such crops would help augment the American food supply. Various articles of much value were constantly being stolen, or disappeared; great damage was done to the fire alarm system; and equipment such as farm equipment and trucks were maliciously damaged and destroyed; that the administrative heads of the various departments were not given any support in controlling or handling the affairs of their departments, and were given to understand that they would have to get along with the Japanese as best they could or somebody else would be found to do the job.

17. Threats and demands were made as shown by the testimony taken during the discussion between Mr. Myers, Mr. Best, and Mr. Cozzens with the Japanese committee headed by Kuratomi. This evidence shows that some twenty demands were made, such as: All control of hospital to be taken over by Japanese, and Caucasian doctors and nurses discharged; better food, uniform porches on barracks; bathrooms, better latrines and service; dust control of the roads; Federal meat inspectors; demands for more buckets, brooms, mops; more closets; six ambulances to be in operation; the center administration to recognize a control organization or committee of the Japanese, and to recognize various Japanese committees; unemployment compensation to be made available to all Japanese workers out of employment; demand for the removal of Mr. Best, Mr. Zimmer, Mr. Schmidt, Mr. Kallam, Mr. Peek, Mr. Kirkham, all administrative heads.

18. All these people were imprisoned in the administration building from approximately 1.15 p.m. to 5.15 p.m., during which time Mr. Dillon Myers, National Director; Mr. Cozzens, Regional Director; and Mr. Ray Best, Project Director; and all of the which personnel of said camp were the prisoners and under the absolute control of the Japanese. Upon the breaking up of the demonstration, the concluding speaker over the loud speaker system was a Shinto priest who requested that the Japanese surrounding the building show their allegiance to the Japanese Emperor by the usual custom of removing their hats, turning to the East and bowing three times. This was done.

19. Contrary to the order issued by Director Best, forbidding the Japanese to ever assemble on administration grounds following the demonstration on Monday, November 1st, on Thursday evening, November 4th, several hundred Japanese armed with clubs commenced to congregate in small groups about the Caucasian personnel living quarters of the administrative section where acts of violence were committed; and Internal Security Officer, Edward H. Borbeck was severely beaten and was found in an unconscious condition. They surrounded Best's home and had a truck in which to remove him, and threatened his life, and thereupon Best called in the Military. Shots were fired, and the Japanese driven back into the colony by the Military.

20. The evidence shows that following the demonstration last mentioned, Director Best called a meeting of the personnel and said to them: From here on out all information about what took place in WRA will come from the Army. I don't want any of you to go out and talk. I hope you are wise enough to accept this warning.

From the foregoing facts, this committee decided and determines, and reiterates its former findings, that the Military should be retained in full control and operation of said camp at the Tulelake Center in California.

21. The committee believes that it is because of the lack of any definite policy of the WRA and the continual unnecessary appeasement of the Japanese internees that the condition at Tulelake Center developed; that if a definite policy of firmness had been understood both by the Japanese and the administrative officers from the beginning, this condition would never have developed. It is our firm belief that if the Army had been administering the affairs of the center, and doing the police work, these demonstrations and incidents would not have occurred. We find that the Japanese in the Tulelake Center have been treated with kindness, fairness, and with utmost consideration, despite their disloyalty and acts of sabotage and thievery; we believe that if the Army were in control of the center, doing the work assigned to the Internal Security Officers, the Army would be in a position to prevent the occurrences that have taken place at Tulelake and at the same time permit the treatment of the internees with the same fairness, humane consideration and tolerance indicative of the American way of life.

22. This committee further reiterates and finds, that no Japanese evacuee should be permitted to return to California during the war; that the policy and plan stated by the National Director, Mr. Myers, of removing these evacuees from the camps throughout the Nation and distributing them in California on the Coastal Area should not be countenanced.

Conclusion

The committee is of the opinion that there have been extensive and serious violations of the Alien Land Law; that there are still many cases of such violations where action should be taken and the escheat actions filed.

In order to properly deal with such escheat actions it is recommended first that the primary responsibility of enforcement be placed upon the Attorney General's Office; second, that adequate funds be made available for the necessary expenses, investigations, and prosecution of such cases. To recompense the counties for their contribution to the cost of prosecution it is recommended that one-half of any net return from escheat proceedings be returned to the counties.

Adequate provision should be made to finance Alien Land Law prosecutions at least during the next biennium and until escheated assets should be sufficient to recover further cost of such investigations and prosecutions. An appropriation of $200,000 is, in the opinion of the committee, necessary for this purpose.

The statute of limitations should be changed to prevent the statute running on Alien Law violations. There may be some procedural changes advisable in the Alien Law in order to simplify or expedite hearings.

Japanese language schools, in the opinion of the committee should be carefully regulated and, in order to accomplish this purpose, an ample appropriation should be given to the State Department of Education. It is recognized that for the immediate present there is little to be done in this connection due to the closing of Japanese language schools because of the absence of the Japanese from the State, but as they return to the State and such schools are reopened very careful attention should be given to each of them.

The Japanese fishing bill, in the opinion of the committee, does not require extensive revision, but should be modified to apply to aliens ineligible to citizenship rather than to refer specifically to Japanese.

It is highly desirable that some means be found to eliminate or alleviate the condition in California resulting from the dual citizenship of Japanese, this being a means by which while Japanese may have American citizenship they, in many cases, place a higher value and a higher loyalty upon their Japanese citizenship. Unfortunately, as we have stated above in our report, this appears to be entirely a Federal question and a matter which is beyond the jurisdiction of the State of California.

This committee is vigorously opposed to the return of any Japanese to California until after the end of the war with Japan.

Respectfully submitted.

SECTION 1. This act shall be known and may be cited as the "Community Redevelopment Act."

Article 2. Legislative Finding, Policy of State and Purpose of Act

SEC. 2. It is hereby found and declared that there exist in many communities in this State blighted areas which constitute either social or economic liabilities, or both, requiring redevelopment in the interest of the health, safety and general welfare of the people of the communities in which they exist and of the people of this State generally. These blighted areas are characterized by one or more of the following conditions:

(a) The existence of buildings and structures, either used or intended to be used for living, commercial, industrial or other purposes, or any combination of such uses, which by reason of defective design and character of physical construction, faulty interior arrangement and exterior spacing, high density of population and overcrowding, inadequate provision for ventilation, light, sanitation, open spaces and recreation facilities, age, obsolescence, deterioration, dilapidation, mixed character or shifting of uses to which they are put, or any combination of such factors and characteristics, are unfit or unsafe to occupy for residential, commercial, industrial or other purposes and are conducive to ill health, transmission of disease, infant mortality, juvenile delinquency and crime.

(b) An economic dislocation, deterioration or disuse, as a result of faulty planning, the subdividing and the sale of lots of irregular form and shape and inadequate size for proper usefulness and development, the laying out of lots in disregard of the contours and other physical characteristics of the ground and surrounding conditions, or the existence of inadequate streets, open spaces and utilities, or of lots or other areas which are subject to being submerged by water.

(c) A prevalence of depreciated values, impaired investments and social and economic maladjustment to such an extent that there exists a reduced capacity to pay taxes and consequent inadequacy of tax receipts in relation to the cost of public services rendered.

(d) A growing and in some instances a total lack of proper utilization of areas, resulting in a stagnant and unproductive condition of land potentially useful and valuable for contributing to and serving the public health, safety and welfare; and in other areas a loss of population and reduction of useful utilization of the area, resulting in the further deterioration thereof and in added costs to the taxpayer supporting governmental entities for the creation of new public facilities and services elsewhere.

It is further found and declared that the existence of blighted areas characterized by any or all of such conditions, separately or collectively, constitutes a serious and growing menace which is hereby condemned as injurious and inimical to the public health, safety and welfare of the people of the communities in which they exist and of the people of the State generally; that such areas present difficulties and handicaps which are beyond remedy and control solely by regulatory processes in the exercise of the police power; that they contribute substantially and increasingly to the problems of, and necessitate excessive and disproportionate expenditures for, crime prevention, correction, prosecution and punishment, the treatment of juvenile delinquency, the preservation of the public health and safety and the maintaining of adequate police, fire and accident protection and other public services and facilities; that this menace is becoming increasingly direct and substantial in its significance and effect; that the benefits which will result from the remedying of these conditions and the redevelopment of these areas of blight will accrue to all the inhabitants and property owners of the communities in which they exist.

It is further found and declared that such conditions of blight tend to further obsolescence, deterioration and disuse because of the lack of incentive to the individual landowner and his inability to improve, modernize or rehabilitate his own particular property while the condition of the neighboring properties remains unchanged; that as a consequence the process of deterioration of a blighted area frequently can not be halted or corrected except by redeveloping the entire area, or substantial portions thereof; that such conditions of blight are chiefly found in areas which have been subdivided into small parcels, that in most instances the lands are held in divided and widely scattered ownerships, frequently under defective titles, that in many such instances the private assembly of the lands in blighted areas for purposes of redevelopment is so difficult and costly that it is uneconomic and as a practical matter impossible for individual owners independently or collectively to undertake to remedy such conditions because of lack of the legal power necessary for, and the excessive costs involved in, the private acquisition of the real property of the area; that the remedying of such conditions may require the public acquisition at fair prices of adequate areas, the clearance of the areas through demolition of existing obsolete, inadequate, unsafe and insanitary buildings and the redevelopment of the areas suffering from such conditions under proper supervision, with appropriate planning, and continuing land use and construction policies.

For these reasons it is hereby declared to be the policy of this State to protect and promote the sound development and redevelopment of blighted areas within this State and the general welfare of the inhabitants of the communities in which they exist by remedying such injurious conditions through the employment of all means appropriate for that purpose; that whenever the redevelopment of blighted areas can not be accomplished by private enterprise alone, without public participation and assistance in the acquisition of land, in planning and in the financing of land assembly, the work of clearance and the making of improvements necessary therefor, it is in the public interest to employ the power of eminent domain, to advance or expend public funds for these purposes and to provide a means whereby the blighted areas within this State may be redeveloped or rehabilitated; that the redevelopment of such blighted areas and the provision for appropriate continuing land use and construction policies therein, constitute public uses and purposes for which public money may be advanced or expended and private property acquired, and are governmental functions of State concern in the interest of the health, safety and welfare of the people of the State generally and particularly of the people of the communities of the State in which such areas exist; that it is in the public interest that work on such projects be commenced as soon as possible in order to create postwar employment; and that the necessity in the public interest for the provisions herein-after enacted is hereby declared to be a matter of legislative determination.

Article 3. General Provisions and Definitions

SEC. 3. The following definitions and general provisions govern the construction of this act:

SEC. 4. "Agency" means a redevelopment agency created by this act.

SEC. 10. "Planning commission" means a planning commission established under any State law or created by or pursuant to the charter of the community.

SEC. 11. "Project area" means all or a portion of a redevelopment area comprising either (1) at least one block bounded on all sides by public highways as shown on the official map of the community, or (2), where no official map exists, an area of not less than 90,000 square feet, including any highways, streets, or alleys.

SEC. 12. "Real property" means land, including lands under water and waterfront property, buildings, structures, fixtures, and improvements thereon, any and all property of any nature appurtenant thereto or used in connection therewith, and every estate, interest, privilege, easement, franchise and right, legal or equitable, therein, including rights of way, terms for years and liens, charges or incumbrances by way of judgment, mortgage or otherwise and the indebtedness secured by such liens.

SEC. 13. "Redevelopment area" means an area of a community which the legislative body thereof finds is a blighted area whose redevelopment is necessary to effectuate the public purposes declared in this act. A redevelopment area need not be restricted to, or consist entirely of, buildings, improvements, or lands which of themselves are detrimental or inimical to the public health, safety or welfare, but may consist of an area in which such conditions predominate and injuriously affect the entire area. A redevelopment area may therefore include lands, buildings or improvements which of themselves are not detrimental to the public health, safety or welfare, but whose inclusion is found necessary for the effective redevelopment of the area of which they are a part.

SEC. 14. "Redevelopment" means the planning, redevelopment, replanning, redesign, clearance, reconstruction or rehabilitation, or any combination of these, of a redevelopment area or part thereof, and the provision of such residential, commercial, industrial, public or other structures or spaces as may be appropriate or necessary in the interest of the general welfare, including recreational and other facilities incidental or appurtenant thereto. The term does not exclude the continuance of existing buildings or uses whose demolition and rebuilding or change of use are deemed essential to the redevelopment and rehabilitation of the area.

The term includes provision for open space types of use, such as streets and other public grounds and space around buildings, as well as buildings, structures and improvements, public or private, and improvements of recreational areas, public or private, and other public grounds. The term also includes the replanning or redesign or original development of undeveloped areas which by reason of defective or inadequate street layout, faulty lot layout in relation to size, shape, accessibility, or usefulness, or for other causes are stagnant or not properly utilized or which, because of widely scattered ownership, or tax delinquency, or other reasons, require replanning and land assembly for reclamation or development in the interest of the general welfare.

SEC. 15. "Redevelopment project" means any work or undertaking of an agency pursuant to this act.

SEC. 16. "State Government" means the State of California, or any agency or instrumentality, corporate or otherwise, thereof.

SEC. 17. "State public body" means the State, or any city, city and county, county, district, authority, or any other subdivision or public body of the State.

Article 4. Prerequisites

SEC. 18. A community must comply with the requirements of this article before proceeding further under this act.

SEC. 19. The community must have a planning commission.

SEC. 20. The community must have a master or general community plan adopted by the planning commission or the legislative body, and in either case the plan must include at least the following:

(a) The general location and extent of existing and proposed future major thoroughfares, transportation routes, terminals, and other major public utilities and facilities.

(b) A land-use plan which designates the proposed general distribution and general location and extent of the uses of the land for housing, business, industry, recreation, education, public buildings and grounds, and other categories of public and private uses of land.

(c) A statement of the standards of population density and building intensity recommended in and for the various districts and other territorial units, together with estimates of future population growth, in the territory covered by the plan, all correlated with the land-use plan.

(d) Maps, plans, charts or other descriptive matter showing the area or areas in which conditions are found indicating the existence of blighted areas.

SEC. 21. The legislative body of the community must, by resolution, have designated one or more areas within the community as a redevelopment area or areas. Each such resolution shall include a legal description of the boundaries of the area or areas designated as a redevelopment area. Before passing such a resolution the legislative body shall give notice of the time and place of a public hearing or hearings with reference thereto. Such notice shall be published not less than once a week for four successive weeks prior to the hearing in a newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in the community, or if no such newspaper is printed and published in the community, then in a newspaper selected by the legislative body. Copies of such notice shall be mailed to the last known assessee of each parcel of land in such area, at the last known address of such assessee as shown by the records of the assessor of or for the community. At the time set for a hearing the legislative body shall provide an opportunity for all persons or agencies interested to be heard and shall receive and consider communications in writing, with reference thereto. The legislative body may hold the hearing required by this section jointly with the hearing upon a tentative plan for a project area as provided in Section 25.

Any person, group, association or corporation may in writing petition the legislative body to designate one or more areas within the community as redevelopment areas, and may submit with their petition plans showing the proposed redevelopment of such areas or any part or parts thereof.

Article 5. Tentative Plans in Project Areas

SEC. 22. The planning commission may of its own motion, or at the request of the agency, or shall at the direction of the legislative body, or upon the written petition of the owners in fee of a majority of any redevelopment area, excluding that portion thereof in public ownership or dedicated to a public use, select one or more project areas comprising all or a portion of such redevelopment area, and formulate a tentative plan for the redevelopment of each such project area. If the members of the agency have been appointed, the agency shall cooperate with the planning commission in the selection of the project areas and in the formulation of the tentative plan.

SEC. 23. A tentative redevelopment plan need not be detailed, but shall be sufficient if it

(a) Describes the boundaries of the project area,

(b) Contains a general statement of the land uses, layout of principal streets, population densities, and building intensities and standards proposed as the basis for the redevelopment of the project area,

(c) Shows how the purposes of this act would be attained by such redevelopment, and

(d) Shows that the proposed redevelopment conforms to the master or general community plan.

SEC. 24. The tentative plan shall be presented by the commission to the legislative body of the community and shall be accompanied by a report

(a) Setting forth the reasons for its selection as a project area,

(b) Describing the conditions existing in the area, physical, social and economic, and

(c) Including a preliminary financial analysis of the proposed redevelopment together with proposed rent ranges on properties for residential use, for the purpose of indicating the general character of the proposed residential development.

Article 6. Establishment of Project Area and Adoption of Tentative Plan

SEC. 25. Upon presentation to it of a tentative plan for a project area, the legislative body may reject the tentative plan, may refer it back to the planning commission for further study or revision, or may hold a public hearing upon the adoption thereof.

SEC. 26. Notice of such hearing shall be given by publication in at least one issue, not less than 10 days prior to the hearing, of a newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in the community, or if no such newspaper is printed and published in the community, then in a newspaper selected by the legislative body. The legislative body may, but need not, give such additional notice as it deems appropriate.

SEC. 27. At the hearing the legislative body shall consider the report of the planning commission and any recommendations the agency may make, and shall take such other evidence and testimony as may be presented concerning the matters under consideration.

SEC. 28. The legislative body thereafter shall

(a) Determine whether or not the redevelopment of the project area pursuant to this act is in the public interest and would tend to effectuate the purposes and policy of this act;

(b) Approve or reject the tentative plan, or modify the plan and approve or reject it as modified.

SEC. 29. If the legislative body approves a tentative plan for a project area, it shall adopt the plan by resolution, whereupon such area shall be established and given a name and number and referred to as an approved redevelopment project area, and all records in relation to said area shall be consolidated into one file, designated by such name and number, and shall be preserved by the clerk of the legislative body as public records. Such resolution shall include the following:

(a) A legal description of the boundaries of the project area;

(b) A statement of findings, based upon surveys, investigations and reports of public agencies, and any other information showing the extent and character of blight, obsolescence and substandard conditions in the area and the injurious and detrimental effects thereof upon the public health, safety and general welfare;

(c) The tentative plan for the redevelopment of the project area, showing the principal features of the master plan or general community plan as they apply to the project area.

SEC. 30. The legislative body shall transmit to the redevelopment agency of the community a copy of any resolution adopted pursuant to Section 29.

SEC. 31. The legislative body shall file with the county recorder of the county in which the project area is situated a description of the land within the project area and a statement that proceedings for the rehabilitation of said project area have been instituted under this act.

SEC. 32. Upon adoption of a tentative plan for a project area, all subsequent applications for building permits in such area shall be subject to review by the legislative body, and permits for the construction of buildings or for other improvements which may interfere with, retard, or materially increase the cost of the redevelopment of such project area may be withheld by the legislative body.

Article 7. Redevelopment Agencies

SEC. 33. There is hereby created in each community a redevelopment agency to be known as the redevelopment agency of the community.

SEC. 34. The agency of any community shall not transact any business or exercise any powers under this act unless and until the legislative body of the community shall by resolution declare at any time hereafter that there is need for a redevelopment agency to function in such community.

SEC. 35. In any suit, action or proceeding involving the validity or enforcement of, or relating to, any contract, the redevelopment agency shall be conclusively deemed to have become established and authorized to transact business and exercise its powers upon proof of the adoption of a resolution by the legislative body declaring the need for the redevelopment agency to function.

SEC. 36. When the legislative body of a community first adopts a resolution as provided for in Section 34 of this act, the mayor of a city or of a city and county or the chairman of the board of supervisors of a county, with the approval of the legislative body, shall appoint five resident electors of the community as members of the agency. No member of the agency may be an elective officer or an employee of the community, but he may be a member, commissioner or employee of any other agency or authority of, or created for, the community notwithstanding any other provision of law. The powers of each agency shall be vested in the members thereof then in office. Members shall receive their actual and necessary expenses, including traveling expenses and may receive such other compensation as the legislative body may prescribe.

SEC. 37. Three of the members who are first appointed shall be designated to serve for terms of one, two, and three years respectively, from the date of their appointments, and two shall be designated to serve for terms of four years from the date of their appointments. Thereafter, members shall be appointed as aforesaid for a term of office of four years, except that all vacancies occurring during a term shall be filled for the unexpired term. A member shall hold office until his successor has been appointed and has qualified.

The appointing officer shall designate which of the members of the agency appointed shall be the first chairman, but when the office of the chairman of the agency becomes vacant thereafter, the agency shall elect a chairman from among its members. The term of office as chairman of the agency, unless otherwise prescribed by the legislative body of the community, shall be for the calendar year, or for that portion thereof remaining after each such chairman is designated or elected.

SEC. 38. For inefficiency or neglect of duty or misconduct in office, a member of an agency may be removed by the legislative body of the community, but the member may be removed only after he shall have been given a copy of the charges at least 10 days prior to a public hearing thereon and has had an opportunity to be heard in person or by counsel.

SEC. 39. No officer or employee of the community or of the agency who in the course of his duties is required to participate in the formulation of plans or policies for the redevelopment of a project area, or to approve such plans or policies, shall acquire any interest in any property included within a project area within its jurisdiction. If any such officer or employee owns or has any financial interest, direct or indirect, in any property included within such a project area he shall immediately disclose, in writing, such interest to the legislative body of the community and such disclosure shall be entered in the minutes of the agency and of the legislative body. Failure to so disclose such interest shall constitute misconduct in office. No agency shall acquire from any of its members or officers any property, or interest therein, except through eminent domain proceedings.

SEC. 40. When the agency created for any community becomes authorized to transact business and exercise its powers, the legislative body of the community may at that time, and from time to time thereafter, make an estimate of the amount of money required for the purposes of the agency and may appropriate such amounts to the agency as it deems necessary.

SEC. 41. Each agency transacting any business and exercising any powers shall annually submit to the legislative body of the community a budget of its estimated expenditures and receipts during the following fiscal year. Such budget shall be subject to such changes as the legislative body may prescribe, and its preparation and adoption, and the adoption of any changes therein, shall be subject to the same rules which are applicable to other agencies and departments of the community which are subject to budgetary control.

SEC. 42. Each such agency shall file with the legislative body a report of its transactions at monthly, quarterly, or annual intervals as the legislative body may prescribe.

SEC. 43. At any time after two years after adopting a resolution declaring that there is need for an agency to function in a community, the legislative body thereof, if such agency shall not theretofore have redeveloped or acquired land for, or commenced the redevelopment of, a project, or entered into any contracts for redevelopment, may by resolution declare that there is no further need for such agency in the community, and such agency shall thereupon be dissolved and the offices of the members thereof vacated.

Article 8. Powers of Redevelopment Agency

SEC. 44. Each redevelopment agency shall constitute a public body, corporate and politic, exercising public and essential governmental functions, and shall have all powers necessary or convenient to carry out and effectuate the purposes and provisions of this act, including the following powers in addition to the others herein granted:

(a) To sue and be sued; to have a seal; to make and execute contracts and other instruments necessary or convenient to the exercise of its powers.

(b) To make, and from time to time amend and repeal by-laws, rules and regulations not inconsistent with this act to carry into effect the powers and purposes hereof.

(c) To select and appoint such officers, agents, counsel and employees, permanent and temporary, as it may require, and determine their qualifications, duties and compensation, subject, nevertheless, to the provisions of Section 42.

(d) To purchase, lease, obtain option upon, acquire by gift, grant, bequest, devise or otherwise, any real or personal property, or any interest therein, together with any improvements thereon; to acquire by the exercise of the power of eminent domain any real property; to clear any and all buildings, structures or other improvements from any real property so acquired; to sell, lease, exchange, subdivide, transfer, assign, pledge, encumber or dispose of any real or personal property or any interest therein; to insure or provide for the insurance of any real or personal property or operations of the agency against risks or hazards; and to rent, maintain, manage, operate, repair, and clear, such real property. Any such lease or sale may be made without public bidding but only after a public hearing by the agency upon the proposed lease or sale and the provisions thereof.

(e) To develop as a building site or sites any real property owned or acquired by it, and in this connection to cause streets and highways to be laid out and graded, and pavements or other road surfacing, sidewalks and curbs, and public utilities of every kind to be constructed and installed.

(f) To prepare from time to time plans for the improvement and rehabilitation of blighted areas.

(g) To invest any funds held in reserves or sinking funds or any funds not required for immediate disbursement, in property or securities in which savings banks may legally invest funds subject to their control; to purchase its bonds at a price not more than the principal amount thereof and accrued interest, all bonds so purchased to be canceled.

(h) To obligate lessees or purchasers of land acquired in a redevelopment project: (1) to use such land for the purpose designated in the redevelopment plans; (2) to begin the building of specified improvements within a period of time which the agency fixes as reasonable; and (3) to comply with such other conditions as in the opinion of the redevelopment agency are necessary to carry out the purposes of this act. The agency, by provision in the contract, may make any of the purchaser's obligations covenants or conditions running with the land, whose breach shall cause the fee to revert to the agency.

(i) To exercise all or any part or combination of the powers herein granted.

(j) Nothing herein contained shall authorize such redevelopment agency to construct any of the buildings for residential or other use contemplated by the redevelopment plan.

Article 9. Cooperation in Undertaking Community Redevelopment Projects

SEC. 45. For the purpose of aiding and cooperating in the planning, undertaking, construction or operation of redevelopment projects located within the area in which it is authorized to act, any State public body may upon such terms, with or without consideration, as it may determine:

(a) Dedicate, sell, convey or lease any of its property to a redevelopment agency;

(b) Cause parks, playgrounds, recreational, community, educational, water, sewer or drainage facilities, or any other works which it is otherwise empowered to undertake, to be furnished adjacent to or in connection with redevelopment projects;

(c) Furnish, dedicate, close, pave, install, grade, regrade, plan or replan streets, roads, roadways, alleys, sidewalks or other places which it is otherwise empowered to undertake;

(d) Plan or replan, zone or rezone any part of such area; make any lawfully authorized exceptions from building regulations and ordinances;

(e) Lend or donate money to the agency, and to make commitments for such loans or donations;

(f) Enter into agreements (which may extend over any period, notwithstanding any provision or rule of law to the contrary) with the Federal government respecting action to be taken by such State public body pursuant to any of the powers granted by this act;

(g) Purchase or legally invest in any of the bonds of an agency and exercise all of the rights of any holder of such bonds; and

(h) Do any and all things, not prohibited by law necessary or convenient to aid and cooperate in the planning, undertaking, construction, or operation of such redevelopment projects.

In connection with any public improvements made by a State public body in exercising the powers herein granted, such State public body may incur the entire expense thereof. Any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding, any sale, conveyance, lease or agreement provided for in this section may be made by a State public body without appraisal, public notice, advertisement or public bidding, pursuant to a resolution adopted by such body.

Article 9.5. Redevelopment Revolving Fund

SEC. 45.5. The legislative body of any community, at any time after it has adopted a resolution declaring that there is need for an agency to function in the community, may establish a Redevelopment Revolving Fund. For the purpose of raising moneys to be deposited in such fund, the community may issue and sell its general obligation bonds. Any general obligation bonds to be issued by any community pursuant to the provisions of this section shall be authorized and issued in the manner and within the limitations, except as herein otherwise provided, prescribed by the laws of this State or the charter of the community for the issuance and authorization of bonds thereof for public purposes generally. Irrespective of any limitation, by general or special law, as to the amount of bonds which may be issued, a community may issue bonds, for the purposes defined by this section, in excess of such limitation, in such amount as may be authorized by an ordinance submitted to and approved by the voters of such community at any general or special election. The legislative body may also deposit in the fund moneys from general or special funds of the community available for this purpose. All moneys received by the agency from the sale or lease of property acquired with moneys from the Redevelopment Revolving Fund shall be redeposited in the fund.

SEC. 45.6. Any money in the Redevelopment Revolving Fund may be expended from time to time, upon resolution of the legislative body, for the acquisition of real property in any project area or for the clearance and preparation of any project area for redevelopment.

SEC. 45.7. No property acquired in whole or in part with moneys from the Redevelopment Revolving Fund shall be sold at a price which will return to the Redevelopment Revolving Fund less than ninety per cent (90%) of that part of the cost of such property paid from such fund, except by permission of the voters of the community, as indicated by a majority of the votes cast on the proposition at any general or special election. If property acquired with moneys from the Redevelopment Revolving Fund is leased by the agency, then the legislative body may accept obligations of the agency to the fund, in lieu of cash repayment.

Article 10. Redevelopment Plans

SEC. 46. Each agency shall prepare or cause to be prepared, or adopt, a redevelopment plan or plans for each project area referred to it pursuant to this act and for that purpose may hold hearings and conduct examinations, investigations, and other preliminary negotiations.

SEC. 47. Every redevelopment plan shall provide for participation in the redevelopment of property in the project area by the owners of any or all of such property if the owners shall agree to participate in such redevelopment in conformity with the redevelopment plan for the area formulated by the agency. This provision does not prohibit such owners from submitting an alternative plan as provided in this act.

SEC. 48. Every redevelopment plan which contemplates participation in the proposed redevelopment by an owner or owners of property in the area, shall contain alternative provisions for redevelopment of such property if the owner or owners shall fail to participate in such redevelopment as agreed.

SEC. 49. A redevelopment plan for a project area shall be based upon the approved tentative plan and shall conform to the master or general community plan insofar as the latter applies to the project area. The agency shall consult with the planning commission of the community in formulating redevelopment plans and whenever a redevelopment plan is submitted to a legislative body the planning commission shall report to the legislative body within 30 days on the redevelopment plan and its conformity to the master or general plan of the community.

SEC. 50. Every redevelopment plan shall describe the proposed method of financing the redevelopment of the project area in sufficient detail that the legislative body may determine the economic feasibility of the plan.

SEC. 51. Every redevelopment plan shall contain provisions showing the amount of open space to be provided, street layout, limitations on type, size, height, number and proposed use of buildings, number of dwelling units, the property to be devoted to public purposes, and the nature of such purposes, and such other covenants, conditions and restrictions as the legislative body may prescribe.

SEC. 52. A redevelopment plan may provide for the acquisition by gift, purchase, lease, or condemnation of all or any portion of the real property in the project area by the agency.

SEC. 53. A redevelopment plan shall provide for the lease or sale by the agency of real property, except property conveyed to a public agency or for a public use, acquired by it to private persons, firms, or corporations or to any public or private agency, but any such lease or sale shall be conditioned on the redevelopment and use of the property in conformity with the redevelopment plan.

SEC. 54. A redevelopment plan may provide for the issuance of bonds by the agency and the expenditure of the proceeds from the sale thereof in carrying out the redevelopment plan.

SEC. 55. Upon the formulation or adoption of a redevelopment plan the agency shall submit it to the legislative body.

Article 11. Adoption of Redevelopment Plan

SEC. 56. Upon submission to it of a redevelopment plan or plans the legislative body shall set a time and fix a place for a public hearing on the adoption of such a plan. The time of hearing shall be not more than 30 days after receiving the plan from the agency. Notice of said hearing shall be given by publication in at least one issue of a newspaper of general circulation, printed and published in the community, or if no such newspaper is printed and published in the community, then in a newspaper selected by the legislative body, which notice shall be published not less than 10 days prior to the hearing.

SEC. 57. At any time prior to the time set for hearing on the adoption of a redevelopment plan by the legislative body, any person, firm, association or corporation or any public or private agency qualified so to do may present to the legislative body an alternative redevelopment plan for the project area.

SEC. 58. Any alternative redevelopment plan shall be referred to the planning commission of the community which shall report within 30 days on such plan and its conformity to the master or general plan of the community. The hearing on a redevelopment plan submitted by the agency may be postponed or continued from time to time in order to allow time for the planning commission to report on any alternative plan presented to the legislative body, but no such postponement or continuation shall aggregate more than 30 days.

SEC. 59. At the hearing the legislative body shall consider the redevelopment plan or plans submitted by the agency and any alternative plan submitted in accordance with this act and all evidence and testimony for or against the adoption of said plan or plans.

SEC. 60. On the question of the adoption of any redevelopment plan the legislative body shall determine whether or not the plan if carried out would redevelop the area in conformity with this act and in the interests of the public peace, health, safety, and welfare.

SEC. 61. The legislative body shall also consider whether or not the adoption and carrying out of the redevelopment plan is economically sound and feasible and in that connection shall consider whether or not the public benefits to be derived from carrying out the plan would be commensurate with the expenditure of public funds in conformity to the plan.

SEC. 62. If alternative plans are submitted, the legislative body shall give preference to that plan which it deems will best redevelop the project area in conformity with the purposes and policy of this act and the master or general plan for the community and which requires the least interference with the continued enjoyment of existing property rights consistent with the purposes of this act.

SEC. 63. If the legislative body determines that the redevelopment plan conforms to the master or comprehensive plan of the community, that such plan is economically sound and feasible, and that the carrying out of the plan would promote the public peace, health, safety and welfare of the community and would effectuate the purposes and policy of this act, the legislative body may adopt by resolution the plan as the official redevelopment plan for the project area.

SEC. 64. If the plan provides for the expenditure of any money by the community the legislative body shall provide for such expenditure at the time of or in connection with the approval of the plan.

SEC. 65. If the plan provides for the opening, closing, widening, or changing the grade of any streets or alleys or any other modification of the street layout in the project area, the legislative body shall declare its intention to institute proceedings therefor at the time of or in connection with the adoption of the plan.

SEC. 66. If the plan provides for the condemnation of any real property, the legislative body shall not adopt the plan unless it contains adequate provisions for payment for property so acquired as provided by law.

SEC. 67. If the plan provides for the issuance of bonds or other obligations of the agency, the legislative body shall not approve the plan unless it contains adequate provision for the payment of the principal and interest on such bonds as the same may become due and payable.

SEC. 68. If the plan provides for the displacement, whether temporary or permanent, of any occupants of housing facilities in the project area, the legislative body shall not approve the plan, except upon the finding that adequate permanent housing facilities are or will be made available in the community for such displaced occupants at rents comparable to those obtaining at the time of their displacement.

The legislative body shall further be satisfied that such permanent housing facilities shall, in any event, be made available within three years from the time such occupants will be displaced; and that pending the development of such permanent housing facilities, there will be available to such displaced occupants adequate temporary housing facilities at rents comparable to those obtaining generally at the time of their displacement.

If persons of low income (as defined in the Housing Authorities Law) are to be displaced, the legislative body shall, prior to its approval of the redevelopment plan, obtain and consider the recommendations of the Housing Authority, if any, authorized to transact business in the community, with respect to the availability and provision of adequate housing for such persons of low income.

SEC. 69. No plan shall be approved unless it contains adequate safeguards that the work of redevelopment will be carried out in accordance with the plan and provides for the retention of controls and the establishment of any restrictions or covenants for such periods of time and under such conditions as in the judgment of the legislative body are necessary to effectuate the purposes of this act, which shall run with land sold or leased for private use. The establishment of such controls is hereby declared to constitute a public purpose under the provisions of this act.

SEC. 70. The adoption of a redevelopment plan by a legislative body shall be by resolution. Such resolution shall

(a) Contain a legal description of the boundaries of the project area covered by the redevelopment plan.

(b) Set forth the purposes and intent of the legislative body with respect to the project area.

(c) Refer specifically to the determinations required in other sections of this article.

(d) Contain by reference to maps, reports, and other information the full details of the approved plan, and

(e) Designate the approved plan as the official redevelopment plan of the project area.

Upon the filing of such resolution with the clerk or other appropriate officer of the legislative body the responsibility for the carrying out of the plan shall be vested in the agency.

SEC. 71. The legislative body may, in its discretion, require that the agency, before entering into any contracts for the execution of the redevelopment plan or any portion thereof, shall have such contracts approved by the legislative body.

SEC. 72. If the redevelopment plan adopted provides for participation in the redevelopment of property in the area by an owner or owners of such property, and if for a period of 30 days after the adoption of such plan, any such owner fails or refuses to enter into a binding agreement to carry out such participation in the redevelopment in accordance with such plan, the applicable alternative provisions of the redevelopment plan, provided for in Section 48 of this act shall become effective as the official redevelopment plan of the project area. The legislative body may, at its discretion, extend said 30 day period by not more than 60 days.

SEC. 73. After the adoption of the redevelopment plan and after the expiration of the period provided for in Section 72 of this act, further proceeding with reference to redevelopment of the project area shall be stayed for a period of 30 days. The time for the commencement of actions to contest the validity of the proceedings prescribed by the foregoing provisions of this act shall be barred upon the expiration of said period of 30 days, and no action thereafter commenced shall raise any question concerning the validity of the proceedings provided for in the foregoing provisions of this act, and in all actions commenced after the expiration of said period of 30 days, except as to matters affecting jurisdiction, the validity of the proceedings prescribed by the foregoing provisions of this act shall be conclusively presumed.

Upon the expiration of said 30-day stay, the agency shall have the authority to execute such plan.

Article 12. Eminent Domain Proceedings

SEC. 74. The agency shall have the right to acquire all or any part of the real property within the project area by the exercise of the power of eminent domain in accordance with the provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and other applicable provisions of law.

SEC. 75. Property already devoted to a public use may be acquired by the agency by the exercise of the power of eminent domain, except that no property of a State public body may be acquired without its consent.

SEC. 76. In any proceeding in eminent domain the approval of the legislative body of the redevelopment plan under which the agency is proceeding is conclusive evidence of the public convenience and necessity of the acquisition, that the purpose is a public purpose, and that the use for which the property is to be acquired is a public use.

SEC. 77. A copy of the resolution of the legislative body approving the redevelopment plan, certified by the clerk of the legislative body or other custodian of such resolution, shall be sufficient evidence in any proceedings of the adoption of the resolution.

Article 13. Bonds of the Agency

SEC. 78. An agency shall have power to issue bonds from time to time in its discretion, for any of its corporate purposes. An agency shall also have power to issue refunding bonds for the purpose of paying or retiring bonds previously issued by it. An agency may issue such types of bonds as it may determine, including bonds on which the principal and interest are payable: (a) exclusively from the income and revenues of the redevelopment projects financed with the proceeds of such bonds, or with such proceeds together with financial assistance from the State or Federal governments in aid of such project; (b) exclusively from the income and revenues of certain designated redevelopment projects whether or not they were financed in whole or in part with the proceeds of such bonds; (c) from its revenues generally; (d) from any contributions or other financial assistance from the State or Federal governments; or (e) by any combination of these methods. Any of such bonds may be additionally secured by a pledge of any revenues or a mortgage of any redevelopment project, projects or other property of the agency.

Neither the members of an agency nor any person executing the bonds shall be liable personally on the bonds by reason of the issuance thereof. The bonds and other obligations of any agency (and such bonds and obligations shall so state on their face) shall not be a debt of the community, the State or any political subdivision thereof and neither the community, nor the State or any political subdivision thereof shall be liable thereon, nor in any event shall such bonds or obligations be payable out of any funds or properties other than those of said agency. The bonds shall not constitute an indebtedness within the meaning of any constitutional or statutory debt limitation or restriction.

SEC. 78.5. For the purposes of this act, no agency shall sell, offer for sale, negotiate for the sale of, or take subscriptions for any bonds of its own issue, to, with or from the public, until it has first applied for and secured from the Commissioner of Corporations a permit authorizing it so to do.

The application shall be made and the permit issued in accordance with reasonable regulations therefor which the commissioner is hereby authorized to adopt and amend from time to time. The commissioner shall issue the permit if he finds that the project is financially sound and that the sale of the bonds would not be unfair, unjust or inequitable to the purchasers thereof. The provisions of the Corporate Securities Act, to the extent not inconsistent herewith, are incorporated herein, in so far as relates to applications for permits and the issuance of permits as required by the provisions of this section.

SEC. 79. Bonds of an agency shall be authorized by its resolution and may be issued in one or more series and shall bear such date or dates, mature at such time or times, bear interest at such rate or rates, not exceeding four and one-half per cent ( $4\frac{1}{2}\%$ ) per annum, be in such denomination or denominations, be in such form, either coupon or registered, carry such conversion or registration privileges, have such rank or priority, be executed in such manner, be payable in such medium of payment, at such place or places, and be subject to such terms of redemption (with or without premium) as such resolution, its trust indenture or mortgage may provide.

The bonds may be sold at not less than par, at public sale held after notice published once at least five days prior to such sale in a newspaper of general circulation published in the community, or, if no such newspaper be published in the community, then in a newspaper of general circulation published in the county; provided, however, that such bonds may be sold at not less than par to the Federal Government at private sale without any advertisement.

In case any of the members or officers of the agency whose signatures appear on any bonds or coupons shall cease to be such members or officers before the delivery of such bonds, such signatures shall, nevertheless, be valid and sufficient for all purposes, the same as if they had remained in office until such delivery. Any provision of any law to the contrary notwithstanding, any bonds issued pursuant to this act shall be fully negotiable.

In any suit, action or proceedings involving the validity or enforceability of any bonds of an agency or the security thereof, any such bond reciting in substance that it has been issued by the agency to aid in financing a redevelopment project shall be conclusively deemed to have been issued for a redevelopment project of such character and said project shall be conclusively deemed to have been planned, located and constructed in accordance with the purposes and provisions of this act.

SEC. 80. In connection with the issuance of bonds, an agency, in addition to its other powers, shall have power:

(a) To pledge all or any part of its gross or net rents, fees, or revenues to which its right then exists or may thereafter come into existence.

(b) To mortgage all or any part of its real or personal property, then owned or thereafter acquired.

(c) To covenant against pledging all or any part of its rents, fees and revenues, or against mortgaging all or any part of its real or personal property, to which its right or title then exists or may thereafter come into existence or against permitting or suffering any lien on such revenues or property; to covenant with respect to limitations on its right to sell, lease or otherwise dispose of any redevelopment project or any part thereof; and to covenant as to what other, or additional debts or obligations may be incurred by it.

(d) To covenant as to the bonds to be issued and as to the issuance of such bonds in escrow or otherwise, and as to the use and disposition of the proceeds thereof; to provide for the replacement of lost, destroyed or mutilated bonds, to covenant against extending the time for the payment of its bonds or interest thereon; and to redeem the bonds, and to covenant for their redemption and to provide the terms and conditions thereof.

(e) To covenant as to the consideration or rents and fees to be charged in the sale or lease of a redevelopment project or projects, the amount to be raised each year or other period of time by rents, fees and other revenues, and as to the use and disposition to be made thereof; to create or to authorize the creation of special funds for moneys held for development or other costs, debt service, reserves, or other purposes, and to covenant as to the use and disposition of the moneys held in such funds.

(f) To prescribe the procedure, if any, by which the terms of any contract with bondholders may be amended or abrogated, the amount of bonds the holders of which must consent thereto and the manner in which such consent may be given.

(g) To covenant as to the use of any or all of its real or personal property; and to covenant as to the maintenance of its real and personal property, the replacement thereof, the insurance to be carried thereon and the use and disposition of insurance moneys.

(h) To covenant as to the rights, liabilities, powers and duties arising upon the breach by it of any covenant, condition or obligation; and to covenant and prescribe as to events of default and terms and conditions upon which any or all of its bonds or obligations shall become or may be declared due before maturity, and as to the terms and conditions upon which such declaration and its consequences may be waived.

(i) To vest in a trustee or trustees or the holders of bonds or any proportion of them the right to enforce the payment of the bonds or any covenants securing or relating to the bonds; to vest in a trustee or trustees the right, in the event of a default by said agency, to take possession of any redevelopment project or part thereof, and to collect the rents and revenues arising therefrom and to dispose of such moneys in accordance with the agreement of the agency with said trustee; to provide for the powers and duties of a trustee or trustees and to limit the liabilities thereof; and to provide the terms and conditions upon which the trustee or trustees or the holders of bonds or any proportion of them may enforce any covenant or rights securing or relating to the bonds.

(j) To exercise all or any part of combination of the powers herein granted; to make covenants other than and in addition to the covenants herein expressly authorized, of like or different character; to make such covenants and to do any and all such acts and things as may be necessary or convenient or desirable in order to secure its bonds, or, in the discretion of said agency, except as otherwise provided in this act as will tend to make the bonds more marketable notwithstanding that such covenants, acts, or things may not be enumerated herein.

SEC. 81. An obligee of an agency shall have the right in addition to all other rights which may be conferred on such obligee, subject only to any contractual restrictions binding upon such obligee:

(a) By mandamus, suit, action or proceeding at law or in equity to compel said agency and the members, officers, agents or employees thereof to perform each and every term, provision, and covenant contained in any contract of said agency with or for the benefit of such obligee, and to require the carrying out of any or all such covenants and agreements of said agency and the fulfillment of all duties imposed upon said agency by this act.

(b) By suit, action or proceeding in equity, to enjoin any acts or things which may be unlawful, or the violation of any of the rights of such obligee of said agency.

SEC. 82. An agency shall have power by its resolution, trust indenture, mortgage, lease or other contract to confer upon any obligee holding or representing a specified amount in bonds, the right (in addition to all rights that may otherwise be conferred), upon the happening of an event or default as defined in such resolution or instrument, by suit, action or proceeding in any court of competent jurisdiction:

(a) To cause possession of any redevelopment project or any part thereof to be surrendered to any such obligee.

(b) To obtain the appointment of a receiver of any redevelopment project of said agency or any part thereof and of the rents and profits therefrom. If such receiver be appointed, he may enter and take possession of such redevelopment project or any part thereof and operate and maintain same, and collect and receive all fees, rents, revenues, or other charges thereafter arising therefrom, and shall keep such moneys in separate account or accounts and apply the same in accordance with the obligations of said agency as the court shall direct.

(c) To require said agency and the members and employees thereof to account as if it and they were the trustees of an express trust.

SEC. 83. The bonds of an agency are declared to be issued for an essential public and governmental purpose, and together with interest thereon and income therefrom shall be exempt from all taxes.

SEC. 84. Notwithstanding any restrictions on investments contained in any laws of this State, the State and all public officers, municipal corporations, political subdivisions and public bodies, all banks, bankers, trust companies, savings banks and institutions, building and loan associations, savings and loan associations, investment companies, and other persons carrying on a banking business, all insurance companies, insurance associations and other persons carrying on an insurance business and all executors, administrators, guardians, trustees and other fiduciaries may legally invest any sinking funds, moneys or other funds belonging to them or within their control in any bonds or other obligations issued by an agency, as herein defined, and such bonds and other obligations shall be authorized security for all public deposits; it being one of the purposes of this act to authorize any persons, firms, corporations, associations, political subdivisions, bodies and officers, public or private, to use any funds owned or controlled by them, including (but not limited to) sinking, insurance, investment, retirement, compensation, pension and trust funds, and funds held on deposit, for the purchase of any such bonds or other obligations; provided, however, that nothing contained in this act shall be construed as relieving any person, firm, or corporation from any duty of exercising reasonable care in selecting securities.

Article 14. Exemption from Execution

SEC. 85. All real property of an agency shall be exempt from levy and sale by virtue of an execution, and no execution or other judicial process shall issue against the same nor shall any judgment against an agency be a charge or lien upon its real property; provided, however, that the provisions of this section shall not apply to or limit the right of obligees to foreclose or otherwise enforce any mortgage of an agency or the right of obligees to pursue any remedies for the enforcement of any pledge or lien given by an agency on its rents, fees, or revenues.

Article 15. Aid from Federal Government

SEC. 86. In addition to the powers conferred upon an agency by other provisions of this act, an agency is empowered to borrow money or accept financial or other assistance from the Federal or State Governments for or in aid of any redevelopment project within its area of operation, and to such ends comply with any conditions attached thereto.

Article 16. Payment of Prevailing Wages

SEC. 87. Any work of grading, clearing, demolition or construction, of a value of more than one thousand five hundred dollars ($1,500) undertaken by the agency shall be done by contract, subject to the same provisions of law relating thereto and to the letting thereof, which are applicable to similar contracts of the community. Before awarding any contract for such work to be done in a project, or otherwise undertaking any work therein, the agency shall ascertain the general prevailing rate of per diem wages in the locality in which the work is to be performed, for each craft or type of workman needed to execute the contract or work, and shall specify in the call for bids for the contract and in the contract itself what the general prevailing rate of per diem wages and the general prevailing rate for regular holiday and overtime work in the locality, for each craft or type of workman needed to execute the contract or work. The contractor to whom the contract is awarded and any subcontractor under him shall pay not less than the specified prevailing rate of wages to all workmen employed in the execution of the contract. The contractor shall as a penalty to the agency who awarded the contract forfeit ten dollars ($10) for each calendar day or portion thereof for each workman paid less than the stipulated prevailing rates for any public work done under the contract by him or by any subcontractor under him and the agency awarding the contract shall cause to be inserted in the contract a stipulation to this effect. Each contractor and subcontractor shall keep an accurate record showing the name, occupation and the actual per diem wages paid to each workman employed by him in connection with the work. The record shall be kept open at all reasonable hours to the inspection of the agency awarding the contract.

Article 17. Cooperation Between Communities

SEC. 88. The territorial jurisdiction of the agency of a county is the unincorporated territory in the county, and that of a city or city and county is the territory within its limits.

SEC. 89. Two or more communities may jointly exercise the powers granted under this act and in such case the planning commissions, legislative bodies, and agencies may hold joint hearings and meetings, or the legislative bodies of the communities acting separately may each designate the agency of either community to act as the agency of all of the communities interested. In this event the agency shall cooperate with the planning commission of each community in formulating redevelopment plans, and whenever a redevelopment plan is submitted to the legislative body the planning commission shall report to the legislative body of its community within 30 days on the redevelopment plan and its conformity to the master or general plan of the community.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

SACRAMENTO 14, May 7, 1945

To the Honorable Members of the Senate, State of California, Sacramento, California,

GREETINGS: I am permitting Senate Bill 688 to become law without my signature. I am of the opinion that a bill carrying into effect more nearly the desires of the people, as expressed in their vote on the Veterans Bond Act of 1943, could be passed.

The Veterans Welfare Board and its general manager are of the opinion that it is not necessary to charge veterans as much as 4 per cent interest under the bond issue. The Board presented its views to committees in behalf of a lower rate of interest and I am of the opinion its views are sound. It is my belief we have no right to charge the veterans more than is necessary to service the program and to have a reasonable margin of safety for loss. The State has had 23 years of experience in this field and I am assured by those who have been in charge of the program that these things can be accomplished at a rate of interest less than four per cent.

However, in view of the fact that Senate Bill 688 does afford some relief from the existing five per cent interest rate and offers some flexibility in the future, I am not vetoing it.

Respectfully submitted.

EARL WARREN, Governor

Senate Bill No. 608—An act making an appropriation to the counties of this State for the postwar construction of public highways and streets and prescribing the procedure for expenditure thereof.

Consideration of Committee Amendments

The following amendments were proposed by the Committee on Governmental Efficiency:

Amendment No. 1

In line 1 of the title of the printed bill, strike out "making an appropriation to the counties of this State"; and strike out lines 2 and 3 of the title, and insert "relating to a highway construction and improvement program, county and State, including cooperation with the Federal Government in furtherance of the purposes of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944 and the expenditure of Federal aid moneys, and making an appropriation for the purposes of this act."

Amendment No. 2

On page 1, line 1, of said bill, strike out "The sum of thirty million dollars (\$30,000,000)", and insert "Declaration of Policy. The Congress of the United States has enacted the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944 in which the sum of one hundred fifty million dollars (\$150,000,000) has been authorized to be appropriated for projects on the principal secondary and feeder roads, including farm to market roads, rural free delivery mail and public school bus routes in the various States. By apportionment of the authorization made pursuant to said Federal act, it is anticipated that the sum of approximately fifteen million dollars (\$15,000,000) will be made available for expenditure on such roads in California in the three year period immediately following termination of the war on a pro rata share basis as provided in the Federal-Aid Highway Act. Said apportionment to California is to be made available for expenditure on either State highways or county highways which qualify under the Federal law. County highways throughout the State have deteriorated to such an extent as to be a matter of primary State concern. It is, therefore, determined by the Legislature that, insofar as permissible under Federal law, rules and regulations, at least eighty-seven and one-half per cent ( $87\frac{1}{2}\%$ ) of the money apportioned to California for such projects as are mentioned in subdivision (b) of Section 3 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944 should be expended for the improvement of the county highways in this State. Inasmuch as these county highways are a matter of State concern and many of the counties are financially unable to furnish their pro rata share of funds to be used with the Federal Funds as required by Federal law, funds should be provided from State sources therefor.

SEC. 2. As used in this act, "county highway" means county highway as defined by Section 25 of the Streets and Highways Code, and county highways as so defined are declared to be "secondary and feeder roads" as that term is defined in the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944.

As used in this act, "construction" means construction as defined by the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944.

SEC. 3. The provisions of this act or any action taken pursuant to it (including construction on any county highway) shall not be deemed to change the status of any county highway into that of a State Highway notwithstanding any other provision of law.

SEC. 4. (a) It is in the interest of the State of California and of the counties of the State that at least eighty-seven and one-half per cent ( $87\frac{1}{2}\%$ ) of the moneys available for construction of highways in this State pursuant to the provisions of subdivision (b) of Section 3 of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944 be apportioned for expenditure among the counties of this State in the manner and in accordance with the formula prescribed in subdivision (b) of Section 4 of said Federal act for apportionment among the States.

(b) The Department of Public Works and the boards of supervisors of the several counties in performing their correlative and conqual powers and duties in selecting roads in cooperation with the Commissioner of Public Roads of the United States as indicated in the first proviso of subdivision (b) of Section 3 of said Federal act, shall be governed by paragraph (a) of this section to the fullest extent possible and shall not deviate therefrom except to the extent required by applicable Federal laws, rules, or regulations.

(c) The Department of Public Works shall in behalf of the State and the counties recommend such projects and take such other action within the powers conferred on it by law as to comply with paragraph (a) of this section as fully as applicable Federal laws, rules, or regulations permit.

SEC. 5. Out of any moneys in the State Treasury not otherwise appropriated, there is hereby appropriated the sum of twelve million dollars ($12,000,000), which sum shall be transferred by the State Controller on the effective date of this act to the State Highway Fund and shall be expended by the Department of Public Works to pay the State's pro rata share for construction of county highways as provided in this act. The said sum of twelve million dollars ($12,000,000) hereby appropriated shall be apportioned for expenditure in the counties of the State on the same formula as provided in subdivision (b) of Section 4 of said Federal act for apportionment of said Federal moneys among the several States. None of the appropriation hereby made shall be expended on any highway, street, or road which is not a county highway, except as provided in Section 9.

SEC. 6. The Department of Public Works shall notify each county on the effective date of this act of the amount of money to be available for expenditure in said county from said Federal apportionment and of the amount of money available from the appropriation hereby made to pay the State's pro rata share in conjunction with the Federal aid in the county. Each county shall within six months after such notice submit to the department a description of the projects on county highways in said county which are approved by the county and are eligible for such Federal aid under said Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944.

The boards of supervisors of the several counties and the department are authorized and directed to enter into cooperative agreements and to do all other things necessary and proper in their respective jurisdictions to secure such Federal aid for construction of county highways in accordance with the intent of this act. Any such agreement shall provide that the county will maintain the project when completed as required by Federal law, rules and regulations.

SEC. 7. If any county notifies the department that it refuses to accept the benefits of this act on the terms and conditions specified herein and in the Federal law, rules and regulations, or if any county fails to submit a description of the projects desired by it within the six months period provided in Section 6 or within such further period of time not exceeding an additional six months as may be extended by the department, the amount of the appropriation hereby made available for expenditure in said county shall be apportioned (in the same manner as herein provided for the apportionment of said appropriation of twelve million dollars) for construction of county highways in those counties which have neither so notified the department nor failed to submit such descriptions within the time allowed.

SEC. 8. The appropriation hereby made shall continue indefinitely to be available in the State Highway Fund to be used as provided in this act.

SEC. 9. Any county may by resolution of its board of supervisors request the department to expend all or any portion of the moneys available for expenditure in said county under this act on any State highway in the county, and in that event the department may expend such money on such State highway notwithstanding any other provisions of this act.

SEC. 10. No moneys or funds belonging to the State or under its control are available for expenditure in cooperative highway work under or in furtherance of the provisions of the Federal-Aid Highway Act of 1944 except in accordance with the provisions of this act."

Amendment No. 3

On page 1, of said bill, strike out lines 2 to 20, inclusive; and strike out all of pages 2 and 3.

To the California Senate:

Pursuant to Senate Resolution No. 143, adopted by the California Senate on May 5, 1943, and Senate Resolution No. 22, adopted by the California Senate on January 22, 1945, your Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance submits herewith its report.

Respectfully submitted.

SENATOR JOHN F. SHELLEY, Chairman

SENATOR H. E. DILLINGER

SENATOR HAROLD J. POWERS

ACKNOWLEDGMENT

The Senate Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance of the California Legislature takes this occasion to acknowledge the cooperation and assistance extended by the following governmental agencies during the course of its work:

California Department of Employment,
California Department of Industrial Relations,
California Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission,
California Commission on Interstate Cooperation,
Federal Social Security Board,
Federal War Manpower Commission,
Employment security agencies of the various other States,
Council of State Governments.

The cooperation received from the departments, agencies, and subdivisions of the State of California was, in most instances, far beyond the obligations of statutory or legislative mandate, and is gratefully acknowledged by the committee.

Particular mention should be made however, of the invaluable assistance rendered by the Social Security Board, the War Manpower Commission, and the various employment security agencies of other States (especially those of Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, South Dakota, Vermont, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin, and the District of Columbia).

Without any legal duty and entirely on the voluntary basis of courtesy, these governmental units have responded to many inquiries made by the committee and have furnished important data and reports which have been of material value in our study of the subject of unemployment insurance. Their conduct has indeed been a tribute to Federal-State and interstate cooperation, and the Senate Interim Committee with a deep sense of appreciation recognizes the comity which has been extended in this respect.

Also, to the many private citizens and individuals who have, either through public hearings or by other means, offered factual data, comments, or suggestions relating to employment conditions and unemployment insurance, the committee wishes to express its gratitude.

In addition to the foregoing public hearings, the following conferences were held with the California Employment Stabilization Commission:

Location	Date
814 Mission Street, San Francisco	June 29, 30, July 1, 1943
State Capitol, Sacramento	January 28, 1944
State Capitol, Sacramento	February 25, 1944
State Capitol, Sacramento	December 12, 13, 1944

The members of the entire committee held meetings on each of the foregoing occasions and also on the following dates:

Location	Date
State Capitol, Sacramento	February 24, 25, 1944
State Building, San Francisco	August 18, 19, 1944
State Capitol, Sacramento	January 15, 1945
State Capitol, Sacramento	January 26, 1945

The chairman of the committee has held meetings with various State and Federal agencies in an effort to ascertain an accurate picture of the employment and unemployment conditions in the State. All the information obtained was considered by and discussed with the members of the committee.

A study and analysis of the unemployment insurance law and its operation in this State and the provisions and laws of other States and of the United States have been made. The committee has corresponded with nearly every other State in the Union with reference to unemployment insurance problems and legislation.

The committee has worked closely with the Council of State Governments and the California Commission on Interstate Cooperation in an effort to develop a greater degree of harmony and cooperation among the various States in the administration of the unemployment insurance system. The Interstate Conference of Employment Security Agencies held in California on July 26, 27, 28, 1944, was attended by the representative of the committee and followed with interest.

Various local offices of the Department of Employment throughout the State have been contacted and the claims filed in each office have been analyzed. The problems in administration arising in the local areas have been discussed and suggestions for legislative changes have been received from several field offices. More than 75 different visits were made to the various field offices throughout the State by members of the committee and/or its representative.

The operations of the Department of Employment at Sacramento were carefully observed through frequent visits and regular weekly attendance at the meetings of the Appeals Board. The data and reports made available to the committee by the Department of Employment and the various other State and Federal agencies have been analyzed and studied. At the same time because of the limited information available on several subjects, reports have been compiled and prepared by the committee itself.

It is the hope of your committee that in the term of its existence all of the purposes for which it was created, as set forth in Senate Resolution 143, have been conformed with and that the preliminary report submitted in June, 1944, together with this report may be of assistance in the consideration of legislation relative to the unemployment insurance system of this State.

In order to follow the current trend of employment conditions, and to complete our survey of many unemployment insurance problems in the light of the experience and background acquired by the members of the committee during the past two years, it is submitted that the present interim committee be continued with the same personnel.

PART I

EMPLOYMENT AND UNEMPLOYMENT CONDITIONS IN CALIFORNIA

In the preliminary report submitted by your committee on June 15, 1944, the present and probable postwar employment and unemployment conditions in California were briefly set forth. On the basis of the additional information and studies that have been made available since that time, the following supplementary material is presented.

Present Conditions

California reached its highest wartime civilian employment peak in about the month of August, 1943, with a total of approximately three and one-half million workers employed. The tremendous expansion of one million workers in both total employment and insured employment which occurred between 1940 and 1943 is now beginning to show a pronounced gradual contraction, although the population of the State is apparently continuing to grow. These significant changes may be compared as follows:

CALIFORNIA
POPULATION, LABOR FORCE AND INSURED EMPLOYMENT
	April, 1940	June, 1943	January, 1945
Total population <sup>1</sup> -----	6,907,387	8,200,000	8,650,000
In armed forces -----	39,322	520,000	700,000
Civilian -----	6,868,065	7,680,000	7,950,000
Employed <sup>2</sup> -----	2,482,000	3,464,000	3,387,000
Unemployed -----	423,000	60,000	(Not available) <sup>3</sup>
Insured employment <sup>4</sup> -----	1,336,170	2,302,026	2,100,000

It will be seen from the foregoing tabulation that California's total population (including all civilians and prewar residents now in the armed forces) is about 8,650,000, according to recent estimates, reflecting an increase of more than one and one-half million inhabitants since 1940. While employment has experienced a similar wartime expansion, there has been a shrinkage of about 80,000 in the total number employed in this State since June, 1943. However, far more significant than the recent change in the size of the labor force as a whole are the current changes in its pattern.

Despite the present demand for industrial workers throughout the State, the fact remains that employment in manufacturing has fallen by 154,000 workers between January, 1944, and January, 1945. Since the striking wartime growth of employment in California occurred principally in shipbuilding and aircraft manufacturing, the following

Bureau of Census; population for June, 1943, estimated by staff of State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission; population for January, 1945, estimated by the Interim Committee on basis of current data made available. For a detailed study of population in California and estimates for the postwar period, see "Estimates of Population Growth in California 1940-1950," State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission (June, 1944).

<sup>3</sup> No estimate of the number unemployed for January, 1945, was made available to the committee. However, it has been indicated that this figure is about 20,000 and reflects normal unemployment at any one time which results from labor turnover.

State-wide employment figures, which may now be released, are of particular significance in this respect.

Shipbuilding ---	5,000	305,000	298,000	242,000
Total-----	43,000	633,000	609,000	462,000

The number of women engaged in durable goods manufacturing (which includes aircraft and shipbuilding) has fallen by 41,300 between January, 1944, and January, 1945.<sup>6</sup>

Following the recession in employment which began early in 1944, the reports to the public on employment conditions appeared to be conflicting. For this reason the chairman of your committee arranged a conference with the directors of the various governmental agencies which compile statistical information on employment, and suggested joint meetings from time to time for the purpose of coordinating and analyzing employment and unemployment conditions in the State.<sup>7</sup> Monthly meetings have been held regularly thereafter and it has developed that in order to reconcile the demand for workers on file with the War Manpower Commission with the actual trend of employment recorded by the Department of Industrial Relations and the number of unemployment insurance payments made by the Department of Employment, it is necessary to analyze the type of worker for which there is a demand and the particular area in which the demand exists, as well as to analyze the type of worker now receiving unemployment insurance and the particular area in the State wherein he resides. It has been revealed that the acute demand for labor during the past

California Women in Manufacturing Employment
Year	Number	Per Cent of Total
1941-----	66,400	14.9%
1942-----	110,200	16.2
1943-----	238,000	26.6
1944-----	238,300	28.9

The total number of women employed in California in April, 1940, and June, 1943, appears in the following chart (W-18 November, 1943) published by the Department of Industrial Relations:

Civilian Labor Force of California, April, 1940, and June, 1943

year and at present, is restricted primarily to certain critical areas of the State, and the shortage consists chiefly to heavy manual labor and skilled workmen. The bulk of insurance payments during 1944 was made to women and older men for whom there was little or no demand.<sup>8</sup>

Postwar Conditions

There has been considerable readjustment in the employment conditions of California during the past year with many of the temporary workers (mostly women and older men) already removing themselves from the labor force and others returning to their home State. The immediate future indicates a further shrinkage in certain major industries. Nevertheless, with the termination of the war, a sudden fall in employment may be expected with serious repercussions on the unemployment insurance system of the State.<sup>9</sup>

The estimate of unemployment in California after the war ranging between one-half and one and one-quarter million workers which was presented in the preliminary report still conforms with the findings of the most recent studies. The exact status of employment conditions in California will depend largely on the economic conditions of the Nation as a whole, the extent to which postwar plans are effective, the amount and direction of migration, the number of women, older men and minors who are temporarily in the labor market, and the number of men and women returning from the armed forces. The bulk of this postwar unemployment may be expected among wartime manufacturing workers and among those formerly in Federal Government service.

The State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission, in conjunction with the Department of Industrial Relations and the Department of Employment, has recently made available the following current estimates on postwar employment and unemployment in California.<sup>10</sup>

<sup>8</sup> On the basis of a spot check made of all workers receiving unemployment benefits in three local offices during a specified period in 1944 it was found that in 110 out of 193 cases in which benefits were being paid the claimant was 60 years of age or over.

CALIFORNIA MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY

	Average Number of Wage Earners	Total Annual Wages	Weekly Earnings	Average Hourly Earnings	Hours Per Week
1939-----	276,200	$366,000,000	$27.80	$0.733	37.9

II. Based on moderately low postwar population (estimated 8,400,000).

The estimates by industry groups of postwar employment trends made by the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission appears in Appendix A of this report.

From a realistic consideration of all factual data available and the significant factors affecting employment, the immediate postwar conditions of this State do not appear favorable. California's population and labor force are both expected to be large during the postwar period. At the same time it must be recognized that a substantial decrease of present employment is almost inevitable and that a probable 650,000 returning veterans will be seeking employment after the war.

In the light of these circumstances it is the opinion of your committee that California faces a critical postwar unemployment problem and may expect to have a jobless army of one million workers, unless adequate employment opportunities are made available.

PART II

UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE

CHAPTER I—UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE IN GENERAL

A—Nature and Purpose

Unemployment insurance or unemployment compensation, as it is frequently called, has been defined as a device sponsored by government whereby reserves are accumulated during periods of employment from which compensation is paid to the worker who becomes involuntarily unemployed. It differs from relief in that payments are made as a matter of right, and not directly on a needs basis. This general and narrow description of unemployment insurance is obviously of little significance without setting forth the method and procedure of accumulating the reserves, the conditions on which payments are made therefrom, the amount and duration of payments, the type and number of unemployed workers to whom payments may be made, and the method and procedure followed in making payments.

The purpose of unemployment insurance has been to mitigate some of the evil effects of unemployment, and not as a preventive of or cure for unemployment itself. In providing compensation in part for the wage loss sustained by the individual who becomes temporarily unemployed, the social advantage is reflected in terms of economic security to the worker and his family during short periods of unemployment, greater stability of purchasing power within the State, and a decrease in expenditures (and therefore taxes) for relief by the State.

The public purpose served by unemployment compensation in this country was recognized by the Supreme Court of the United States in the following language:

“We need not labor the point that expenditures for the relief of the unemployed conditioned on recipients of the benefits, is a permissible use of state funds. For the past six years the nation, unhappily, has been placed in a position to learn at first hand the nature and extent of the problem of unemployment, and to appreciate its profound influence upon the public welfare. Detailed accounts of the problem and its social and economic consequences, to be found in public reports of the expenditures of relief funds, and in the studies of many observers, afford a basis for the legislative judgment. It suffices to say that they show that unemployment apparently has become a permanent incident of our industrial system; that it varies, in extent and intensity, with fluctuations in the volume of seasonal businesses and with the business cycle. It is dependent, with special and unpredictable manifestations, upon technological changes and advances in methods of manufacture, upon changing demands for manufactured products—dictated by changes in fashion or the creation of desirable substitutes, and upon the establishment of new sources of competition.”<sup>11</sup>

B—History and Status

The evolution of unemployment insurance relates back to the practice instituted by the Belgian City of Ghent in 1900 of using public money to subsidize out-of-work funds maintained by the labor unions.<sup>12</sup> France in 1906 was the first country to adopt the "Ghent System" on a national basis. Despite the limitations and shortcomings of this voluntary plan based on labor union development, a number of other countries have enacted similar legislation.

Compulsory unemployment insurance, however, was first introduced on a limited basis by Great Britain with the enactment of its Unemployment Insurance Act of 1911.<sup>13</sup> Shortly after World War I, the compulsory system of unemployment insurance developed rapidly and was adopted by various other countries becoming the predominant type of employment security legislation.

Today, unemployment insurance on either a compulsory or voluntary basis is recognized by every progressive country of the world as a part of its general social security legislation. The United States, one of the last modern and developed nations to adopt a national unemployment insurance program, has already acquired some 9 years of experience in the field. It is now beyond question that unemployment insurance is a necessary governmental function—promotive of the public good and general welfare—arising as a concomitant of industrialization under the existing economic system. As of 1931, 18 countries had enacted general unemployment insurance legislation (9 with a compulsory system, 8 with a voluntary system, and 1 with a hybrid system). As of 1943, some 9 additional countries, including the United States and its possessions, had adopted general legislation on the subject.

The status and type of social security legislation in the various countries of the world may be readily observed from the following chart:

<sup>12</sup> "This subsidizing of voluntary unemployment insurance by Ghent was not the first instance of such a public venture. Municipalities in France (in 1896 and 1897), Cologne in Germany (in 1896), and Berne in Switzerland (in 1893) had undertaken such a policy in the nineties. In each case the city set up a voluntary insurance fund rather than utilizing the existing labor union funds." Armstrong "Insuring the Essentials" (1932) page 485.

CHAPTER II—UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE IN THE UNITED STATES

A—General Survey

The Social Security Act signed by President Roosevelt on August 14, 1935, marks the beginning of a nation-wide system of unemployment insurance in the United States, although none of its provisions authorizes or establishes an unemployment insurance program.

Unemployment insurance in the United States is chiefly a matter of State legislation and administration with each of the 48 States, the District of Columbia, and the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii having a separate and distinct law and administrative agency. The first State law was enacted by Wisconsin on January 29, 1932. As of July 1, 1937, all other States had adopted unemployment insurance legislation. Except in the case of Wisconsin, however, all State laws were passed either after or just prior to and in anticipation of the Social Security Act of 1935. In general, the constitutional validity of the State laws and related provisions of the Federal Social Security Act have been sustained by the courts.<sup>14</sup>

In addition to the various State laws the Federal Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act, which is administered entirely by the Federal Government, has covered railroad employment throughout the United States since 1939.<sup>15</sup> Also, under the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 (The G. I. Bill),<sup>16</sup> the payment of unemployment compensation to returning veterans is provided for by Federal law, although payments are made through the various State agencies.

In the main, unemployment insurance in the United States is created and exists by virtue of State law. Federal law, with the aforementioned exceptions, is relegated to encouraging State legislation and rendering assistance to the States. Under such a Federal-State System, the improvement, extension and successful administration of unemployment insurance becomes primarily a responsibility of the individual States.

B—Unemployment Insurance Phase of the Social Security Act

The unemployment insurance features of the Federal Social Security Act are (1) the Federal Unemployment Tax Act (formerly Title IX)<sup>16a</sup> and (2) the provisions in Title III for direct grants of administrative funds to the States.<sup>17</sup>

In considering the two foregoing provisions of the Federal law, it is well to bear in mind that the Social Security Act as enacted contained 11 separate titles designed to encourage and provide a broad nation-wide program of social and economic relief. Basically, all of these measures may be classified under three general categories providing for (1) grants-in-aid to the States for public assistance and public welfare,<sup>18</sup> (2) State unemployment compensation legislation<sup>19</sup> and (3) Federal old age insurance benefits.<sup>20</sup> Although substantial amendments were made to the Social Security Act in 1939, the basic pattern of the program was not altered.

Old age and survivors insurance is the only security program in the Social Security Act which is completely Federal and self-operative without reference to State laws. It is financed through the Federal Insurance Contributions Act, (formerly Title VIII)<sup>20a</sup> imposing a pay roll tax (excise tax) on employers of one or more workers and an equivalent tax (income tax) on the employees. This tax is frequently confused with the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, an entirely different measure which imposes a separate pay roll tax on employers of eight or more but does not tax the employee.

THE FEDERAL UNEMPLOYMENT TAX ACT

Briefly, the Federal Unemployment Tax Act imposes a 3 per cent tax on the pay rolls of all employers having eight or more workers provided the workers are not engaged in certain types of exempt employment. Just as under most Federal revenue measures, all moneys collected under this tax go into the General Treasury from which appropriations are made to defray the cost of Government. This act does not set up a Federal system of unemployment insurance nor provide for the payment of benefits to unemployed individuals. However, any subject employer may deduct up to 90 per cent of this Federal tax liability if he pays a tax pursuant to a State unemployment insurance law which has been approved by the Social Security Board.<sup>21</sup> Thus, of the 3 per cent Federal pay roll tax, 2.7 per cent (that is 90 per cent of 3 per cent) may be offset if contributions are made to a State unemployment fund. Furthermore, under the additional credit provisions, a 2.7 per cent credit may be taken against the Federal tax even though the actual amount paid under the State law is less than 2.7 per cent.<sup>22</sup> Obviously, under these circumstances a State is encouraged to adopt an unemployment insurance law and provide benefits to its unemployed workers, since this may be done without increasing the total tax liability of the employers, and in many instances permitting a tax reduction.

Actually, it is the foregoing tax offset provisions of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act which constitutes the core of the Federal-State System of unemployment insurance in the United States. As a matter of fact, but not of law, any extension of coverage under the Federal pay roll tax will bring about an extension of coverage in the law of every State which does not already have equivalent coverage provisions. Likewise, a change in the tax offset provisions requiring that more specific and definite standards be incorporated in a State unemployment insurance law before it can be approved and certified would produce a change in every State law not already containing such minimum standards. Under the present Federal Unemployment Tax Act, however, the standards necessary for approval of a State unemployment insurance law are extremely general and no attempt is made to encourage the States to adopt specific provisions in their law or provide an adequate and complete unemployment insurance program. The responsibility in this respect rests entirely on the individual States.

The more specific provisions of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act may be summarized as follows:

(1) Coverage Provisions

In general, all employers employing eight or more workers in employment for some portion of a day in each of 20 weeks during a calendar year are subject to the 3 per cent pay roll tax.<sup>23</sup> However, the following type of service is exempt from tax and excluded from the definition of employment under the Act:<sup>24</sup>

1. Agricultural labor.
2. Domestic service.
3. Casual labor.
4. Maritime service.
5. Family employment.
6. Federal Government service.
7. State Government service.
8. Employment for charitable and similar non-profit organizations.
9. Railroad employment.
10. (a) Certain services for organizations exempt from Federal income tax;
(b) Employment for agricultural organizations exempt from Federal income tax;
(c) Students earning less than $45.
11. Employment by Foreign Government.
12. Employment by instrumentality of Foreign Government.
13. Student nurse or interne.
14. Insurance Agents (paid by commission).
15. Delivery Newsboys (under 18 years of age).

In addition to the foregoing employment which is excluded entirely from the Federal Act, no part of an employer's pay roll representing wages paid to any one employee in excess of $3,000 per year is taxable.<sup>25</sup>

(2) Tax-Offset Provisions

As noted above, 90 per cent of this Federal tax may be offset if contributions are paid to an unemployment fund created under a State unemployment insurance law which has been approved by the Social Security Board. In order to obtain such approval, a State law must contain the following basic provisions:

1. All benefits must be paid through public employment offices or such other agencies as the Social Security Board may approve;

2. All money paid into the State fund must be deposited in the United States Treasury;
3. All money in the State Unemployment Fund must be used solely to pay unemployment benefits;
4. Unemployment benefits must not be denied to any eligible individual who is unemployed for refusing to accept a new job under any of the following conditions:
  - (a) The position offered is vacant due directly to a strike, lockout or other labor dispute;
  - (b) The wages, hours or other conditions of work offered are substantially less favorable to the individual than those prevailing for similar work in the locality;
  - (c) As a condition of being employed the individual is required to join a company union or to resign from or refrain from joining any bona fide labor organization.
5. All rights conferred by the State law must be subject to amendment or repeal at any time by the Legislature.

The foregoing standards are the only requirements under the Federal Act which a State law must include in order to receive approval and certification by the Social Security Board pursuant to Section 1603 of the Internal Revenue Code.

(3) Additional Credit Provision

In addition to the tax offset which applies to every employer subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, additional credit against the Federal tax is allowed to certain employers where the State law contains a merit rating or experience rating provision. This means that some employers may claim a 2.7 per cent credit against the Federal pay roll tax even though the amount actually paid under the State law is less than 2.7 per cent. The inclusion of a merit rating provision, however, is purely optional with the State and is not necessary for approval of its law.

Section 1602 of the Internal Revenue Code prescribes the standards which are required of a State law before an additional credit is allowed against the Federal tax. All State laws having a pooled fund must provide that no reduction in tax below 2.7 per cent is permitted to any employer except "... on the basis of his experience with respect to unemployment or other factors bearing a direct relation to unemployment risk during (a period of) not less than the three consecutive years immediately preceding . . . ."<sup>26</sup> Certain other provisions are required of those few States which have an employer reserve fund.

The Social Security Board has recently construed the language of Section 1602 very liberally, at least insofar as it applies to pooled fund laws.<sup>27</sup> Apart from the legal validity of the statutory construction, the States are given considerable latitude in the type of merit rating formula which may be adopted without eliminating the benefit of additional credit under the Federal law.

"No reduced rate of contributions to a pooled fund or to a partially pooled account, is permitted to a person (or group of persons) having individuals in his (or their) employ except on the basis of his (or their) experience with respect to unemployment or to the factors being a direct relation to unemployment risk during not less than the three consecutive years immediately preceding the computation date;"

GRANTS FOR UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ADMINISTRATION

The second unemployment insurance feature of the Social Security Act is found in Title III,<sup>28</sup> granting funds to the various States to defray the costs incurred in the administration of unemployment compensation laws. These "Title III funds" are in the form of direct grants to the States and are not on a matching basis. From the total amount appropriated by Congress each year, the funds are parceled out among the States by the Social Security Board.

The conditions on which administrative funds may be granted to or withheld from the individual States are somewhat general and elastic.

Under Section 303 of the Social Security Act, no State is entitled to receive such funds unless its law has been approved and provides, among other things, for

- (a) such methods of administration as are reasonably calculated to insure full and prompt payment of benefits;
- (b) opportunity for a fair hearing before an impartial tribunal to all individuals whose claim for benefits are denied;
- (c) reports and information which the Social Security Board may require from time to time.

In addition, the same statute requires that funds be withheld any State where the Social Security Board finds, after due notice and hearing, that the administrative agency of the State has failed to properly administer certain provisions of the law, particularly in respect to the payment of benefits to eligible individuals and in furnishing data to those agencies of the Federal Government administering an unemployment insurance law.

Under Section 302 of the Social Security Act, provision is made for the disbursement of funds to the States from the annual appropriation made by Congress. The amount of money which the Social Security Board "determines to be necessary for the proper and efficient administration"<sup>29</sup> of the State law is the governing principle whereby the sum granted to each State is computed. The Federal statute requires that this determination by the board shall be based on

- "(1) the population of the State;
- (2) an estimate of the number of persons covered by the State law and of the cost of proper and efficient administration of such law; and
- (3) such other factors as the board finds relevant."<sup>30</sup>

An overriding limitation on the Social Security Board in determining the amount allowable to any individual State during any fiscal year is the legal restriction that the sum of all grants must not exceed the total amount appropriated by Congress.<sup>31</sup>

As a matter of practice, the procedure followed by the Social Security Board in granting administration funds to the States involves a budget formula based on the work load (time and cost of various operating functions) of the State Agency. Although this method may be somewhat at variance with the legal requirements of Section 302 of the Social Security Act, it is the basis followed at the present time in determining the amount of the grants to the States. The specific standards which have been established by the Board as necessary for "proper and efficient administration" relate to expenditures for travel, procurement and personnel made by the State agency.<sup>31a</sup> In the main, these restrictions are similar to those imposed on other State departments which are financed through the State itself.

The total amount collected in the United States under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act and the total amount appropriated annually by Congress for direct grants of administration funds to the States under Title III of the Social Security Act appear as follows:

FEDERAL UNEMPLOYMENT TAX ACT		FEDERAL GRANTS FOR STATE UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ADMINISTRATION
Total Collections <sup>32</sup> (Total United States)		Total Appropriations <sup>33</sup> (Total United States)
1936-----	(no tax)	$2,748,000

1943-----	160,966,000	*32,376,000

* Excludes employment service after November 30, 1942.

It should be pointed out that the amount of money granted to the States under the various other titles of the Social Security Act is far in excess of the revenue derived from the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.

C—State Unemployment Insurance Legislation <sup>34</sup>

Under the inducement of the tax offset device of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, all of the States, the District of Columbia, and the Territories of Hawaii and Alaska have adopted unemployment compensation laws. All of the State laws follow a similar pattern; although the law of no State is identical with that of another. The coverage provisions, the revenue features, the eligibility requirements, the amount and duration of benefits, the disqualification provisions, and the administrative organization vary according to the particular jurisdiction. The nature of the significant provisions common to most States may be summarized as follows:

COVERAGE

In general the coverage provisions in most States are based on the Federal Unemployment Tax Act. From the Taxation Table which

appears in Appendix B of this report, it will be seen that 23 States still follow the provisions of the Federal pay roll tax covering only those workers engaged by employers having eight or more workers during 20 weeks out of a calendar year.<sup>35</sup> In 14 States, however, workers employed by firms having one or more are covered.<sup>36</sup> The coverage provisions in the remaining States vary between these two limits.

Likewise, the major tax exemptions in the Federal tax have been incorporated in most State laws, thereby excluding certain types of employment from the scope of the unemployment insurance program. In general, all State laws exclude agricultural labor, domestic service, family employment, government service, railroad employment, and service for nonprofit charitable organizations. Other minor classifications are excluded in some States.

CONTRIBUTIONS

The employer contributions in each State law are directly related to the tax offset provisions of the Federal pay roll tax. Worker contributions are imposed in only four States (California, Alabama, New Jersey and Rhode Island). Under the laws of eight States a uniform 2.7 per cent contribution is levied on all employers equally.<sup>36a</sup> In the remaining States having merit rating provisions, the tax is variable, with some employers paying a high tax and others a low tax. In these jurisdictions the individual tax rate may be reduced below 2.7 per cent to as low as zero, or in 19 States may exceed 2.7 per cent, reaching as high as 4 per cent. Ten States have adopted war risk contributions imposing a higher tax on certain industries for the duration of the war.<sup>36b</sup>

All contributions are paid to a State fund and must be used only for the purpose of paying unemployment benefits. In 45 States a pooled fund is maintained and all moneys are mingled.<sup>37</sup> The other six States have an employer reserve fund and all money collected in taxes is kept in separate reserve accounts.<sup>38</sup> In these States benefits are paid from the individual employer reserve accounts rather than from a pooled fund, and unless special provision is made, no benefits can be paid after the employers' reserve has been exhausted.

A comparative taxation table containing the basic tax provisions and the tax rates applicable under the laws of each State appears in Appendix B of this report.

<sup>35</sup> As of January 1, 1945, 24 States had eight or more coverage. At the time of printing (March 31, 1945), however, the State of New Jersey had reduced coverage to four or more.

<sup>36a</sup> As of January 1, 1945, 13 States had one or more coverage. However, during 1945 the Legislatures of 44 States are in session and at the time of printing (March 31, 1945) one additional State (Maryland) had amended its law to extend coverage to one or more. See taxation table in Appendix B.

<sup>36b</sup> During its recent 1945 legislative session, New York adopted a modified merit rating law. Also, in October of 1945, a merit rating provision becomes operative in Louisiana. Thus, after this year, six States will have a uniform 2.7% tax rate for all employers.

<sup>37</sup> During 1945, two additional States (Georgia and Kansas) have adopted war risk contributions. A complete digest of the 10 States which adopted war risk contributions in 1943 appears in Appendix D, pages 26 and 27, of the Preliminary Report submitted by your committee on June 15, 1944.

<sup>38</sup> In most of the 45 States having a pooled fund a separate account is maintained for each employer for the purpose of computing merit rating. However, the status of an employer's account in these States with a pooled fund has nothing to do with benefit payments which are made from the general fund irrespective of the balance of the individual employer's account.

<sup>39</sup> States having employer reserve funds include Indiana, Kentucky, Nebraska, North Carolina, South Dakota, Wisconsin. In view of the special provisions of the Internal Revenue Code with respect to additional credit that apply to employer reserve funds only, it is possible that several of these States will change to a pooled fund in the near future. See Section 1602 of the Internal Revenue Code.

WAGE ELIGIBILITY

In order to qualify for benefits, all States require a minimum amount of earnings during a preceding period, which is usually one year. In about 22 States (including California) a flat amount of earnings is required of all workers.<sup>39</sup> In the remaining States, except Wisconsin, the amount of earnings necessary to qualify generally varies according to the earning capacity of the worker and the length of time employed.

The wage eligibility requirement of each State appears in digest form in the Benefit Table in Appendix C of this report.

DISQUALIFICATIONS

All State laws contain certain basic disqualifying conditions. The major causes for disqualifications are (1) voluntarily leaving work without good cause, (2) refusal of suitable work without good cause, or (3) discharge for misconduct. The duration of each particular disqualification varies in each State. However, in some States the disqualification operates as a cancellation in part or in toto of the benefit rights of the claimant and not as a suspension of benefits.

All States require a waiting period before benefits are payable. In 36 States the waiting period is one week.<sup>40</sup> In the remaining 15 States a two-week waiting period is required.

The major disqualification provisions and the waiting period required in each State are compared in the Disqualification Table in Appendix D of this report.

AMOUNT AND DURATION OF BENEFITS

The weekly benefit amounts vary from a minimum range of $2 to $10 per week to a maximum range of $15 to $25 per week, depending in each case on the amount of earnings of the individual during a preceding period.<sup>41</sup>

The number of weeks that benefits are payable also vary in each State. Under the laws of 17 States any eligible claimant may draw benefits for a uniform period of weeks. In the remaining States the duration of benefits varies according to the amount of earnings and may reach as high as 26 weeks.<sup>42</sup>

The amount and maximum duration of benefits payable under the law of each State is compiled in the Benefit Table in Appendix C of this report.

<sup>40</sup> As of January 1, 1945, 32 States provided a one-week waiting period. At the time of printing (March 31, 1945) four additional States amended their law to provide a one-week waiting period. In some instances, however, there is more than one week of waiting period during the benefit year. See the Disqualification Table in Appendix D.

<sup>41</sup> As of January 1, 1945, the maximum weekly benefit amount payable in any State was $22. However, at the time of printing (March 31, 1945) the State of Washington had amended its law to provide a maximum weekly benefit amount of $25. See the Benefit Table in Appendix C of this report for the provision in each State with recent changes.

CLAIMS PROCEDURE

In order to receive benefits an individual must file a claim in accordance with the rules of procedure established by the administrative agency. Provision is made in each State whereby an individual may appeal from the original determination which denies his claim for benefits. There are generally two levels of administrative review involved. The first appeal authority is usually referred to as a tribunal and is composed of either a single referee or, in many States, three members representing labor, industry, and the public.<sup>43</sup> The second and final appeal on an administrative basis is to the commission or a board of review, or in some cases a single director.<sup>44</sup>

ADMINISTRATIVE ORGANIZATION

Each State law is administered through a State agency which is a part of either an existing State department or forms an independent department itself. In many States, the administrative agencies are composed of members representing industry and labor as well as the public. Provision is generally made for the operation of an employment service in addition to unemployment insurance functions.

D—Other Federal Legislation

In addition to the unemployment insurance phase of the Social Security Act, the following Federal legislation relating to unemployment insurance has been adopted and is administered by the Federal Government:

RAILROAD UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE ACT <sup>45</sup>

The Federal Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act was enacted in 1939 to cover railroad employment throughout the United States. It is a completely Federal program resulting from the unsuccessful experience of the several States in attempting to cover a type of employment which is primarily and predominately interstate in character.

In general, this act includes all workers engaged in railroad employment subject to the Interstate Commerce Act. To qualify for benefits, a worker must earn $150 during the previous calendar year. Benefit payments range from $1.75 to $4 per day, depending on the total compensation received during the previous calendar year, and are payable for a maximum period of 100 days out of a benefit year. A waiting period of seven days is required for the first 30 days of unemployment, and thereafter the waiting period is four days for each 30 days of unemployment during a benefit year. No benefits are payable for Sundays or holidays. A 30-day disqualification is imposed for refusing suitable employment without good cause or for leaving work voluntarily without good cause. Disputed cases are appealed first to a district board comprised of a chairman representing the Railroad Retirement Board, a representative of employees and a representative of employers. From this tri-partite district board an appeal may be taken to the Railroad Retirement Board, which is charged with the administration of the act. A review of the decision of the board may be had by proper petition to the United States District Court. Each employer is required to contribute 3 per cent of his pay roll (on all wages up to $300 per month) to the fund. There are no employee contributions. Of all moneys collected, 90 per cent is paid into an unemployment trust fund for the purpose of paying benefits. The remaining 10 per cent is available for administrative expenses.

<sup>43</sup> According to a summary issued by the Social Security Board, the first appeal authority in 29 States is comprised of three members representing labor, management and the public.

During the fiscal year ending 1943, more than 3,000,000 workers were engaged in employment covered by the Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act.<sup>46</sup> During the month of December, 1943, about 1,600,000 were covered by this Federal Unemployment Insurance Law.<sup>47</sup>

SERVICEMEN'S READJUSTMENT ACT OF 1944 (THE "G. I. BILL")<sup>48</sup>

Title V of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944,<sup>49</sup> commonly referred to as the "G. I. Bill," establishes a system of unemployment compensation providing for the payment of unemployment benefits (called readjustment allowances) to returning veterans.

Briefly, under the provisions of the act, benefits in the amount of $20 per week are payable to any veteran receiving a discharge other than dishonorable<sup>50</sup> after 90 days or more of active service, provided he is unemployed and available for suitable work.<sup>50a</sup> In general, after 10 months or more of active service,<sup>51</sup> a veteran is entitled to receive 52 weeks of unemployment benefits,<sup>52</sup> which are payable at any time within two years after the termination of the war, or within two years after discharge if released after the termination of the war.<sup>53</sup> No waiting period is required; and all major disqualifications are for a uniform period of from one to five weeks.<sup>54</sup> Provision is made for the payment of benefits to those self-employed who earn less than $100 per month.<sup>55</sup> The Federal Administrator of Veterans' Affairs is authorized to administer the unemployment compensation system established by the act, utilizing the existing Federal and State agencies insofar as possible.<sup>56</sup>

WAR MOBILIZATION AND RECONVERSION ACT OF 1944 (GEORGE BILL)<sup>57</sup>

Under Title IV the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act of 1944, commonly referred to as the "George Bill," provision is made for the

<sup>50</sup> Although Section 700(a) of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 provides for readjustment allowances to veterans discharged "under conditions other than dishonorable," it should be pointed out that the interpretation of this section has been restricted somewhat by the Veterans Administration acting pursuant to Chapter II, particularly Section 300, of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944.

<sup>50a</sup> The Act contains a provision (Section 700 (b) (4)) whereby a veteran who becomes disabled after filing a claim is entitled to benefits, although he is physically unable to work. This disability provision was adopted by 3 States in 1945.

<sup>51</sup> Any eligible veteran may receive a maximum of 52 weeks of benefits. During the first 90 days he is entitled to eight weeks of benefits for each month of service. Thereafter, he is entitled to four weeks of benefits for each month of service. Thus after 90 days a total of 24 weeks will have accumulated and the maximum of 52 weeks will have been reached seven months after the 90-day period.

<sup>54</sup> Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944, Section 800. Provision is made in Section 800 (c) authorizing the suspension of benefit rights for an additional period up to eight additional weeks in the case of a successive disqualification for voluntarily leaving suitable work or refusing work without good cause or refusing to attend a training course.

creation of a special account in the Federal Treasury from which loans may be made to the various States to maintain the solvency of their unemployment funds.

This act amends the Social Security Act and adds a new title (Title XII)<sup>58</sup> creating a special account to which all moneys are credited that are collected under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act and not used for unemployment administration purposes. During the period June 30, 1945, until July 1, 1947, a State may obtain advances or loans from this account if the amount of money in the State fund falls below the total collections during the previous year (the higher of the two preceding years). The amount which may be loaned to a State is a sum equal to the excess of benefits paid out over contributions paid in during a calendar quarter. Any amount advanced to a State is without interest, but must be repaid when the State fund has been replenished.<sup>59</sup>

It is stated that this Federal Loan Fund was created with the intention of encouraging the States to provide more adequate postwar benefit protection for their workers without fear of the consequences of possible fund insolvency during the reconversion period.<sup>60</sup>

<sup>58</sup> This new Title is Section 1201 of the Social Security Act. See Section 402 of the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act of 1944.

Members of the committee were Paul A. Raushenbush, Chairman (Wisconsin) Robert T. Malone, (Nebraska), James M. Roshrow (Delaware). This report states "It should be noted that Congress intended the new 'loan' fund to encourage action by each State to provide more adequate postwar benefit protection for its own covered workers".

CHAPTER III—UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE IN CALIFORNIA

The California Unemployment Insurance Act was approved by the Governor on June 25, 1935.<sup>61</sup> Although enacted prior to the Social Security Act of 1935, it was adopted in view of the pending Federal law and by its very terms was, and remains today, conditioned on the existence of Federal legislation imposing a tax on the payment of wages against which contributions paid to a State unemployment fund may be offset.<sup>62</sup>

With the passage of the Federal Social Security Act, the California law became operative and was approved by the Social Security Board on December 27, 1935. Contributions to the State Unemployment Fund became payable on and after January 1, 1936. However, benefits to eligible workers were not paid until two years later, beginning January 1, 1938.

The constitutionality of the act was sustained by the California Supreme Court in 1936 in the case of Gillum v. Johnson 7 Cal. (2d) 744. Significant changes have been made in the provisions of the act during every session of the Legislature subsequent to its original enactment.

A—Basic Provisions of the California Unemployment Insurance Act

The basic provisions of the present Unemployment Insurance Act may be summarized as follows:

PUBLIC POLICY

It is the declared public policy on which the Unemployment Insurance Act is based that since the evils of temporary unemployment are reflected in terms of unstable purchasing power which is detrimental to the State and that such evils can not be prevented by a relief program without excessive expense to the State, and since the prices of goods and services should include the cost of unemployment, it is for the benefit of the public welfare to compel the setting aside of funds to provide benefits for persons involuntarily unemployed and to reduce involuntary unemployment and suffering caused thereby to a minimum.<sup>63</sup>

COVERAGE

The California act covers all workers who are employed by a subject employer and are not engaged in certain types of exempt employment.<sup>64</sup> In general, an employer is subject to the law if he employs four or more workers for some part of a day in each of 20 different weeks during a calendar year. Effective February 1, 1945, an employer who has four or more workers engaged in nonexempt employment will also become subject if his total pay roll during a calendar quarter exceeds $3,000.<sup>65</sup>

The following service is exempt from the act and excluded from the definition of employment thereunder:<sup>66</sup>

1. Agricultural labor;
2. Domestic service;
3. Maritime service;
4. Family employment;
5. Employment by the Federal Government or instrumentality;
6. Employment by the State Government or instrumentality;
7. Employment by certain charitable, educational and similar non-profit organizations;
8. Employment covered by a Federal unemployment insurance law;
9. Employment by nonprofit organizations exempt from Federal tax;
10. The following employment if it is also excluded from Federal tax:
  - a. Certain domestic service;
  - b. Casual labor;
  - c. Certain organizations exempt from Federal income tax;
  - d. Horticultural and agricultural associations;
  - e. Employee beneficiary society;
  - f. Students earning $45 or less;
  - g. Employment by foreign government;
  - h. Employment by instrumentality of a foreign government.
11. Student nurses and internes.

In general, the foregoing exemptions follow the pattern of the Federal tax provision.<sup>67</sup>

CONTRIBUTIONS

Contributions under the California Act are derived from two different sources. A flat 1 per cent tax is imposed on employees with respect to all wages paid to them in subject employment up to $3,000 per year.<sup>68</sup> Employers are required to pay a tax ranging from 1 per cent to 2.7 per cent on all wages paid up to that amount.<sup>69</sup> This variable tax rate for employers is normally referred to as merit rating or experience rating.

The act provides for a pooled fund in which all contributions are mingled. Although generally each benefit payment is charged to a specific employer's account which together with other factors may affect his contribution rate, benefits are payable from the fund irrespective of the status of an individual employer's bookkeeping account.

All contributions are deposited in the Unemployment Trust Fund maintained in the United States Treasury, and moneys are requisitioned therefrom to pay benefits.

ELIGIBILITY FOR BENEFITS

In order to receive benefits under the California Act, an unemployed individual must meet at least 10 different eligibility requirements (See Sections 56, 57, 57.5, 58). Primarily, a worker must earn at least $300 in subject employment during his base year (a one-year period) to establish a valid claim for benefits. In addition thereto, the individual who is unemployed must be physically able to work and willing to take a job and must not be eligible for benefits under the laws of any other State or of the United States. It is also necessary to comply with the procedural requirements of filing a claim and properly registering for work.

When all of the foregoing requisites are satisfied, benefits are payable after a two week waiting period, provided there is no ineligibility for certain conditions commonly referred to as disqualifications.

DISQUALIFICATIONS

As noted above, disqualifications under the California act are actually grounds for ineligibility and operate as a suspension or postponement of benefit payments rather than as a cancellation thereof. The disqualifications, or conditions of ineligibility, are as follows:

- (a) 2 weeks for voluntarily quitting a job without good cause;
- (b) 1 to 6 weeks for being discharged for misconduct;
- (c) 1 to 4 weeks for making a false statement;
- (d) An indefinite period for refusing suitable employment without good cause;
- (e) An indefinite period for leaving work because of trade dispute.

AMOUNT AND DURATION OF BENEFITS

The weekly amount of benefits payable under the Unemployment Insurance Act varies from $10 to $20, depending upon previous earnings. Under the formula set forth in Section 54 of the act, an individual who regularly earns $15 per week is entitled to benefits of $10 per week; an individual whose earning capacity is $20 a week may qualify for benefits of $14 per week; and an individual earning $30 or more per week is entitled to $20 weekly benefits.

The duration of benefits ranges from a possible minimum of nine weeks to a possible maximum of 23.4 weeks<sup>70</sup> during a one-year period. The act does not specify the number of weeks benefits are payable. Under Section 53 of the act, the total amount of benefits ranges from $160 to $468, depending on the total amount of wages earned in covered employment during the base year. The actual duration of benefits in each case is determined by dividing this total award by the weekly amount payable to the particular individual.<sup>71</sup>

CLAIMS PROCEDURE AND ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW

An unemployed worker must file a claim in accordance with the rules established by the commission as well as comply with the eligibility requirements of the law in order to receive benefits. The validity of the claim and the right to benefits is originally determined by a claims examiner in the local office.

<sup>70</sup> It is possible for a claimant to receive benefits for as long as 25½ weeks under the present California Act. However, it is only the individuals who earn consistently $17 or $18 a week and are entitled to weekly benefits of $12 per week for a total award of $306 who come within this bracket. (Sections 53 and 54 of the Act)

<sup>71</sup> There are several defects in the present formula which have arisen from the 1943 amendment to the law which increased the weekly amount from $18 to $20 without increasing the total benefit award. Today, an individual who earns between $800 and $900 per year and has earnings of more than $380 in one quarter is entitled to a total of $320 in benefits, while the individual who earns $900 to $1,000 is only entitled to $306 in benefits irrespective of his earnings. Prior to 1943 the maximum award of $468 at $18 per week benefits would provide a duration of 26 weeks. By increasing the weekly amount from $18 to $20 in 1943, the duration of benefits was reduced from 26 weeks to 23.4 weeks.

Provision is made for an appeal by the claimant or his former employer to an impartial referee within seven days after the initial determination by the local claims examiner. Within 10 days after the decision by the referee, an appeal may be taken to the appeals board comprised of three full-time public officials, which is the highest administrative board of review. Where a referee affirms an initial determination granting benefits, the benefits are payable irrespective of any appeal which may be taken thereafter (unless the decision of the referee is set aside).<sup>72</sup>

In disputed tax cases the determination is made by the Appeals Board on the basis of evidence obtained by a referee acting in the capacity of a hearings officer.

ADMINISTRATION

The Unemployment Insurance Act is administered by the California Employment Stabilization Commission through the Department of Employment.

The commission is composed of the three members of the Appeals Board whose functions are primarily quasi-judicial and the administrative chiefs of the two main divisions—tax collections and benefit payments—into which the department is divided. There is no provision for labor and management representation on the commission, Appeals Board or any other unit of the department.

B—The Operation of the California Unemployment Insurance Act

As of January 1, 1942, the public employment service maintained and operated by the Department of Employment pursuant to the Unemployment Insurance Act was assumed by the Federal Government as a part of a nation-wide wartime employment program. Since that time neither the Social Security Board nor the State of California has made available funds for the maintenance of public employment offices by the State, and the functions of the Department of Employment have been relegated to unemployment insurance payments and collections.

The following information relative to the Department of Employment and its present operations has been assembled:

ORGANIZATION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT

The Department of Employment is comprised of a central office with headquarters at Sacramento and various local offices throughout the State. At present there are some 79 local offices; however, in areas where activity is small, only a part-time service is maintained. All claims for benefits must be made through a local office of the department after registering for work with the United States Employment Service, which is generally located at the same address.

The supervision of the operations performed in the various local offices of the Department of Employment with respect to benefit payments is revealed from the following organizational chart.

(As of January 1, 1945)

The expenses incurred in the administration of the Department of Employment for unemployment insurance functions only totaled $2,543,-032.70 during the year period ending June 30, 1944. Of this total, nearly two million dollars ($1,944,518.41) was used to pay for personal

C—Activity Under the California Unemployment Insurance Act

The significant unemployment insurance activities in California may be briefly summarized as follows:

NUMBER OF COVERED WORKERS

An estimated 2,100,000 workers were engaged in employment subject to the Unemployment Insurance Act on December 31, 1944. During the year 1944 there were 3,750,000 workers who worked in insured employment and paid taxes to the Unemployment Fund. However, under the California law a worker pays a tax on all of his wages,<sup>74</sup> but unless he earns more than $300 in employment subject to the act he cannot qualify for unemployment insurance benefits. Thus of the total 3,750,000 individuals who contributed to the fund, approximately 2,600,000 earned more than $300 and were therefore protected by unemployment insurance and could file a valid claim for benefits.

Today approximately two-thirds of the working population is engaged in insured employment. In normal times, however, only about one-half of the labor force is in employment covered by the act.

The following is a tabulation by years of the average number of workers engaged in insured employment at the end of each month during the year, the number of workers with more than $300 earnings in insured employment each year, and the number of workers who earned some wages during the year in insured employment.<sup>75</sup>

NUMBER OF WORKERS PAID BENEFITS

A total of 95,694 workers (86,521 from California and 12,316 from others States) were unemployed at some time during the year 1944 and filed a claim for unemployment insurance benefits against the California fund. Of this total number who filed a claim, only 57,264 were actually paid benefits. The others were either reemployed before qualifying for their first check, disqualified from benefits, or did not earn the necessary $300 in subject employment.

A comparison with previous years may be made as follows:<sup>76</sup>

NUMBER OF CHECKS AND AMOUNT OF PAYMENTS

The number of unemployment insurance claims paid reached an all-time low in October of 1943 with an average of 4,233 checks issued per week and total payments for the month falling to $281,918. This was at the same time California reached its highest employment peak. In January 1945, the average weekly number of checks increased to 16,902 and total payments for the month were $1,387,316.

The following tabulation shows the total amount of benefits paid and the number of unemployment insurance checks issued each year to unemployed workers who filed claims against the California fund.<sup>77</sup>

DISQUALIFICATIONS

During the calendar year 1944 a total of 25,985 disqualifications were imposed. Of this total, 16,939 were on the basis of nonavailability of the claimant for work, 6,937 for refusal of suitable employment, and 1,770 for voluntarily quitting.

The disqualifications for previous years which are available from the records of the Department of Employment may be compared as follows:<sup>78</sup>

CALIFORNIA

The number of disqualifications imposed in each year should be considered in the light of the number of claims filed during the year and the employment opportunities existing.

NUMBER OF APPEALS

The number of cases in which an appeal was made from an initial determination by a claims examiner in a local office to a referee reached 4,687 during 1944. In 3,566 of these first appeal cases a decision was rendered by the referee.

The number of cases appealed from the decision of the referee to the Appeals Board, during 1944, was 772. The Appeals Board, which is the highest appeals authority, made 763 benefit decisions during the year.

The benefit appeals activity may be compared with previous years as follows:<sup>79</sup>

Of the total 3,566 decisions rendered by the referees during 1944, 3,332 involved appeals made by the claimant and in 1,970 cases (approximately 55 per cent) the claimants were denied benefits by the referee, while in 1,362 cases (approximately 45 per cent) benefits were granted to the claimant. The remaining 234 cases decided by the referee during 1944 involved employer appeals, and in 170 cases (approximately 72 per cent) the decision was against the employer's interest and the referee affirmed the original determination granting benefits to the claimant, while in 57 cases (approximately 28 per cent) the claimant was denied benefits and the decision was in favor of the employer.

A similar breakdown with respect to appeals made to the Appeals Board appears as follows: <sup>80</sup>

In reference to tax decisions in which the referee only acts as a hearings officer with the original determination made by the Appeals Board itself, there were a total of 75 petitions for reassessment filed during 1944. In 15 cases the petitions were denied while in 58 cases petitions were granted, either in full (25 cases) or in part (17 cases) or with respect to the penalty only (16 cases). STATUS OF THE FUND—(Contributions and Expenditures)

The balance in the Unemployment Fund was $654,420,236.23 as of February 28, 1945. With increased pay rolls under war conditions the unemployment insurance tax imposed both on employers and employees in this State has produced more revenue than any other State tax. During the year 1943 a total of $164,000,000 was collected in taxes while the total amount of benefits paid out was only $7,000,000, an amount which was more than offset by the interest on the fund alone. During 1944 total contributions were $170,000,000 while the total amount paid in benefits was approximately $10,000,000, an amount which was again offset by the interest on the fund during the year.

The amount paid in benefits, the amount collected in contributions, and the balance in the fund at the end of each year appears in the following chart:<sup>82</sup>

From the foregoing, it will be seen that as of December 31, 1944 the total amount collected under the 1 per cent employee tax since 1936 exceeds the total amount of benefits which have been paid from the fund since the beginning of payments in 1938. During the past two years the amount of interest on the fund alone has been sufficient to offset all benefit payments.

The tremendous increase in the amount of money paid into the fund since the beginning of the war can be explained in the light of the large expansion in taxable pay rolls. From the following chart it is seen that taxable wages have increased by more than $3,500,000,000 since 1940.<sup>88</sup>

CHAPTER IV—UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE PROBLEMS IN CALIFORNIA

General Survey

In the course of the investigation of the various specific problems arising in the operation and administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act, certain problems of a general and over-all nature have come to the attention of the committee.

There is still much uncertainty as to the role unemployment insurance should play in the economy of the State. In times of high employment when little need exists for unemployment benefits, there is a general disinclination to recognize the fact that the law is designed for periods of low employment and to obviate an expensive relief system. The cost of a sound and adequate program over a normal period has yet to be determined, and for this reason it is impossible to know whether the revenue provisions are geared in accordance with necessary expenditures. After sufficient experience has been acquired, consideration should be given to the eventual adjustment of the financial structure of the entire unemployment insurance system in this State. To accomplish this, however, would require the assistance of competent actuaries and impartial statisticians as well as amendment to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.

Under the Federal-State cooperative system of unemployment insurance in the United States, the responsibility for providing an adequate unemployment insurance program is with the State itself and not the Federal Government. Unfortunately, there is neither the degree of uniformity in the basic provisions of the State laws nor the degree of cooperation in the administration of the State laws that is necessary for the successful operation of a nation-wide state system of unemployment insurance. Unless legislation is forthcoming from the individual States to improve and integrate the present program, there is serious danger of a general failure of the existing system during the period of postwar readjustment.

The provisions of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act are hardly conducive to uniform State legislation and extension of State unemployment insurance protection and coverage. The Federal act is replete with exemptions and exclusions all of which are continually urged to be incorporated into the State law when in fact only few, if any, of the exemptions and exclusions in the Federal tax law have any place or justification in an employment security law which must include all workers if it is to operate properly and effectively. The Federal Act is still limited to employers of eight or more and requires no basic coverage and benefit standards for approval of a State unemployment insurance law. The tax offset features restrict the use of a sound system of taxation in the State law which will conform to the needs of the program. The provisions of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act appear in reality to be more conducive to a Federal unemployment insurance program than to improvement, uniformity and extension of the existing State system.

Your committee has found two fundamental weaknesses in the operation of the unemployment insurance law in California. One is the general lack of knowledge on the part of workers and employers of the basic provisions of the law; and the other arises from a lack of proper enforcement of the present provisions of the law. There have been numerous violations of the act and the failure to detect and penalize such cases has caused a general feeling of disrespect and opposition to unemployment insurance on the part of both workers and employers. This condition results primarily from improper administration rather than improper legislation, and unless an effective educational and law enforcement program is carried on by the administrative agency, individual cases of abuse will remain and become magnified to the detriment of the entire unemployment insurance system.

Many individual employers in this State are fundamentally opposed to unemployment insurance and look upon the State law not as a worthwhile end in itself but merely as a means of reducing the Federal tax burden. At the same time many individual workers (chiefly women) have used whatever means necessary to obtain benefits, rationalizing their actions in many instances on the theory that they have contributed to the fund and should be entitled to benefits irrespective of the eligibility requirements in the law. The majority of the employers and workers of this State, however, are in favor of the principle of unemployment insurance and aware of its benefits, if properly and fairly administered. Only through enforcement of the law and education can any real development be expected in the field of employment security.

Particular Problems

In appraising the various problems arising under the California Unemployment Insurance Act, your committee has not been unmindful of certain basic and fundamental considerations which have a direct bearing on unemployment insurance in this State.

In the first place, California has experienced a tremendous development over a short period of time, becoming the third largest State in the Union. With this increased population and nearly three-quarters of a million returning veterans after the war, California faces one of the most critical periods in its history and may expect severe unemployment, at least for a short time, during the reconversion from war to peace. The necessity of improving the unemployment insurance system to meet this postwar condition is apparent. At the same time a serious unemployment problem may be expected in this State even before the termination of the war.

Secondly, unemployment insurance can greatly minimize the need and expenditures for relief. Where unemployment insurance ends an increase in relief may be expected to begin. In this respect the past experience of the State speaks for itself. During the 10 years preceding the war, California has made large expenditures for direct unemployment relief. The following tabulation reveals the actual cost by years:<sup>84</sup>

Grand Total ---	$225,783,958 70	$171,006,449 13	$396,790,407 83

In addition to these payments by the State of California itself, the various counties in the State have made large expenditures for relief purposes. Unemployment insurance can minimize to a great extent the necessity for a large and costly relief program and at the same time preserve the self-respect and dignity of the temporarily unemployed worker and his family.

Thirdly, it is recognized that the continuance of a nation-wide unemployment insurance program on the basis of individual State laws with State administration requires that each State assume the responsibility of maintaining an adequate unemployment insurance program within its boundaries and at the same time join with other States in providing for interstate cooperation and the prompt payment of benefits to the thousands of workers returning to their home State and the many others migrating from one State to another. Unless the individual States can accept this responsibility and provide an integrated nation-wide system of unemployment insurance through State legislation and intelligent interstate cooperation, there is little reason to expect or to even prefer the continuance of State administration in the field of unemployment insurance.<sup>85</sup>

In the light of these basic conditions, the following specific unemployment insurance problems in this State have been analyzed.

A—COVERAGE PROVISIONS

As pointed out in the preliminary report by your committee, there are over one million workers in California who are not protected by unemployment insurance. Today this means one-third of the working population of the State is engaged in nonsubject employment, while in 1940 one-half of the total labor force was employed in noninsured employment. According to an estimate recently made by the State Department of Employment, this large group of noninsured workers may be classified as follows:<sup>86</sup>

<sup>85</sup> In this respect your committee wishes to point out that the Council of State Governments has made an effort to encourage the States to improve their laws to provide a more complete and uniform unemployment insurance system and thereby justify the preservation of the existing system of State administration of unemployment insurance. The recommendations to the States by the Council of State Governments appear in "Unemployment Compensation in the Postwar Period" (December 1944) The Council of State Governments, Chicago, Illinois, Page 1.

CALIFORNIA
NON-INSURED EMPLOYMENT BY CLASSIFICATION
AS OF JUNE, 1944

Employees in firms of less than 4-----	150,000
Employees of non-profit organizations-----	25,000

Agricultural workers-----	169,000
Self employed <sup>88</sup> -----	415,000
Total -----	1,299,000

Recognizing that unemployment insurance should be available for all workers in this State, your committee has endeavored to make an evaluation of the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act relating to coverage, and to ascertain whether today there are sufficient administrative reasons to justify the continuation of the many exclusions and exemptions which now exist in the law. The various issues involved in this respect are presented in seriatim.

EMPLOYERS WITH LESS THAN FOUR WORKERS

From the foregoing chart it is seen that approximately 150,000 jobs are excluded from unemployment insurance coverage because of the present provisions of Section 9 of the act limiting coverage to employers of four or more workers. However, the number of workers employed during the year by firms of less than four is estimated to be approximately 250,000.

Today employers of one or more are covered by the unemployment insurance laws of 14 states,<sup>89</sup> including Pennsylvania (the second largest State in the Union), and every employer of one or more is subject to the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Law.<sup>90</sup> The experience in these States with one or more coverage has been summarized in a report by the State Advisory Council of the North Carolina Employment Security Agency.<sup>91</sup> Briefly, it was revealed that:

<sup>86</sup> From Report 380 # 1 (November 30, 1944) prepared by the Department of Employment a copy of which appears in Appendix F of this report.

<sup>87</sup> The 465,000 employees in Government service who are now excluded from the Unemployment Insurance Act may be segregated into the following groups:

Federal-----	232,000
War Agencies-----	244,000
Non War Agencies-----	38,000
State-----	28,000
Local-----	155,000

<sup>88</sup> It is estimated that of the self-employed 130,000 are farm workers and 285,000 are nonfarm workers.

<sup>89</sup> Prior to 1945, there were 13 States with one or more coverage. At the time of printing (March 31, 1945) however, the State of Maryland had adopted one or more coverage.

<sup>90</sup> The Federal Insurance Contributions Act (formerly Title VIII of the Social Security Act) applies to employers having one or more workers at any time. This act which is part of the Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Program should be distinguished from the Federal Unemployment Tax Act which applies to employers having eight or more workers.

<sup>91</sup> “Extension of Unemployment Compensation Coverage to Employers of One or More Workers” published in the North Carolina U. C. C. Quarterly (Spring, 1944), page 35.

"(3) For the 13 states, 13 per cent of all covered workers are employed by units with fewer than eight . . . .

"(4) On the whole, contributions from employers of fewer than eight more than meet the benefit liability of their workers, with a good margin of contributions over benefits. Individually, there is considerable difference in this respect as between employers in different industry groups.

"(5) All States are in agreement in reporting no unwholesome economic effect on small firms which can be charged to unemployment insurance coverage. On the contrary, several States emphatically point to beneficial economic results."<sup>92</sup>

Your committee made inquiry by letter to the State of Pennsylvania to obtain first hand the specific experience of a large State. However, no administrative problems or difficulties were reported in the administration of the Pennsylvania law which has had one or more coverage since 1936.

The number of workers required as a prerequisite to coverage under the unemployment insurance law of each State appears in the Appendix B of this report.

In California, extension of coverage to one or more would include an estimated 90,000 or 100,000 additional employers.<sup>93</sup> The commission believes that it is now prepared for such a change in the law without encountering any difficulty in accounting and tax collection. Furthermore, it is felt that administration of the California act would be simplified in many cases. Our investigation has indicated that under one or more coverage evasion of the law could be more readily detected by auditors of the Department of Employment. The statements of the auditors and the officials of the Tax Division of the department disclose that one of the major problems in tax enforcement arises from the present four or more limitation in the law. In addition, a closer coordination with the auditing sections of the other State taxing agencies and the Federal Bureau of Internal Revenue would be possible since the coverage under the Federal Old Age Insurance Law and the other State tax laws would more nearly parallel each other.<sup>94</sup> Also, a complete work history and wage record of workers could be maintained with greater control over fraudulent claims, particularly where a claimant is drawing benefits and at the same time is working for a firm of less than four workers.

According to estimates prepared by the Department of Employment under the employment and unemployment conditions which prevailed in 1940, the amount of contributions from employers of less than four and their employees would more than offset the amount of benefits resulting from the increased coverage. Thus, from the administrative and fund solvency approach, there is no longer any real reason for excluding this large group of workers from coverage under the Unemployment Insurance Act. Nor would any significant bookkeeping or reporting burden be imposed on the employers involved in view of the fact that under the present Federal Old Age and Survivors Insurance Law wage reports are required from employers of one or more workers and a duplicate of the Federal report would satisfy the requirements of the State law in practically all cases.

<sup>94</sup> As a result of an inquiry into the tax enforcement operations of the Department of Employment, your committee found that there is a lack of coordination of the information obtained by the various taxing agencies of this State and the auditors of the Department of Employment do not have available except in few instances the information on employing units which has been obtained in the administration of other State and Federal tax laws.

The only consideration remaining turns on the question of public policy. Can it be said that the public welfare and interest of the people of the State of California are served to greater extent by maintaining the present tax exemption in favor of employers of less than four and thereby continue to exclude the workers involved from unemployment insurance protection, or by removing the present tax exemption and at the same time providing the benefits of unemployment insurance to this group of workers now excluded. In adopting the Unemployment Insurance Act it has already been recognized that unemployment insurance is the cheapest and most expedient method of meeting the public evils resulting from temporary unemployment. It would appear that these evils of temporary unemployment are just as injurious for the workers employed by firms of less than four as they are for the worker employed by firms of more than four. At the same time, the State suffers from the present exclusion in terms of unstabilized purchasing power, larger expenditures for relief, economic insecurity for a sizable portion of the working population, and less effective administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

It is therefore the unanimous opinion of your committee that employers of one or more should be made subject to the Unemployment Insurance Act. One or more coverage has been suggested to the States by the Council of State Governments for expanding and perfecting State unemployment compensation systems.<sup>95</sup>

EMPLOYERS WITH MORE THAN FOUR WORKERS BUT LESS THAN 20 WEEKS OPERATION

Under Section 9 of the California Act, an employer does not become subject unless he has four or more workers for some portion of each day during a calendar year.

This "20 weeks during a calendar year" requirement has served as an avenue of escape from taxation for many large employers and at the same time has resulted in a loss of the benefits of unemployment insurance for a substantial number of workers. The seriousness of the problem was first called to the attention of the Senate Interim Committee at a public hearing held in Los Angeles on March 9, 10, 11, 1944.<sup>96</sup> The charge was made that certain employers in the construction industry in southern California through a process of forming a new corporation before the expiration of a 20-week period in a calendar year were able to remain in continuous operation with the same personnel and successfully avoid the Unemployment Insurance Act. As a result of an audit by the Department of Employment, it was found that a new corporation was formed for each building project and each project was generally completed within a 20-week period.<sup>97</sup> Five corporations were held liable under Section 9 of the present law on the grounds that substantially all of the assets of the old corporation were held by the new corporation.<sup>98</sup> However, it was reported that many of the construction jobs involving hundreds of workers were completed without legally coming within the terms of the law.

In addition to the construction industry in Southern California, your committee has reason to suspect that there have been a number of cases of actual tax evasion in violation of the act in the motion picture industry. By operating under several fictitious names at different addresses, the total employment of a single employer may exceed by far the required four or more workers during 20 weeks in a calendar year and yet the appearance of each production on a particular lot is that of an independent and distinct employing unit, making a picture in less than 20 weeks out of a year. However, apart from any question of evasion, a large number of independent producers are not subject to the Unemployment Insurance Act because of the "20 weeks during a calendar year" requirement. Even the small concern which makes not more than two or three inexpensive pictures a year will employ as many as several hundred employees in a single day. The following are two actual records obtained from an investigation of a number of small independent studios:

	Production Time *	Number Employees During Pay Roll Week
Picture "A"	13 days (estimate)	100—Cast and crew 400—Approximate number of extras  509—Total
Picture "B"	9 days (actual)	48—Cast and crew 90—Approximate number of extras  138—Total

In view of the fact that actors, particularly extra players, are employed by a large number of different studios during the year, it is important in determining the benefit rights that all wages be earned in subject employment.<sup>99</sup> The effect of 20 weeks requirement on coverage in the motion picture industry was reflected by a survey made of the number of firms that are or have been subject to the Unemployment Insurance

"We have held all the contracting firms in Southern California which were mentioned in the Los Angeles meeting to be subject under Section 5(b) of the Act. The following corporations were involved:

Aircraft Housing Corporation
Torrance Housing Corporation
Manchester Village Corporation
Burbank Gardens, Inc.
Packalide Gardens, Inc.

It was the practice to organize a new corporation for each project, apparently with the thought that the project would be completed in less than twenty weeks. However, in view of the fact that the stock ownership was in substantially the same hands in each of the corporations and that it was the practice to shift the supervisory personnel and most of the workmen from one project to the other, we held the newly formed corporations to be successors to their predecessors on the ground that the successors had 'acquired the organization, trade or business' of the predecessors. All employer contributions have been paid by these corporations. There is still unpaid wage earner contribution, which we have assessed and which we are proceeding to collect."

<sup>99</sup> Your committee made a list of movie actors who actually were paid unemployment benefit, during a two day period in November, 1944, from the Hollywood office of the Department of Employment. An analysis of these individual cases on the basis of the information obtained from the wage records of the department reveals that out of a total of 63 actors, (mostly extras) 200 were paid unemployment benefits 48 per cent (40) earned over $2,000 during the year, 72 per cent (49) earned over $1,000 and 97 per cent (61) earned over $500. It was found that several of these individuals were employed by 15 different employers and were also employed by the same employer on several occasions. Furthermore, the record only reveals the number of employers that were subject to the Unemployment Insurance Act for whom service were rendered and does not disclose the employers for whom service may have been rendered that were not subject to the act.

Act. Our investigation revealed that of the 220 different motion picture firms in California whose names the committee was able to obtain, only 135 have been subject to the Unemployment Insurance Act, despite the fact that even in the most inexpensive western pictures with actual shooting time as short as one week, there are more than four employees involved. This means that whatever wages were earned in employment with the remaining 85 nonsubject firms did not accrue to the individual in determining his benefit rights, nor was any contribution made to the Unemployment Fund by either the employer or employee.

Perhaps the most striking instance of legal tax avoidance under the "20 weeks during a calendar year" requirement has occurred in connection with some of the largest construction jobs in the State. The magnitude of this loophole in the Unemployment Insurance Act manifested itself very pointedly by the activity of certain so-called "Joint Ventures." A "Joint Venture" is not a corporation with a limited liability, but purely a combination or partnership of certain existing individuals or corporations for the purpose of performing a particular undertaking.<sup>100</sup> The Department of Employment considers a "Joint Venture" as a new employing unit which does not become subject to the act unless it employs four or more individuals during 20 weeks in a calendar year.<sup>101</sup> Whether aware of the State unemployment insurance and Federal unemployment taxes or not, several of the largest construction corporations in the State found it necessary to pool their equipment and assets in order to perform some of the large construction contracts that were offered. Although each corporation was itself subject to the Unemployment Insurance Act, the "Joint Venture" created for the purpose of completing the contract was a new employing unit and not subject to the act for at least 20 weeks, unless voluntarily electing coverage before that time, no matter how many workers were employed.

Your committee found that one such "Joint Venture" employed an average of 2,899 workers per week and a total of 6,302 workers without becoming subject to the act.<sup>102</sup> Another similar nonsubject undertaking

"[A & B], and its affiliated co-adventurers seems to present as striking an example of the situation as any that have been located. [A & B] was originally affiliated with [C], [D], [E], [F], and [G] as a corporation engaged in the construction of Boulder Dam. The combination was known as the "Six Companies."

"In the Fall of 1941 these same companies formed a joint venture and invested the sum of $600,000 for the purchase of equipment to construct a project in the vicinity of Santa Maria. The relative investments were: [A & B], 35 per cent; [C], 25 per cent; the remaining companies, 10 per cent each. The contract provided for total payment of $17,000,000. The project was started about September 9, 1941, and operated with four or more employees through the week ended May 2, 1942. It then operated with two employees from the week ended May 9, 1942, to the week ended August 29, 1942. While construction was actually in progress an average of 2,899 employees were engaged. A total of 6,302 different persons were employed on the project. Because of the project extending over two calendar years, the joint venture did not acquire a subject status under the rule of four in 20.

"A contract was entered into in 1942 to construct the Pittsburg Staging Area. A joint venture composed of [A & B], [C], [H], [E], [F], [J], and [K] performed the contract. The venture employed four or more persons from the week ended February 10, 1942, to the week ended June 20, 1942. The number of employees dropped to three from June 20, 1942, to September 15, 1942, at which time the venture books were closed. The venture employed an average of 1,773 persons during the period of operations, and employed a total of 4,221 different persons. The amount of the contract was not obtained."

involved a total of 4,221 workmen.<sup>103</sup> We were informed of the activity of a certain concern which operated continuously for 38 weeks (nine months) with hundreds of workmen and did not become subject to the act because the law requires 20 weeks in a calendar year, and its operations (with more than four workers) began the last 19 weeks of one year and terminated after 19 weeks of the next year. Not only have the workers employed been denied the benefit of wage credits under the Unemployment Insurance Act, but the State has permitted a large source of revenue to escape from the Unemployment Fund.

It was to correct the inequitable situation resulting from the operation of the "20 weeks in a calendar year" requirement that Senate Bill No. 318 was introduced by the committee as an urgency measure during the Fifty-sixth Session (1945) of the California Legislature. This bill has now become law adding Section 9.1 to the Unemployment Insurance Act to provide that any employer of more than four workers becomes subject if and when his total pay roll during a calendar quarter (three-month period) exceeds $3,000, notwithstanding the fact that his employment activity may be less than 20 weeks in a calendar year.

NONPROFIT ORGANIZATIONS

Service for nonprofit organizations is excluded from coverage under the provisions of Sections 7 (g) and 7 (k) of the Unemployment Insurance Act. It is estimated that this exclusion denies the benefits of unemployment insurance to approximately 25,000 workers.

Apart from the question of policy involved in this type of exemption, there is a definite need of a complete and comprehensive inquiry into the organization, operation and activities of many organizations that are now claiming exemption under the present nonprofit provisions of the act. On the basis of a preliminary investigation, your committee has reason to believe that in the case of certain nonprofit institutions now claiming exemption under the law, net earnings are in fact inuring to the benefit of private individuals, although the appearance is simply that of an ordinary rental agreement between the individual and the tax-exempt nonprofit organization. In an attempt to ascertain conformity with the present law, the auditors of the Department of Employment have encountered difficulty in obtaining the necessary records and information from certain institutions of this nature. A complete investigation of the entire field should be made under legislative authority to find exactly what organizations are claiming exemption, their actual operations and internal structure, and the extent of any tax evasion that exists.

Briefly, Section 7 (g) of the California Act excludes those organizations "operated exclusively" for charitable, educational and other similar purposes, provided that no profit is derived by a private individual. The language under Section 7 (g) is identical with that found originally in the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, and all other State laws. However, by amendment in 1939, the Federal provision was narrowed somewhat by taxing such organizations if "a substantial part of the activities of which is carrying on propaganda, or otherwise attempting, to influence legislation.”<sup>104</sup> This amendment was subsequently made in the laws of about one-half of the States; however, the California Act has not been changed in this respect since its original enactment in 1935.<sup>105</sup>

Section 7 (k) exempts any nonprofit organization which is not subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act. This exemption was enacted as an emergency measure in 1939 because of the confusion and doubt existing at that time.<sup>106</sup> The provision is peculiar to the California Act, and is not found in any other State law. The commission feels this particular exemption is no longer necessary. Moreover it only serves to create uncertainty since the determination of coverage under the State law is based on the interpretation made by the Federal Government of the Federal law. It may be possible for any organization which is subject to the California law but exempt from the Federal law to reorganize as a nonprofit organization and thereby become exempt from the California law. Your committee feels that the entire section should be repealed.

The California Supreme Court recently considered the two foregoing provisions of the act in the cases of Scripps Memorial Hospital Inc. v. California Employment Commission, 24 Cal. (2d) 669, and Seaside Memorial Hospital v. California Employment Commission, 24 Cal. (2d) 681, giving a broad meaning and liberal interpretation of the phrase “operated exclusively for . . . charitable . . . purposes” as used in Section 7 (g). The court states, in effect, that a hospital which is supported in part by full pay or part pay patients, which charges a regular fee for most of its patients and derives a profit from its activities, may still be operated exclusively for charitable purposes so long as the use to which its income is devoted is for a “charitable purpose.”

The fundamental and basic question of policy involved in nonprofit exemptions is whether or not the public welfare is served to a greater extent by refraining from imposing any tax on nonprofit and charitable organizations and by the same token deny all the workers employed by such institutions the benefits of unemployment insurance; or by accepting the adverse effect on such organizations which is caused by the imposition of a small payroll tax and at the same time grant the protection of unemployment insurance to the workers employed. In the light of this proposition of balancing the degree of public benefit and detriment entailed in each course of action, it would be well to reconsider the exemptions now found in the law.

In California and those other States (about one-half) which have not changed their law in this respect or do not have other general exemptions which would apply, a charitable organization that devotes its activity in a substantial degree to influencing legislation is subject to the Federal Tax if more than eight employees are employed, but is exempt entirely from the State law irrespective of the number of employees. This presents one of the few cases in which the Federal Act is more liberal in coverage than the State unemployment insurance laws. (See note 120, infra, in reference to exemption of children not exempt under the Federal Law.) In this situation the employing unit is placed at a potential tax disadvantage (unless the State tax rate exceeds 2.7 per cent and its employment is highly unstable), since there would be no possibility of obtaining any tax reduction from the full 3 per cent Federal tax.

DOMESTIC SERVICE

Domestic service is excluded under Section 7 (b) and also under Section 7 (e) (1) of the Unemployment Insurance Act. An estimated 75,000 workers are engaged in domestic service in this State. Members of the Employment Stabilization Commission have expressed the opinion that an attempt to bring domestic servants under the Unemployment Insurance Act would present serious administrative problems, particularly in obtaining accurate wage reports from employers. However, an inquiry made to the Employment Security Agency of New York (New York is the one State that covers domestic service at present) revealed that no special administrative problems in connection with this coverage were encountered; in fact, there is "less difficulty than with certain other cases."<sup>107</sup> The New York Law, like the present California Law covers employers of four or more. On such a basis it is estimated that approximately 15,000 workers and 2,000 employers would be involved in California.<sup>108</sup>

Therefore, in extending coverage to employers of four or more domestic servants, it would appear there are actually few administrative difficulties and at the same time a relatively large number of workers could be protected against the hazards of temporary unemployment.

GOVERNMENT SERVICE

There are approximately 465,000 workers in California employed by the State and Federal Government.

Service for the Federal Government or an instrumentality thereof is exempt under Section 7 (e) of the California Act. This provision is found in nearly all States; however, even in the absence of any specific exclusion, the taxation of the Federal Government or an agency thereof would be prohibited as a matter of constitutional law. It should be noted that there are about 282,000 Federal employees in this State, and approximately 244,000 of the Federal employees are engaged by war agencies whose employment may be expected to terminate, at the latest, shortly after the war. Unfortunately, this means that one worker employed by a privately operated war plant is protected by unemployment insurance, while his neighbor doing the same work in a Government plant (such as Mare Island, Hunters Point or McClellan Field) has no such protection. In view of the seriousness of this situation in the post-war period, Federal legislation was proposed to bring Federal employees under State Unemployment Insurance laws through voluntary payments by the Federal Government to the State fund. However, the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act of 1944 contained no such provision when it ultimately became law. The problem is beyond the jurisdiction

"We have encountered no special administrative problems in connection with this coverage. In fact, on the whole we have less difficulty with delinquency than in certain other cases. This seems to be because employers of domestic servants are likely to make their returns through banks, accountants or lawyers, who know the requirements and adhere to them strictly."

Domestic servants subject to the unemployment insurance law of New York, which covers employers of four or more workers on each of 15 days during the year, is as follows:

	Employment in Private Households—New York State
	1940	1941	1942	1943
Average monthly covered employment.....	25,081	24,435	20,962	17,634
Reporting units—second quarter of year.....	3,442	3,607	3,481	3,180

of the State. However, Congress should be urged to reconsider the enactment of such legislation and your committee recommends the adoption of a resolution to this effect.

Service for the State or a subdivision thereof is exempt under Section 7 (f) of the California Act. This exemption affects about 183,000 workers, approximately 28,000 of which are employed by the State itself and the remaining 155,000 by the local government. While employment with the State and local government is relatively stable, particularly where the service is in connection with purely governmental functions, there is question whether or not some of the activities of the local government undertaken in a proprietary capacity, (such as utilities), should be included under the unemployment insurance program. Further study in this field might well be made.

AGRICULTURAL WORKERS

Probably the largest segment of the working population now excluded from coverage for whom unemployment insurance would be particularly helpful is agricultural labor. This group varies from approximately 150,000 to over 220,000 workers, depending on the season of the year. There are, of course, many short-time workers, and to include all agricultural labor would bring under the law many small farmers. However, there has been no study made of the administrative problems involved in attempting to cover the large employers hiring eight or more workers the year round on a similar basis as industrial concerns. Nor has there been an analysis of the actual earnings of such large farming enterprises to ascertain whether or not the imposition of a pay roll tax would cripple the industry or seriously affect it. Where there is no unemployment insurance, the State must pay the cost in terms of higher taxes for relief or public assistance as well as suffer from the consequences of unstable purchasing power. Large scale agriculture forms a major part of the economy of this State and is hardly in a position to justify public subsidy. Further study should be made of this problem to determine what the actual effects of covering agricultural labor would be, in terms of the competitive disadvantage resulting from the tax as compared with the competitive advantage resulting from employment security for the workers, the maintenance of a labor supply, and the reduction in expenditures for public relief and public welfare.<sup>108a</sup>

Agricultural labor is not subject to any of the existing State unemployment insurance laws and is also exempt from the Federal Unemployment Tax Act. Great Britain, however, includes agricultural labor under its unemployment insurance program.

<sup>108a</sup> It should be pointed out that since agricultural labor is not subject to the Federal tax, it is not necessary to impose a State tax rate of 2 7 per cent on this type of employment if it is found that such a tax rate would injure California's large scale agriculture. A 1 per cent or 2 per cent tax could be required from this industry. Today there is no tax imposed.

Your committee has been urged to consider the advisability of adopting the Federal definition of agricultural labor. The Federal definition is that contained in the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.<sup>109</sup> However, there is no inherent reason why the unemployment insurance law of this State should conform to the Federal definition, since the latter involves purely a revenue measure and not an employment security law in which the welfare of the State is directly involved. To adopt the Federal definition in the California act would exclude an estimated additional 60,000 workers.<sup>109a</sup> It would also exempt from tax about 1,400 employers, most of whom are not farmers but commercial packers engaged in fruit and vegetable packing.<sup>109b</sup> The loss to the fund in contributions from this group would be approximately $2,700,000 per year.<sup>109c</sup> Without a more complete study of the entire problem, your committee does not recommend such a restriction of unemployment insurance coverage at this time. It should be pointed out that the Council of State Governments has recommended to the States that "consideration should be given to the coverage of major groups in agricultural processing and to maritime workers."<sup>110</sup>

SELF EMPLOYED

The self employed comprise approximately 415,000 individuals in this State, about one-third of whom are on the farm. The first attempt to include this type of worker was made with the enactment of the Veteran's Readjustment Act of 1944 (the "G.I. Bill").<sup>111</sup> At such time as a study or experience reveals that the unemployment insurance program can be <sup>109</sup> Prior to 1939 the Federal Law and all State laws exempted agricultural labor without defining the term. The application of the law depended on administrative regulations. In 1939, when the Title IX of the Social Security Act was codified in the Internal Revenue Code as the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, a definition of agricultural labor was enacted into law (Section 1426 (h) of the Internal Revenue Code). This statutory definition was broader than the interpretation formerly given to agricultural labor and excluded certain types of employment previously included.

California and about 20 other States follow the old Federal rule and do not define agricultural labor by statute. The administrative interpretation of the California Law is similar to the Federal Act in that both exclude all regular farm workers. However, the California Law differs from the Federal definition in that it does not exclude any services performed off the farm, nor does it exclude certain services performed on the farm. (On the farm services which are covered include mechanics, contractors, and other specialized skilled work, as well as services performed for an independent contractor who does work on the farm.) See Rule 7.1 to the California Unemployment Insurance Act; California Employment Commission v. Butte County Rice Growers Association 25 A. C. 604.

There are 30 States which follow the Federal definition of agricultural labor. They are Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Delaware, Florida, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas, Utah, Virginia, Washington, Wisconsin. In all of these States, except Texas, there is a statutory definition of agricultural labor identical with or similar to the Federal definition. Texas, by regulation, interprets the term "agricultural labor" to be the same as the Federal statute.

The 21 States which do not follow the Federal definition and have a more restricted interpretation of agricultural labor are: Alaska, California, Arkansas, Connecticut, District of Columbia, Kansas, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Montana, Nevada, New Hampshire, New Jersey, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Utah, Vermont, West Virginia, Wyoming. Of these 21 States Arkansas, Oklahoma, and Wyoming have a statutory definition, but it is more restricted than the Federal law and is similar to the interpretation given to agricultural labor by the 18 States which have no statutory definition.

<sup>109a</sup> An actual count made by the Department of Employment for the year ending June, 1944, revealed that the number of jobs in this category ranged from 37,000 in February to 56,000 in July. The number of workers employed during the year period was approximately 105,000 and of these it is estimated about 55,000 (including those not reporting) had sufficient earnings to qualify for benefits. (See also Employment Security Bulletin No. 8, Department of Employment.)

<sup>109c</sup> The actual tabulation made by the Department of Employment for the year period ending June, 1944, revealed that approximately $2,700,000 was collected as a result of worker and employer taxes. The total wages paid by this group of approximately 1,400 employers was $74,698,000. In more normal years total wages are much less, however, and the amount of income to the fund would be approximately $2,000,000 from wage earner and employer contributions. (See Employment Security Bulletin No. 8.)

properly administered and applied to the self-employed and the employer, consideration should be given to the extension of coverage to this group.

Many of those employed in this category would be protected by unemployment insurance through a more careful scrutiny of the real nature of many cases excluded from the present law on the theory that an independent contractor relationship exists.

OTHER COVERAGE PROBLEMS

The other coverage problems arising under the Unemployment Insurance Act appear as follows:

(1) Independent Contractors

Under Section 6.5 of the act, employment is defined as "service . . . performed for wages or under any contract of hire . . .". Section 11 defines "wages" as "all remuneration for personal service." This is the only definition of employment under the California act. In all States, except California and four others,<sup>112</sup> a statutory standard or test is provided in the law for the purpose of determining whether or not the service performed is in subject employment.<sup>113</sup>

The exact status of the present California law is not certain. The earlier judicial interpretations have tended to follow the narrow, common law definition of master and servant. However, recent judicial and administrative decisions have indicated a broader meaning to the definition of employment more in keeping with the nature and purpose of Social Security legislation.<sup>114</sup> Certainly there is need of a standard for unemployment insurance which does not permit an easy avenue of escape from taxation and coverage by having an individual sign a written agreement or make an oral understanding which denominates him an independent contractor when in fact he is an ordinary worker, regularly working for the same employer throughout the year with neither an independent calling nor freedom from control in the performance of his work.

However, apart from the legal refinements involved in the present law, your committee believes that a number of employing units are at present escaping taxation and coverage through spurious independent contractor arrangements. A thorough investigation of the real nature of these arrangements should be made. This situation came to our attention only recently and the committee was unable to explore the subject adequately. The Department of Employment, with its limited field personnel, has not made an intensive audit of any particular area or industry to ascertain the extent of evasion that has prevailed in this respect, although it is conceded that such an investigation is necessary.

<sup>113</sup> The statutory standard found with some variation in over 40 jurisdictions is based primarily on the draft language of the Social Security Board (Employment Security Memorandum No. 13, 1942, p. 1216) and involves the so-called "A," "B," "C" test. Briefly, this test requires, in order to establish an independent contractor relation, (A) freedom from control and direction both in law and in fact; (B) regular service performed in the course of an employer's business by an independent contractor must be performed outside of the place of business of the employer; (C) an independent calling, trade, or business. However, the courts in these jurisdictions have, in some cases, tended to follow closely the common law concept with emphasis on the control element only.

(2) Employment of Children

The problem arising in respect to the coverage of children was brought to the attention of the committee by certain decisions rendered by the Appeals Board of the Department of Employment granting benefits to child actors.<sup>115</sup> In making an investigation of the entire problem of the employment of children, with particular attention focused on the child actor situation your committee was amazed to find the utter lack of statistical data relating to the number of children in this State who have been granted work permits either part-time or full-time, pursuant to the Education Code and Labor Code. We are informed that the school authorities have failed to maintain proper records of the number of work permits issued and with the exception of the Los Angeles City Board of Education, there has been no compliance with Section 1301 of the Labor Code imposing a statutory obligation on the local school authorities to file such reports with the State Departments of Education and Industrial Relations. The information for San Francisco and Los Angeles school districts however, was available in detail. In these two areas the number of children employed appears as follows:

From this report it is seen that there has been a tremendous increase in the number of minors employed since the beginning of the war in the Los Angeles and San Francisco areas.

In general we have found that even those children earning more than $300 a year are not eligible for unemployment insurance benefits, except when not required to go to school. In the case of the child actors, however, special provision has been made by the studios so that employment does not interfere with school attendance. For this reason, the child actors are generally the only group who can qualify for benefits. At a public hearing held by the committee, testimony was given which indicated about 2,000 children are presently engaged in motion picture work and the specific earnings and ages of a select group of child actors were set forth in some detail.<sup>116</sup> The only official records available on the employment of children in the motion picture industry which your committee could obtain related to the years 1939 and 1940 and appear as follows:<sup>117</sup>

100 days or less—2,074 -----	99.33

- (3) 1206 permits were issued to children under seven years of age.

In attempting to ascertain the number of children who have actually been paid unemployment benefits in California, particularly in certain industries where children are usually employed, the following information was obtained from the Department of Employment.

“We have no data showing the number of claimants under 16 years of age except for a study giving the age of claimants in motion-picture production. This study showed that less than 150 claimants under 16 years filed claims during 1943. Nearly all were actors.”<sup>118</sup>

Unfortunately, there is a lack of statistical data both as to the number of children employed in this State and the number who have received unemployment benefits.

With respect to the motion picture industry it appears that approximately 7 per cent of all the children employed filed a claim for unemployment benefits.<sup>118a</sup> The facts available reveal that the payment of benefits to child actors does not involve any significant cost to the Unemployment Fund. However, the individual cases are startling and the use of public money to provide benefits to this group can not be justified. Members of your committee and its representative have visited several local offices of the Department of Employment in Southern California and have actually observed the payment of weekly checks of $20 to youngsters of 10 and 12 years of age. On inquiry it was found that these attractive children were child actors. The local officials of the Department of Employment indicated that in several instances a parent would come into the office with three young children, all of whom had worked in motion pictures, and wait patiently while each child collected a weekly check of $20, or a total of $60 per week in unemployment benefits. Under the provision of the present Unemployment Insurance Law there is no exclusion of children. The Appeals Board has held that child actors are available for work and because of their ability and the prospects of obtaining employment in their profession they are not required to accept other type of work than acting when unemployed.<sup>119</sup>

It is the opinion of your committee that the payment of unemployment benefits to any children who are not permitted to work full-time, whether they are child actors or not, is not consistent with the purpose of the Unemployment Insurance Act which is designed to protect the worker who is a bona fide member of the labor market from the sufferings to himself and his family resulting from temporary unemployment. There is a public purpose served in providing benefits to the full-time worker who becomes temporarily unemployed. There is no real public purpose served in providing benefits to a child who is allowed to work only part-time and is not in any real sense a breadwinner.

Under the unemployment compensation laws of 10 other States provision is made with respect to the service performed by certain students and minors.<sup>120</sup> Your committee has communicated with the administrative agency of each of these States to ascertain what problems were encountered and what provision was made with respect to the Federal tax which makes no exclusion of minors, except in the case of delivery newsboys. In general no complex problems were indicated in the administration of these provisions.

Under the Education and Labor Code of this State children who are 14 years of age may obtain a full-time work permit. The provisions and application of the Child Labor Law in this respect appears from a statement by the Director of the State Department of Industrial Relations submitted before a public hearing held by your committee:<sup>121</sup>

"There seems to be a general misconception concerning the minimum age a child may leave school for full-time work in California. It is popularly believed that no minor under 16 years of age may work full-time and that all children under that age must attend regular school classes.

"I regret to state that that is not the case. Under the California Child Labor Laws, minors as young as 14 may be permitted, and are being permitted, to leave school for full-time employment.

<sup>119</sup> Benefit Decisions 490 and 497, 730, 732 and 736. It should be pointed out, however, that this general rule whereby a child actor can restrict himself to employment in the motion picture industry requires that his prior experience and earnings definitely establish him as a professional actor. (See Benefit Decisions 731, 940.)

<sup>121</sup> Statement by Mr. Paul Scharrenberg submitted before the hearing of the Senate Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance (December 11, 1944) San Francisco, California, pages 1-4.

"California is among the foremost States in matters of progressive labor legislation, but unfortunately, that distinction does not apply with respect to the minimum age at which a minor may leave school to enter the labor force.

"Fifteen States have already made 16 years the minimum age for work during school hours. (New Jersey, New York, Louisiana, Massachusetts, Ohio, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Carolina, Utah, West Virginia, Wisconsin, Connecticut, Florida, and Montana.)

"California is listed among the States which designate 15 years as the minimum age for leaving school. In our State, a minor 15 years of age who has completed the seventh grade, has a definite job, and is physically able to undertake the work, may be granted a permit to leave school to take full-time employment. The minor must attend continuation school classes for at least four hours per week if there is a continuation school in the community.

"Not only may 15-year old youngsters be allowed to work full-time in California, but the law also provides an exception under which a child as young as 14 years may be given a work permit allowing him to leave school to take full-time employment. The conditions for granting such permits are:

1. The child must have completed the eighth grade.
2. He must have a definite job.
3. He must be physically able to undertake the work.
4. His family must be in extreme financial need because of the death, disability or desertion of the father.

"You will recognize that the latter provision is somewhat of an anachronism in this day of old age and survivor's insurance, and aid to dependent children under the provisions of the Social Security Act, and also at a time when there are fairly well developed local social welfare programs.

"I should point out that, as in the case of 15-year-old minors, 14-year-old children who receive full-time work permits are required to attend continuation school classes at least four hours per week if there are continuation schools in their communities." 121<sup>a</sup>

It is on the basis of consistency with the provisions of the Education Code and Labor Code prohibiting the full-time employment of children of tender years that your committee recommends the Unemployment Insurance Act be amended to exclude all children under the minimum age, which is now 14, at which a full-time work permit may be granted. The Unemployment Insurance Act should not include a type of employment which is prohibited by law, except on a part-time basis, and on the ground of sound public policy should be discouraged.

In making this recommendation, cognizance is taken of the fact that all employers who are subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act will be required to pay the full 3 per cent pay roll tax on the services of minors, except in the case of delivery newsboys whose services are excluded from the Federal tax. However, this recommendation is not made to encourage the employment of children by allowing tax savings to those who employ minors nor to give any industry a tax advantage.

(3) Maritime Service

Under Section 7 (c) of the Unemployment Insurance Act, maritime service is exempt from coverage to the extent required by the Constitution and laws of the United States.

The Supreme Court of the United States, in the case of Standard Dredging Corporation v. Murphy (1943, 63 S. Ct. 1067), which involved the identical provisions of the New York Act, held that there was nothing in the Constitution or laws of the United States prohibiting a State from taxing maritime service. Acting under the authority of this decision and the opinion of the Attorney General of the State of California,<sup>122</sup> maritime service has been subject to the California Act.<sup>123</sup>

In view of the fact that maritime operations commonly transcend State boundaries, the problem of administration is similar to that which was created in attempting to cover railroad employment by State laws. The most satisfactory arrangement for proper and adequate unemployment insurance protection for this group of workers would seem to lie in the adoption of a Federal law similar to the present Railroad Unemployment Insurance Act. Although it may be contended that such Federal action would be a further inroad on States' rights and a move in the direction of complete federalization of unemployment insurance, the stronger argument appears to be that the States have a better claim to State administered unemployment insurance if they adequately cover employment within the jurisdiction of the State and provide a prompt method of benefit payments to workers within the State and to those migrating among the States, without attempting to cover employment that is predominately outside the jurisdiction of any one State. Maritime service involves employers with a commercial domicile in several States and workers who move from one State to another, as well as from one country to another. Although the California Employment Stabilization Commission feels that maritime service could be handled on a State basis if all the States involved are willing to cooperate and has been instrumental in securing Federal legislation of this type, nevertheless the difficulties involved in making benefit payments as well as in tax collection are recognized.

There is Federal legislation now pending before Congress to permit the States to cover maritime service.<sup>124</sup> However, the bill does not propose to cover all maritime workers.<sup>125</sup> Since it is likely this bill will become law and the problem of providing unemployment insurance to seamen is to be handled by State law, it has been suggested that the California Unemployment Insurance Act should be amended to conform with the proposed Federal law, although this will exclude workers who are

<sup>123</sup> The Tax Division of the Department of Employment has not applied the law to any maritime service in which the Federal Government through the United States Shipping Administration has been involved. The legal question is whether or not the workers on these vessels are government employees. The opinion of the Attorney General indicates that at least in certain circumstances where the vessel is not operated by the United States Shipping Administration itself, the seamen are not government employees. Note 122, supra.

<sup>125</sup> In general the proposed amendment to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, would follow the Federal Insurance Contributions Act (old age and survivors insurance) and exclude service on a foreign flag vessel irrespective of the residence of the owner or the country in which it is operated, and also excludes any vessel of American registry which does not touch an American port. Likewise the "officer or member of a crew" concept is proposed.

presently covered.<sup>126</sup> Under such a suggestion an individual employed by the same employer may be protected by unemployment insurance on one trip and denied unemployment insurance on the next, merely because on the second trip the vessel was one that had been registered with a foreign country.

In view of these circumstances, your committee recommends that provision be made to authorize the commission to enter into reciprocal arrangements to avoid any possible double taxation of employing units and to improve coverage of the workers. However, in making this recommendation which is necessary for the operation of a State system covering maritime service, it is not intended to suggest that it is necessary to change the existing California law with respect to maritime service and exclude from unemployment insurance those seamen employed on a vessel of foreign registry which is owned and/or operated by an employer in this State under a contract of hire entered into in this State.

(4) Miscellaneous Issues (Newsboys and Insurance Agents)

Other coverage problems arising under the California Act relate to those services which are not included under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, namely, service performed by insurance agents paid on a commission basis and delivery newsboys under 18 years of age. The question is fundamentally one of granting a tax exemption to a particular group.<sup>127</sup> The coverage of these services under the California Act has presented no particular administrative problem which might justify special legislation. The committee at public hearings has been urged to consider, in particular, the adoption of the newsboy exclusion which is now found in some 38 other States. However, in attempting to obtain from several employers involved the facts concerning the number of delivery newsboys under 18 years of age rendering service either as an employee or an independent contractor for various newspapers in a particular area of the State, the committee has received a polite refusal, and for this reason is not in a position to set forth any specific facts concerning the number of newsboys presently employed who are considered independent contractors and thereby completely excluded from the scope of the Unemployment Insurance Act.<sup>128</sup> General statements made before the public hearings have indicated that most newspapers consider newsboys as independent contractors.<sup>129</sup> The majority of your committee believes that a general exclusion of all minors under 14 years of age will solve any problem which may arise if and when newsboys are actually <sup>126</sup> Under the present California Act all maritime service for an employer within the taxing jurisdiction of California is subject to the extent permitted by the Constitution and laws of the United States. There is no statutory limitation or exclusion in the State law. See Section 7 (c) of the California Act; Ops. Cal. Atty. Gen. NS 5261 (December 17, 1943).

<sup>127</sup> Any employing unit which is not subject to the Federal tax receives a tax reduction if it is also exempt from the California Unemployment Insurance Act. However, any exemption from the California Act where there is no parallel exemption from the Federal tax will require the employing unit to contribute the full amount to the Federal Government.

"There are 24,649 home delivery newspaper routes in the State. The replacement, or turnover, averages 238.8 per cent a year which would show 58,880 different carrier boys a year. These 58,880 boys earn an estimated average total of $125.15 a year. The average age of the boys is 12½ years."

The specific information requested several months ago has not been received, although several employers stated that they had compiled the data and turned it over to the California Newspaper Publishers Association.

However, in some cases the legal validity of this position may be open to question. See California Employment Commission v. Downtown Shopping News Corp. 2 Cal. (2d) 421; California Employment Commission v. Bates 24 Cal. (2d) 432.

considered employees and not independent contractors, and this may be done without special legislation for the newspaper industry.

It is the unanimous opinion of your committee that such exclusions as delivery newsboys under 18 years of age and insurance agents paid by commission<sup>129a</sup> should be considered on the basis of what is most desirable for the State of California in providing an adequate unemployment insurance law and not on the extent of tax savings which may be obtained because of exemptions in favor of certain groups under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act. The committee does not feel that exemptions should be written into the law in favor of any particular employer or group of employers unless absolutely necessary for the purpose of improving the unemployment insurance system in this State.

B—Benefit Provisions

A number of important problems relating to unemployment benefits have received our attention and consideration. Some involve limitations under the provisions of the present law, while others arise from a lack of proper administration of the existing provisions of the law. An attempt has been made to appraise these problems in terms of their significance in the postwar period under the economic conditions which may be reasonably expected to prevail.

QUALIFYING WAGE

A worker must earn $300 in subject employment during his base period (a one-year period) in order to file a valid claim for benefits under the California Act. This is the highest earnings requirement of any State having a similar flat qualifying wage;<sup>130</sup> it is also the highest minimum earnings requirement of any State having a variable qualifying wage.<sup>131</sup>

The actual effect of the earnings requirement in California may be appreciated from the fact that during the year period ending September 30, 1943, a total of 1,150,000 individuals were employed in subject employment, but earned less than $300. During the same period the total number earning more than $300 was 2,650,000. Thus, approximately 32 per cent of all workers engaged in subject employment during the year made less than $300. At the same time, this large group of over 1 million individuals who were unable to qualify for benefits contributed an estimated total of $1,257,000 to the Unemployment Fund as a result of the 1 per cent employee tax.<sup>132</sup>

The purpose of the qualifying wage requirement is alleged to be to exclude from the unemployment insurance program those workers not ordinarily attached to the labor market. However, such an arbitrary determination applicable to all workers irrespective of earning capacity or length of employment operates inequitably and unjustly in many instances, particularly where the worker is employed in both subject and <sup>129a</sup> It was estimated by the Department in 1941 that about 3,000 individuals would be excluded by the commission basis insurance agent exclusion. Since there is no Federal tax on this service, such a provision would induce other employers to pay agents on a commission basis and thereby exclude even a larger number.

<sup>130</sup> During 1945 (as of March 31, 1945) at least two States have increased the wage eligibility requirement to $300 and therefore California is no longer the only State with a $300 uniform qualifying wage. See Benefit Table in Appendix C.

<sup>131</sup> Most States have a variable qualifying wage which is computed by multiplying the weekly benefit amount by a certain number, such as 14, 20, 30, or even 40. See Benefit Table in Appendix C. The statement in the text was true prior to 1945 legislative changes in other States.

nonsubject employment. Also, it should be noted that in addition to the qualifying wage there are other eligibility requirements which must be met in order to qualify for benefits.

It is the opinion of your committee that further study should be made of the various factors involved in evaluating a proper qualifying wage requirement. Among others, consideration should be given to the average wage of the ordinary workman in a normal year; the fact that many workers are engaged in both subject and nonsubject employment; the consequences of an alternative provision in terms of its effect on the Employment Fund and the public relief load; and the administrative problems involved.

WAITING PERIOD

Under Section 57 (d) of the act, an unemployed individual who is eligible for benefits must serve a two-weeks waiting period.<sup>133</sup> Thus, it is not until after the third week of unemployment that a qualified worker is entitled to his first week of benefits.

It has always been conceded that the purpose of an unemployment insurance program is to provide benefits when unemployed and not four or five weeks thereafter. Since the commission is now in a position to make payments within two weeks after a claim is filed, the committee feels that the waiting period should be reduced to one week in a benefit year.

The waiting period is a procedural requirement affecting the time of payment of benefits and does not increase or decrease the total amount of benefits payable to any individual during his benefit year. However, in times of moderately high employment when most unemployed workers do not exhaust their entire benefit award during the year, a reduction in waiting period will increase to some extent the total amount of payments from the fund. It has been estimated by the Department of Employment that a one-week waiting period would increase fund liability about 4 per cent under 1940 conditions and approximately 7 per cent under 1942 conditions.<sup>134</sup>

A one-week waiting period was required under the laws of 32 States as of January 1, 1945. During the current legislative sessions, several additional States have adopted a one-week waiting period, and others have legislation pending on the subject. (See Table in Appendix D.) No waiting period exists in the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 (The G. I. Bill). Before several public hearings, organized labor has recommended the complete elimination of the waiting period from the California Act.<sup>135</sup>

It is the unanimous recommendation of your committee that the two-week waiting period in the California Act be reduced to one week.

DISQUALIFICATIONS <sup>135</sup>

The major conditions of ineligibility or disqualifications under the California Act are found in Sections 56 and 58. Briefly, they are as follows: Two weeks for voluntarily leaving work without good cause; one to six weeks for discharge for misconduct; one to four weeks for making a false statement; an indefinite period for refusing suitable employment without good cause; and an indefinite period for leaving work because of a trade dispute. Until the recent case of Whitcomb Hotel, Inc. v. the California Employment Commission, 24 Cal (2d) 753, decided by the California Supreme Court on August 18, 1944, the disqualification for refusing suitable employment has been for a period of from one to six weeks (prior to 1942, for a period of from one to four weeks).<sup>137</sup>

The disqualification of a worker from the receipt of benefits involves a consideration of individual factors making it desirable to place some discretion in the hands of the commission imposing the penalty. The facts of each case differ and the commission acting in a quasi-judicial capacity should be permitted to vary the period of ineligibility according to the seriousness and nature of the circumstances in each case. In most States, disqualifications are on the basis of a variable number of weeks similar to the practice which has been followed in California.<sup>138</sup> It is the opinion of your committee that this flexibility in the law should be retained. The committee has communicated with the administrative agencies in those few States which now impose total disqualifications and the cancellation of wage credits. It was found that in practically all of these States there is a tendency, in view of the harshness of the disqualification, to place more emphasis on the good cause exception whereby the entire penalty is waived.

A worker who through his own conduct has contributed to his present unemployment, but is still available for work can be adequately penalized and discouraged from such conduct by suspending his benefit rights for a specified period, determined in each case by the commission, rather than completely remove benefit rights in all cases for an indefinite period. Many of the cases which are urged as abuses of the law that can be corrected by complete disqualifications are found on analysis to be cases in which the individual is not available for work. With a proper application and enforcement of the availability requirement, including a field investigation of individual claimants, such cases that are frequently cited as "voluntary quits" or "refusals of suitable work" when in fact there is no desire to work on the part of the claimant can be effectively denied benefits under the present law. There is no need to distort the purpose of disqualifications<sup>139</sup> which are designed to delay the payment of benefits to the worker who is ready, willing, and able to work, but who may have contributed to his current state of involuntary unemployment by his action on one particular occasion.

<sup>135</sup> Disqualifications as used herein refer to the common term applied to penalties for refusing suitable employment, voluntary quitting, discharge for misconduct, etc. It does not include availability for work which is an eligibility condition frequently called a disqualification. See discussion of "eligibility for benefits" and "disqualifications" on pages 26 and 27, supra.

<sup>137</sup> The one- to six-week disqualification for refusing suitable employment which has prevailed in California until the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Whitcomb Hotel Case existed by virtue of Rule 56.1 adopted November 27, 1942, by the California Employment Commission. Prior to 1942 the rule provided a one- to four-week disqualification. The decision of the Supreme Court held the rule of the Commission invalid on the ground that it violated the express language of Section 56 of the Act.

Where there are several refusals of suitable employment the claimant will be denied benefits today on the ground of not being available for work, since his conduct justifies the conclusion that his unemployment is voluntary.<sup>140</sup>

It is the considered opinion of your committee that all major disqualifications should be for a specified flexible period and should continue to operate as a suspension or postponement rather than a cancellation of benefit rights.

Much difficulty and confusion in the administration of the law has resulted because of the different penalty periods which are imposed for each disqualification. In view of the discrepancy between the disqualification period of six weeks maximum for discharge for misconduct, and two weeks maximum for voluntarily quitting, we have found a practice developing of construing a voluntary quit as a discharge for misconduct because of the more severe penalty imposed. Also, it is generally conceded that voluntarily leaving work without good cause is, in effect, a refusal of suitable employment without good cause and there is little reason for a lighter penalty in one case than the other. Because of these circumstances it is the further opinion of your committee that a uniform period of disqualification should be written into the law.

Since the adoption of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 (the "G. I. Bill"), which provides for uniform disqualifications of one to five weeks and an additional eight weeks (total of 13 weeks) in cases of successive disqualifying acts, these provisions have been suggested as a reasonable pattern to follow, and all States are encouraged to consider enacting them into their law. Both the Social Security Board and the Council of State Governments have recommended similar uniform disqualifications, as well as the State Department of Employment. As a move in the direction toward uniform disqualifications in all States, and in order to improve the existing law of this State, your committee recommends their adoption.

The disqualification provisions in each State appear in the Disqualification Table in Appendix D of this report.

WEEKLY BENEFIT AMOUNT (DEPENDENTS ALLOWANCE)

The weekly amount of benefits payable under the California Act varies from $10 to $20, according to the amount of earnings in a previous calendar quarter. In general, benefits are approximately 60 to 70 per cent of the average weekly wage of an individual, providing he does not earn more than $30 per week. However, for the individual customarily earning $50 per week, the weekly benefit amount is only 40 per cent of his actual earning capacity and is hardly adequate compensation for the wage loss sustained.

Prior to 1945 changes in the law, 10 States provided a maximum weekly benefit amount of $20, and one State a maximum of $22. Only four States provided a minimum of $10 a week. During the current year, one State has increased the maximum weekly amount to $25. The amount paid by each State with recent changes appears in Appendix C of this report. The Social Security Board has recommended that the maximum weekly benefit amount be increased to $25 in order to more adequately compensate for the wage loss sustained by many workers.

It is the opinion of your committee that, rather than increase the maximum amount of weekly benefits, provision should be made for the payment of additional benefits to those workers who are the head of a family and have dependent minors to support. Although the District of Columbia is the only jurisdiction which prior to 1945 provided dependents allowances,<sup>141</sup> it is our feeling that such a provision should be made in the California Law, allowing an additional amount for each dependent minor not to exceed a certain number of dependents and restricting the total amount of benefits to less than 80 per cent of the average weekly wages received by the worker. In order to prevent any discrimination against a worker who has dependents, the additional amount in weekly benefits should not be made chargeable to any employer's merit rating account.

It is recognized that such a provision would be unnecessary if the weekly amount payable were adequate to compensate for the cost of living of the wage earner and his family during a period of temporary unemployment. However, such a provision for dependents allowance would not place unemployment insurance on a needs basis. Dependents allowances do not relate to the right to get benefits, but only affects the amount of benefits payable which has always taken into consideration the amount needed for the worker to maintain economic subsistence. So long as the receipt of benefits is not based on need and remains a matter of right, the unemployment insurance principle is not disturbed.<sup>142</sup> Your committee recommends an increase in benefits for the wage earner with a family rather than an increase for all workers in order to more adequately protect the working population against the risk of temporary unemployment.<sup>142a</sup>

DURATION OF BENEFITS

One of the most important cushions against hazards of postwar unemployment is the Unemployment Insurance Fund which has been rapidly accumulating reserves from the contributions of workers and employers during these prosperous wartime employment conditions. Apart from all the complex provisions of the unemployment insurance law, the primary concern of the ordinary worker is just how long benefits will last during a period of unemployment. In short, what security and protection does the law provide before compelling the individual to turn to relief and charity for the support of himself and family?

Under the present law the duration of benefits ranges from nine weeks to a maximum of 23.4 weeks, depending on the amount and extent of previous earnings.<sup>143</sup> However, the average potential duration of all claims

<sup>141</sup> At the time of printing (March 31, 1945) the State of Nevada had enacted a dependents' allowance provisions in its law. See Section 3 (d) of the Nevada Unemployment Compensation Law.

<sup>142</sup> From a strict insurance principle, the individual who has a family would require a greater protection against the risk of unemployment, and for that reason select a policy which provided larger benefits. Although the amount of benefits is fixed by statute under unemployment insurance, the need for greater protection for the worker who is the head of a family remains. Furthermore, unemployment insurance has been sustained principally on the ground that it serves a public purpose by reducing expenditures for relief for the unemployed and benefits are adjusted to provide only the amount necessary for economic subsistence which is greater for the unemployed who have a family than for the unemployed who are single.

<sup>142a</sup> The additional cost to the fund was estimated by the Department of Employment to be 4.3 per cent during 1944 on the basis of $2 for each dependent not to exceed 4 and in no case to exceed 80 per cent of the weekly wage.

filed during 1943 was 18.6 weeks.<sup>143a</sup> The average maximum number of weeks benefits could have been paid under the law in previous years was not available from the statistical section of the Department of Employment. On the basis of 1943 claims those unemployed in this State after the war will be able to receive on an average a total of slightly more than four months of benefits during an entire benefit year.

All estimates reveal that even under favorable economic conditions and rapid postwar reconstruction and reemployment there will be a period of high unemployment in California ranging from a minimum of six months to one year. Unless the duration is extended, it may be necessary to impose additional taxes to finance a large relief program when at the same time there is a high reserve in the unemployment fund. During the year 1940 the State of California spent $51,000,000 of its own funds derived from State taxes for direct relief.<sup>143b</sup> In addition, the various county governments made expenditures for public assistance. One of the primary objectives of unemployment insurance is to accumulate reserves in times of high employment in order that expenditures for relief may be kept at a minimum in times of low employment.

Under the laws of 17 States a uniform duration of benefits is provided for all eligible individuals during a benefit year.<sup>144</sup> With uniform duration, the amount of weekly benefits varies according to the earning capacity of the particular individual, but the length of protection against unemployment is the same for all workers whether they have a high or low earning capacity. It is the opinion of your committee that the California Act should be amended to provide for uniform duration of benefits for all workers rather than the present variable duration formula.

In view of the seriousness of the postwar employment conditions in California, it is the further opinion and recommendation of your committee that provision be made for at least 26 weeks of benefits to provide a cushion against this temporary period of high unemployment. Six months of unemployment insurance protection for California workers is the very minimum that is needed to face the imminent postwar reconversion period. At the same time, several of the serious weaknesses in the present benefit formula would be corrected, particularly with respect to the dislocation caused by the 1943 amendment increasing the weekly amount from $18 to $20 without changing the total benefit award.<sup>145</sup>

The precise effect of 26 weeks uniform duration on the liability against the fund depends on various unknown factors. However, when employment conditions are favorable, the increase in duration will not increase

<sup>145</sup> The 1943 amendment increased the weekly benefit amount under Section 54 from $18 to $20 per week, but there was no change made in the total benefit award under Section 53 of the act. The effect of such action was to reduce the maximum duration of benefits from 26 weeks to 23.4 weeks. Prior to 1943 the maximum total award of $468 at $18 per week provided 26 weeks of benefits. After 1943, the maximum total award of $468 at $20 per week provides only 23.4 weeks of benefits.

Another effect of the 1943 change has been to permit certain individuals earning less in wages to receive more in benefits. Today a person earning from $800 to $900 per year may receive a total of $320 in benefits (after 1943, formula has been  $16 \times $20$  or total of $320; prior to 1943, formula was  $16 \times $18$  or total of $288). However, the individual earning from $900 to $1,000 per year receives only $306 in benefits (same after 1943 as before 1943).

The present benefit formula is highly irregular, particularly because of the fact that the benefit award for the wage bracket from $550 to $900 per year is determined by multiplying 16 times the weekly benefit amount while all the other wage brackets are fixed amounts. Thus the increase of the weekly benefit amount in 1943 without changing the total award of benefits operated, perhaps unwittingly, to increase the total amount of benefits for only this one group earning between $550 and $900 in wages.

the amount of money paid out of the fund to any substantial degree. In 1943 for example, only 17 per cent of the workers who filed a claim exhausted their benefit rights.<sup>146</sup> In 1940, however, 56 per cent, of the claimants exhausted their entire award.<sup>147</sup> Your committee requested an estimate from the Department of Employment of the additional cost of 26 weeks uniform duration of benefits on the basis of actual cases and experience during a previous period. After considerable delay, a tabulation was obtained from the department based on a sample of about 12,000 cases with earnings during the fiscal year ending 1942. The table, a copy of which appears in Appendix II, reveals the liability for 350,000 claimants in terms of the actual cost to the fund and the potential cost to the fund if every claimant were to exhaust his entire award, under the present formula and under two types of 26 weeks uniform formulae. From this study it appears that the actual liability added by a 26 weeks uniform formula with reduced benefit amounts for those individuals with low annual earnings, would not exceed the liability under the present law by more than 12 per cent. The potential cost is estimated to be about 25 per cent above the present formula.<sup>148</sup>

In terms of the amount of money paid in benefits during 1944, a limited 26 weeks uniform formula would have increased the benefit payments by about $7,500,000 (in 1940 total benefit payments were $65,000,000, the maximum paid out in any one year to date). In the first postwar year with a maximum drain on the fund of an estimated 350 million dollars under the present formula, an unlimited uniform 26 weeks formula would increase this amount an additional 80 million dollars, according to an estimate made by the Department of Employment.<sup>149</sup> It was indicated that with a proper limitation, the additional amount under 26 weeks uniform duration in the first postwar year would be considerably less than 80 million dollars. On the basis of the estimate of the postwar solvency of the fund made by the Department of Employment,<sup>150</sup> there is no indication that even an additional 100 million dollars in benefit payments during the first postwar year would endanger the stability of the fund. Under the present formula with benefit payments of 350 million dollars during the first year immediately following the war, the unemployment fund would not fall below 500 million dollars according to the study made by the Department of Employment<sup>151</sup> under assumed postwar conditions based on the State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission's analyses.

In brief, therefore, it would appear that the present law can be amended to more adequately meet the postwar unemployment problem in this State without endangering the solvency of the Unemployment Fund and without the necessity of securing a temporary loan under the terms of the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act of 1944 which was enacted for the purpose of encouraging the States to provide an adequate unemployment insurance program.<sup>152</sup>

<sup>149</sup> Your committee wishes to point out that a request was made to the Department of Employment more than four months ago for the estimated cost of a 26-week uniform duration formula in the postwar period. ## C—Tax Provisions

In connection with the taxing features of the California Unemployment Insurance Act several fundamental issues have been considered by your committee as well as procedural problems in tax collection and enforcement.

WORKER CONTRIBUTIONS

California is one of the few States that still imposes a tax on employees for unemployment insurance. There is no tax on the worker under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act, and only three other States require employee contribution today.

In making a general survey of this subject, it was found that in the development of unemployment insurance in the United States the laws of 10 different States have at one time or another required workers contributions.<sup>153</sup> However, all of these States except Alabama, California, New Jersey and Rhode Island, have repealed the tax. California and New Jersey require a flat 1 per cent tax on wages. Rhode Island imposes a one-half per cent tax and Alabama provides for a system of merit rating for the worker with a tax ranging from .1 to 1 per cent. In these few States the worker is placed at an economic disadvantage since benefit provisions of other States without worker contributions are equally liberal if not more so. The direct taxation of the worker for unemployment insurance, although common in other countries, is not consistent with the theory of unemployment insurance in the United States. In this country, unemployment insurance is considered a cost of production which is added to the price of goods and services. Thus, in taxing the employer, it is recognized that he may to a large extent shift the burden of the tax to the public. The worker, however, cannot shift what is, in effect, a gross income tax levied on his wages.

The effect of employee contribution in California and the problems created thereby have come to the attention of the committee on numerous occasions.

In the first instance, there are more than 1 million workers each year in California who work in subject employment and are required to pay a 1 per cent tax on their wages, but earn less than $300 and are therefore not able to qualify for any unemployment insurance benefits whatsoever.<sup>154</sup> During a one-year period ending September 30, 1943, an estimated total of $1,257,000 was collected in taxes from this group for whom no unemployment insurance protection was afforded.<sup>155</sup> This situation is felt to be grossly unjust. In order to make refunds to these workers your committee was informed a serious administrative problem would be presented in view of the fact there are over 1 million workers involved.

Also the uniform rate of tax for workers, while sound as a revenue measure, is not consistent with the merit rating principle of taxation used with respect to the employer in this State. There is no reduction in tax rate in those cases where the worker has received no benefits over a three-year period. The present California law imposes a uniform tax on workers but a variable tax on employers. Alabama is the only one of the four States imposing worker contributions which provides for a system of merit rating for the employee. However, under the Alabama Law the reduced rate for the worker is not based on his individual experience with employment but depends on the employer's experience with benefit payments and a State experience factor.

The total amount contributed to the Unemployment Fund by the workers of this State has been significant. As of February 28, 1945, a total of $275,606,068 was paid since the beginning of contributions in 1936. These worker contributions exceed the total amount of all benefits paid out of the fund by approximately $40,000,000. In effect, with war-time employment conditions, the 1 per cent employee tax has more than financed the program in California up to this time.

Another effect of worker contributions in this State which your committee has encountered is the general tendency of the worker to look upon the program as a compulsory saving plan from which withdrawals may be made irrespective of eligibility conditions or the cause of his unemployment. However, this situation could be corrected to a great extent by a more effective administration in respect to education and law enforcement. The most frequent complaint is registered by those workers who are compelled to pay but are unable to qualify for benefits, either because of insufficient earnings or some disqualification. In addition, the many workers who have never drawn any benefits feel that the tax, without any provision for a refund, is unfair and inequitable. The practical problem of justifying the tax on the employee is particularly difficult in view of the fact that in other States unemployment insurance is and has been financed entirely without worker contributions.

It is the unanimous opinion of your committee that hereafter the money collected by the 1 per cent worker contribution in California should be deposited into a separate fund to be used solely to provide benefits equivalent to those now paid for unemployment to those workers who are unemployed because of illness or injury, for which no compensation is made. The solvency study prepared by the department which appears in Appendix E shows that the Unemployment Fund during the worst postwar year will have a wide margin of safety without any worker contributions. In fact, the study reveals that if worker contributions were discontinued effective September, 1945, the Unemployment Fund at the lowest postwar level would have a balance of $446,000,000 rather than a balance of $527,000,000 with employee contributions.<sup>156</sup> In a more normal period, the 1 per cent employee tax is not necessary to maintain the unemployment insurance system.

It is also the opinion of the chairman of the committee that employee contributions should be eliminated from the California Act, in the event they are not used to provide a temporary unemployment disability insurance program. The workers of this State have paid in the form of a direct gross income tax for more than all of the benefits they have received, as well as for indirect benefits which have accrued to the State as a whole in the form of reduced relief (and therefore taxes), stabilized purchasing power, and a higher standard of living. It is only proper and just that the cost of unemployment insurance in this State should be treated the same as it is in practically every other State in the Union, that is, as a cost of industrial production which is added to the price of the goods produced by the worker, rather than a direct gross income tax on the wages of the worker. A careful examination of the laws of the other States will reveal that the benefits provision of many States are equivalent to and in several instances more liberal than those in California. The 1 per cent gross income tax on the worker is not necessary to maintain the unemployment insurance program of this State.

Actually, California workers paid a total tax for State unemployment insurance during 1944 of $53,000,000, while the employers saved from merit rating $30,000,000. Furthermore, the solvency study prepared by the Department of Employment shows that if the 1 per cent worker contribution is retained in the law, California workers will pay a total of $114,770,000 during the three years 1945, 1946, and 1947, while California employers will save through merit rating during the same period a total of $109,790,000.<sup>157</sup> In other words, the State unemployment insurance tax on the worker (which is a gross income tax) will supply the fund with an amount about equal to the tax reduction extended to the employer against both State and Federal taxes (which are excise taxes).<sup>158</sup>

In view of these circumstances and the fact that nearly three hundred million dollars has already been paid into the fund by California workers while in other states no worker contributions whatsoever have been made, it is recommended that the tax on the employee be eliminated from the Unemployment Insurance Act of this State.

MERIT RATING

On several occasions before public hearings, the committee has been urged to consider the elimination of merit rating, or experience rating as it is frequently called, from the California Act.<sup>159</sup> Merit rating in this State allows individual employers to reduce their tax rate from a standard rate of 2.7 per cent to as low as 1 per cent and is directly related to the additional credit provision of the Federal Unemployment Tax Act.<sup>160</sup>

Briefly, your committee has found that labor throughout the State is opposed to merit rating, on the ground that since every dollar paid

<sup>157</sup> See Tables 1 and 3 in Appendix E. From Table 1 it is seen that the average employer tax will be reduced from the standard 2.7 per cent rate by .8 per cent in 1945; 1 per cent in 1946; and 1.15 per cent in 1947. The worker contribution remains at 1 per cent for all years involved. From the taxable wages in Table B the total tax on the employee may be compared with the total tax reduction for the employer as follows:

	Total Worker Contributions	Total Employer's Tax Reduction By Merit Rating
1945 -----	$46,910,000	$37,530,000
1946 -----	38,560,000	38,560,000
1947 -----	29,300,000	33,695,000
Total -----	$114,770,000	$109,785,000

<sup>158</sup> As pointed out in Chapter II-B, supra, employers of eight or more are required to pay a 3 per cent Federal pay roll tax. They may deduct 2.7 per cent from this tax where contributions are made to a State unemployment fund under an approved State law. However, if the State tax is reduced by merit rating to 1 per cent or to zero (in some States), a 2.7 per cent credit may still be taken against the Federal tax.

It should be pointed out that both the State and Federal taxes on the employer are excise taxes on the right to employ.

in benefits to the worker tends to decrease the employers opportunity to get a lower tax, it encourages employers to contest the payment of benefits to workers, to promote legislation restricting benefits and to oppose liberalization and extension of the unemployment insurance program. On the other hand, we have found that business favors merit rating on the ground that many employers with good employment experience are granted tax savings.<sup>161</sup>

From the foregoing data, it will be seen that in 1944, about 70 per cent of all taxable employers paid a standard rate of 2.7 per cent for State unemployment insurance while 16 per cent paid a tax rate of only 1 per cent. The total tax savings for the 16,000 employers receiving a reduced tax rate in 1944 was $30,000,000. In terms of size of firms it is seen that 72 per cent of the employers with pay rolls over $1,000,000 obtained a tax reduction while only 35 per cent of the employers with pay rolls under $5,000 per year received a reduced tax rate.

Since under the operation of merit rating certain employers are required to pay a standard rate of tax while other employers are permitted to pay a lower rate of tax for the support of a governmental program which benefits all employers and other individuals equally in reducing the cost for relief, stabilizing purchasing power, providing security to the working population, it is necessary to find some public purpose that is served in order to justify such individual tax variation and unequal distribution of this particular cost of government. Although no court has passed upon the constitutional validity of merit rating, the purpose on which it is based is the incentive for stabilization of employment. In fact, the California Unemployment Insurance Act specifies that its purpose is to encourage stabilization of employment as well as to provide unemployment benefits to those involuntarily unemployed.<sup>167</sup>

In accepting the thesis that it is possible for an individual employer to stabilize his employment and that the unemployment insurance tax reduction is the real incentive for stabilization, your committee has found on analysis that the present formula for computing merit rating does not reflect stabilization of employment. The basis for the conclusion may be illustrated in part as follows:

(1) Assume Employer "X" begins business in 1940 and employs 100 workers paying them a monthly salary of $150 during 1940 and 1941, and a monthly salary of $200 during each year thereafter. His employment record would appear as follows:

Year	Number of Workers	Monthly Salary	Annual Pay Roll
1940 -----	100	$150	$180,000
1941 -----	100	150	180,000
1942 -----	100 (80)	200	240,000 (224,000)
1943 -----	100 (80)	200	240,000 (224,000)
1944 -----	100	200	240,000
1945 -----	100	200	240,000

Supposing Employer "X" laid off 20 workers during the last four months of 1942 and the last four months of 1943 and the workers laid off received unemployment benefits of $20 per week for the period of their unemployment.<sup>168</sup> Under these circumstances, with unstabilized employment Employer "X" would pay a tax rate of 2.7 per cent during 1944 and 1945, as well as during the previous years during which he could not qualify for merit rating because of the three-year experience requirement.<sup>169</sup> During 1944 and 1945 he would pay a tax of $6,480 each year.<sup>170</sup>

(2) Supposing, however, Employer "Y" begins business at the same time, employs the same number of workers, pays the same salary and lays off 20 employees during the last four months of 1942 and 1943 in the identical manner as Employer "X," with the difference that the workers laid off become reemployed by another firm or do not elect to file a claim for unemployment benefits or are held ineligible because on vacation. Under these circumstances, Employer "Y" with the same

Year	Contributions	Charges	Pay Roll	Tax Rate
1940 -----	$4,860	0	$180,000	2.7%
1941 -----	4,860	0	180,000	2.7%
1942 -----	6,048	$6,000	224,000	2.7%
1943 -----	6,048	6,000	224,000	2.7%
1944 -----	6,480	0	240,000	2.7%
1945 -----	6,480	0	240,000	2.7%

Under the act the tax rate applies for a calendar year but is computed as of June 30th of the preceding year, which is known as the computation date. All charges and contributions up to the computation date are included in determining the net reserve balance, but the average base pay roll relates to the average pay rolls for the three completed calendar years which precede the computation date. Thus the tax rate for 1944 is computed as of June 30, 1943, and is based on the average pay rolls during 1940, 1941, and 1942. The actual computation would be as follows:

Net Reserve Balance as of June, 1943	Average Base Pay Roll for 1940, 1941, 1942	Reserve Ratio	Tax Rate for 1944
$13,008	$194,668	.068	2.7%

The tax rate for 1945 would be computed as follows:

Net Reserve Balance as of June, 1944	Average Base Pay Roll for 1941, 1942, 1943	Reserve Ratio	Tax Rate for 1945
$13,058	$209,333	.062	2.7%

unstabilized employment record as Employer "X" would nevertheless receive a tax rate of 2 per cent during 1944 and his total tax for that year would be $4,800 or $1,600 less than the amount paid by Employer "X".<sup>171</sup> Furthermore, during the calendar year 1945, Employer "Y" would have a tax rate of only 1 per cent and his total tax for the year would be $2,400, or $4,080 less than the amount paid by Employer "X".<sup>172</sup> Thus with the same employment record maintained by both Employer "X" and Employer "Y" the merit rating formula under the Unemployment Insurance Act permits a wide variation in tax rates.

From the foregoing it is seen that the present formula is seriously defective and not in keeping with its purpose of providing stabilized employment, since an employer may receive a large tax reduction as a reward when in fact he has not maintained regular employment. A description of the merit rating formula found in the California Act will reveal the weaknesses which create such gross inequities in taxation. Briefly there are three factors involved in computing merit rating.<sup>173</sup>

- (1) Total contributions by the employer.
- (2) Total charges against the employer.
- (3) Average annual pay roll of the employer over a three-year period.

The actual tax rate for any employer depends on the ratio of all his contributions less all benefit charges to his average pay roll, from this ratio ( $\frac{\text{contributions less charges}}{\text{average pay roll}}$ ) the tax is determined annually at one of the following five rates: 2.7 per cent, 2.5 per cent, 2 per cent, 1.5 per cent, 1 per cent. Since pay rolls may expand or decrease even though the same workers are hired the year round, the formula will not in fact reflect the stabilization of an employer who keeps the same employment record throughout the year. On the other hand, an employer may decrease the number of workers during the year and maintain unstabilized employment, yet if the workers laid off are immediately employed or do not file a claim for benefits or are disqualified from benefits, there is no charge against his reserve account and the present merit rating formula considers such an employer as having stabilized employment. In addition, after an employer has accumulated a large reserve balance his employment may be highly unstable without affecting his tax rate. Where an employer for some fortuitous cause has high charges against his reserve account and a large negative balance, his future employment practices may

Year	Contribution	Charges	Annual Pay Roll	Tax Rate
1940	$4,860	0	$180,000	2.7%
1941	4,860	0	180,000	2.7%
1942	6,048	0	224,000	2.7%
1943	6,048	0	224,000	2.7%
1944	4,800	0	240,000	2%
1945	2,400	0	240,000	1%

The tax rate for the year 1944 would be computed as follows:

Net Reserve Balance as of June 30, 1943	Average Base Pay Roll for 1940, 1941, 1942	Reserve Ratio	Tax Rate for 1944
$19,008	$194,667	.097%	2%

The tax rate for the year 1945 would be computed as follows:

well be stabilized and justify a reward in keeping with the theory of merit rating and still the formula will not allow a reduced tax until the reserve account has been restored. The fluctuations in tax rate from year to year are unpredictable and do not correspond to any immediate changes in employment. The following actual cases reveal to some extent the inconsistency of the merit rating formula as it now exists with its alleged purpose of stabilizing employment:

It is the unanimous opinion of your committee that a thorough and detailed study should be made of the possibility of developing a formula whereby an employer who in fact stabilizes employment is given a reduced tax rate as a reward for his efforts and the employer who does not stabilize employment is not allowed such a reduced rate. The committee has made a study of employment variation and pay roll variation formulae; however, further analysis is needed in order to make any recommendation. The majority of the members of your committee are not in a position at this time to recommend that merit rating should be eliminated entirely from the act. However, the wide variations in tax rates should be adjusted so that no reduced rate is allowed below 1.7 per cent. until such time as a more equitable formula is adopted.

It is the opinion of the chairman of your committee that merit rating should be eliminated entirely from the Unemployment Insurance Act. There are a number of reasons for this conclusion.

Primarily, the assumption on which merit rating is based, namely, the stabilization of employment, should be reconsidered. An honest appraisal of the wartime conditions will clearly reveal that stabilization of employment is basically not within the control of the employer. Moreover, the extent of stabilization which may be found in some industries where the employer has a small degree of control over employment, results more from sound principles of industrial relations and business practice than unemployment insurance taxation. The theory of a tax reduction to encourage stabilized employment rests on the fallacious assumption that an employer has complete direction and control over his employment and the extent of labor his business will demand. If such were the case, unemployment insurance would be unnecessary. Unemployment insurance is based on the very fact that unemployment is an evil of industry arising under the private enterprise system which can be neither predicted nor directed by individual efforts. Thus, granting a tax reduction to an individual as an incentive or reward for stabilization of employment is contrary to the fundamental principle of unemployment insurance that unemployment is beyond the control of the employer. In but few cases can it be honestly said that merit rating has produced stabilized employment. It merely grants a lower tax to the employer who is able to maintain regular year-round employment, or if not able to do so, is fortunate enough through his own efforts, or through chance, to find that his former employees do not collect unemployment insurance. Thus, merit rating attempts to allocate the cost of unemployment insurance among individual employers on the basis of the amount of benefits paid to their former employees.

As a method of distributing the the cost of unemployment insurance among employers, merit rating presents a fundamental question of taxation. A careful analysis will show that it is not a sound principle of taxation, but that it is in fact arbitrary and discriminatory tax legislation. Unemployment insurance has been sustained as a proper use of public funds. It provides direct benefits to the recipient and indirect benefits to the entire State. Without those indirect benefits to the entire State it could not stand as a valid and constitutional law. The indirect benefits of unemployment insurance are generally only appreciated in times of high unemployment when the State is required to appropriate large sums of money, which are derived from taxes, for the purpose of providing a system of relief. Also, as pointed out in Section 1 of the Unemployment Insurance Act, the State benefits through unemployment insurance in that purchasing power is stabilized. These indirect benefits in themselves have justified the imposition of a tax for the support of this necessary public program. The cost of unemployment insurance is a cost of Government and the notion of merit rating introduces into this particular field the theory that taxes for the support of Government should be in direct proportion to the benefits derived from Government. This is, in effect, to say that only those individuals who have children should pay for the cost of schools or that a corporation should be exempt from school taxes because it derives no benefit from schools themselves. However, the entire State does benefit from education. In the same manner the entire State benefits from unemployment insurance in that the standard of living of the working population is maintained during periods of unemployment and expenditures for relief are minimized and purchasing power is maintained. The concept of merit rating with individual tax rates rebels against the accepted principle of taxation used in this country that all taxpayers in the same class share equally the cost of Government. A clear expression of this fundamental theory of taxation is found in the language of the Supreme Court of the United States in sustaining the validity of State unemployment insurance taxes.<sup>175</sup>

"A tax is not an assessment of benefits. It is, as we have said, a means of distributing the burden of the cost of government. The only benefit to which the taxpayer is constitutionally entitled is that derived from his enjoyment of the privileges of living in an organized society, established and safeguarded by the devotion of taxes to public purposes. Any other view would preclude the levying of taxes except as they are used to compensate for the burden on those who pay them, and would involve the abandonment of the most fundamental principle of government—that it exists primarily to provide for the common good. A corporation cannot object to the use of the taxes which it pays for the maintenance of schools because it has no children. This Court has repudiated the suggestion, whenever made, the expenditure of public moneys to be apportioned to the burdens of the taxpayer, or that he can resist the payment of the tax because it is not expended for purposes which are peculiarly beneficial to him."

Merit rating is nothing more than a tax savings device whereby in theory, at least, those employers who are in an industry in which employment is stable will obtain a lower tax than those employers whose employment, through no fault of their own, shows a high turn over. In this respect it is similar to the theory of unemployment insurance on an industrial basis in which each industry only pays for the cost of those workers who are unemployed because of unemployment arising from that particular industry. Industrial unemployment insurance as distinguished from general unemployment insurance is not new. It is basically a carry-over from the early European voluntary plans which developed on an industrial basis. Only a few States in the United States have any vestiges of the concept of industrial unemployment insurance embodied in their law except for the merit rating principle.<sup>176</sup> However, if an industrial program is accepted, one must be consistent and require penalty rates which may reach prohibitive costs for those industries in which there is a high labor turn over and fluctuation of employment. Experience in both the United States and Europe has shown that under industrial unemployment insurance the industries with irregular employment are either taxed excessively or the workers receive few or no benefits. As a matter of fact, there is little need for the State to enter into the field of unemployment insurance if each industry is to pay its own way. The concept of taxing all equally and spreading the high risk with the low risk is the underlying principle in compulsory unemployment insurance. Moreover, this approach of unemployment insurance on an individual industry basis fails to recognize that unemployment insurance provides more than just direct benefits to the recipients. The public purpose that is served is discounted entirely.

It is provided in the California Unemployment Insurance Act that the price of goods and services should include the cost of unemployment.<sup>177</sup> Thus in taxing the employer it is recognized that to a large extent the tax may be shifted to the public who purchase the goods and services. Under this principle every citizen pays the cost of unemployment insurance which is the cheapest and most expedient method of handling the public problem of temporary unemployment. The concept of merit rating is entirely inconsistent with such an allocation of the cost of unemployment insurance. The employer with a low tax rate is given an unfair competitive advantage over the employer with a high tax rate.

For these reasons it is clear that the unemployment insurance tax should be equal and the same for all taxpayers, just as every other tax imposed by this State. If, after a complete business cycle, we return to a more normal economy, the cost of a sound and complete unemployment insurance program can perhaps be determined. At such time the tax rate should be adjusted accordingly for all taxpayers and not a select few. Under the present Federal Unemployment Tax Act it is not possible as a practical matter to reduce the unemployment insurance tax for all employers except on an individual basis with variable tax rates.<sup>178</sup> One solution of this problem, which is a future problem of tax reduction, lies in congressional action amending the Federal Unemployment Tax Act to allow those States which meet certain basic coverage and benefit standards to adopt a lower tax rate for all employers on a uniform basis. In the interim, there is certainly no reason for maintaining an inequitable and unsound principle of taxation in the California Unemployment Insurance Act, which during times of high employment permits some of the taxpayers of the State to enjoy a lower tax than others, when after the war and unemployment strikes it is recognized that the money paid out in benefits to help mitigate the problem of unemployment and minimize the cost of relief will be the money derived from the pooled contributions of all taxpayers. If it is found that more money is being collected than required for unemployment insurance benefits at present, the recommendation of the Chairman is that a uniform tax of 2 per cent or 1.7 per cent be imposed in lieu of the existing 2.7 per cent tax on all employers having less than eight employees who are not subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act. The Federal tax does not apply to these small employers and a lower tax rate on a uniform basis could be extended which would be consistent with the sound principle of equal taxation of all those in the same general classification. Furthermore, only few of these small employers are able to obtain a reduced tax under merit rating, since the receipt of benefits by one or two former employees will greatly reduce the individual reserve account of a small employer.

On principle, merit rating is unsound and has no place in unemployment insurance or the American system of taxation. In practice, the effect of merit rating can be observed from the facts which speak for themselves. The loss of $30,000,000 to the fund during 1944 as a result of merit rating in a time of high employment is startling. However, what is even more significant is the fact that not all, but only 32 per cent of the taxpayers obtained the benefit of this $30,000,000 in tax savings, with the largest reduction going to the big employers. The records of the Department show that during the year 1944 only 35 per cent of the employers having an annual pay roll of under $5,000 received a reduced tax, while 72 per cent of those employers with an annual pay roll of over $1,000,000 enjoyed a tax reduction.

The inequity of merit rating in practice may be observed from the following three actual cases:

Employer "A" with a small number of workers but generally stable employment paid an average tax rate of about 2.5 per cent from 1942 through 1945. Employer "B" with a tremendously large number of workers, but highly unstabilized employment paid a tax rate of 2.1 per cent during the same period. Employer "C" with a fairly stable employment record paid an average tax rate of 1.2 per cent during this four year period. These actual cases reveal the discriminatory tax rates which prevail under the merit rating principle and the adverse effect on the small employer.

It is apparent from the foregoing that neither in theory nor in practice can merit rating be justified. The incidental argument frequently advanced in support of merit rating by those whose primary objective is not unemployment insurance, but tax saving, should be considered. It is commonly said that without merit rating there would be no policing of the law. Obviously, the enforcement of the law is a public function to be performed by public officials and not by the few employers and the so-called "tax experts" who concern themselves with benefit payments. As a practical matter, only a limited number of employers have time or facilities for rendering assistance in policing the law. However, certainly the cost of $30,000,000 for merit rating during 1944 can hardly be considered a reasonable fee for the policing of the unemployment insurance law performed by certain private individuals. Actually, the largest State in the Union, New York, together with seven other States does not have merit rating and the California law is not enforced to any greater extent than the law of these other States.<sup>179</sup> This argument advanced in support of merit rating will not stand analysis nor has it any place in a tax law. Actually under the guise of policing the law certain employers in the past have created fictitious jobs in an effort to disqualify a claimant for refusing an offer of employment which never existed. The public officials who administer the law are certainly not free from private influence in times of high benefit payments under the existing merit rating system.

Other significant practical effects of merit rating which are detrimental to an unemployment insurance system manifest themselves in efforts to restrict the payment of benefits by legislation and to oppose any attempt to improve the unemployment insurance program which may involve possible extension or increase in benefits. This arises because the merit rating formula takes in more than stabilization of employment. Benefit charges play a material role in computing the tax rate. Thus by preventing former employees from obtaining benefits or decreasing the total amount of benefits they are entitled to receive, the possibility of obtaining a lower tax rate is greatly enhanced even though the employer has not offered stable employment.

It is the considered opinion of the chairman of the committee that the present system of variable tax rates, with low rates for certain employers and high rates for others, is unsound and discriminatory taxation and should be replaced by a uniform and equal tax levy. The chairman therefore recommends that merit rating be eliminated from the California Unemployment Insurance Act, and that, until such time as the Federal Act permits a uniform reduction in tax rates for all employers equally, the tax on all those employers who are not subject to the Federal act (firms with less than eight employees) should be lowered uniformly to the extent necessary to encourage small business enterprises and to prevent the accumulation of a larger fund than is necessary.

D—Other Problems

In addition to those issues which have been set forth as questions of coverage, benefits, and taxation, there are numerous other unemployment insurance problems which have been considered by your committee in the course of its investigation. Among these are the following:

SOLVENCY OF THE FUND

The preliminary report submitted on June 15, 1944, by your committee was devoted primarily to postwar problems, particularly to a study of the solvency of the Unemployment Insurance Fund of this State. It was pointed out that the stability of the fund was not definite at that time in view of the unknown factors. On the basis of the additional data and information which has become available, the following supplement is submitted.

There are three factors which have made the outlook of the postwar solvency of the Unemployment Insurance Fund more favorable. Primarily, earlier studies assumed that the first postwar year would occur in 1945. Since the war has not ended, and contributions have remained high, with the interest on the fund offsetting all of the benefit payments during the past few years, the balance in the fund before the end of the war will be considerably larger than anticipated. Secondly, the enactment of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act of 1944 (G. I. Bill) making provision for a maximum of 52 weeks of unemployment insurance benefits for discharged veterans has removed a large potential liability against the fund.<sup>180</sup> Thirdly, under the War Mobilization and Reconversion Act of 1944 (George Bill), provision has been made for loans to the States to carry over a short period of extremely high benefit payments and low contributions which may be expected after the war.<sup>181</sup>

Only recently has the committee been able to obtain a revised report from the commission on the possible postwar solvency of the California Fund in the light of the conditions which have transpired during the past year. A copy of this revised preliminary report appears in Appendix E.

Briefly, the major assumption is that the war with Japan will end in mid-1946 and the war against Germany prior to that time, with the heaviest drain on the fund not expected until late 1946 and early 1947. Accepting this major assumption, the solvency study made by the Department of Employment may be summarized as follows:

With severe unemployment for not longer than a year period following the war, it is estimated by the department that the Unemployment Fund will be in better condition at its very lowest level than it was in 1943, and at no time during the postwar transition period will fall below $527,000,000. This estimate assumes that only in the year 1947 will fund income be smaller than benefit payments, and during the entire period from January, 1945, through December, 1948, the total amount of benefit payments would be $569,000,000, while total income would amount to $481,000,000. In short, the entire reconversion period under this estimate would reduce the present fund of $621,000,000 by only $88,000,000, leaving a net balance of $534,000,000 as of December 31, 1948. This estimate allows for a total of 1,240,000 individuals to file a claim for benefits during the year period immediately after the war, and with an average of $289 payable in benefits to each claimant which would create a liability of $358,000,000. However, on the basis of calendar years, the total payments from the fund would be as follows:

Total Benefit Payments	Year
$93,500,000 -----	1946
353,500,000 -----	1947
97,000,000 -----	1948

With severe unemployment for a two-year period following the war it is estimated that the unemployment fund will fall to $234,000,000 by the end of 1948 and would be equivalent to the status of the fund during the year 1941. This estimate would assume total benefit payments of $830,000,000 during the period from January, 1945, through December, 1948, with total income to the fund of $443,000,000 during the same period. It would be possible under this estimate to provide benefits of $289 to 1,240,000 different individuals each year for a two-year period. Thereafter benefit payments would decrease sharply and would be offset by the amount of income to the fund.

Although the soundness of several of the assumptions and important factors as to postwar employment conditions and average benefit payments accepted by the Department of Employment in its study may be somewhat questionable, it nevertheless is the opinion of your committee that on the basis of the facts available at this time there is little danger of insolvency of the Unemployment Insurance Fund unless extremely unfavorable economic conditions prevail for a number of years during the postwar period.

TEMPORARY UNEMPLOYMENT DISABILITY INSURANCE

The individual who is involuntarily unemployed because of illness or injury cannot qualify for benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act because he is not physically able to work.<sup>182</sup> The failure to provide benefits to these workers who are unemployed because of sickness is a fundamental weakness in the law and presents a serious problem which has come to the attention of the members of the Committee on various occasions. It is the most frequent complaint registered by the workers themselves throughout the State in filing claims for unemployment benefits. Most individuals are perplexed to find that the law requires them to contribute to a fund to provide benefits when they are unemployed and well, but not when they are unemployed and sick. A number of actual cases have been observed which reflect this unfortunate situation, and clearly reveal the need for protecting this type of worker who is involuntarily unemployed through no fault of his own from the hazards of temporary unemployment.

In California where a worker is unemployed because of injury arising within the scope of his employment, some protection is offered by the Workmen's Compensation Act. If an individual is unemployed because of lack of work, benefits are provided under the Unemployment Insurance Act. However, for the worker who is unemployed because of an illness or injury not within the reach of the Workmen's Compensation Act no protection whatsoever is granted. Your committee feels that it is an anomolous situation and a serious gap in providing economic security for the large working population of the State.

In approaching the subject of unemployment disability insurance it is necessary to understand the precise nature and purpose of such a program. When a worker becomes unemployed, there is the risk of wage loss involved. When a worker becomes unemployed and disabled simultaneously, there are two risks involved, namely, (1) the wage loss due to loss of work, and (2) in most cases the medical care due to the disability. Unemployment Disability Insurance is designed to compensate for the risk of wage loss only and not for the risk of medical care. In brief, therefore, the purpose of unemployment disability insurance is to offer the same protection against wage loss to the unemployed and sick that is offered to the unemployed and healthy under the existing unemployment insurance system.

The actual number of workers in the State who have been denied unemployment benefits on the ground of physical inability to work is not available from the statistical records of the Department of Employment. The only data the committee was able to secure from the department in this respect related to the number of workers disqualified for benefits during the years 1942, 1943, and 1944 on the basis of Section 57 (c) of the Act. This includes those individuals not "available for work" as well as those not "able to work" and is, therefore, of little significance. A survey made by the committee for other purposes of all disqualifications imposed by three different local offices of the Department of Employment during a five-day period in 1944 revealed that eight out of a total of 49 disqualifications were made for the reason that the claimant was not physically able to work. However, many individuals do not file a claim for unemployment benefits when informed they must be physically able to work, and for this reason only a few of the cases are reflected in the records of various local offices.

In an effort to obtain specific actual statistical data on the number of workers in California unemployed because of disability, your committee found that the U. S. Army had compiled a comprehensive analysis on the basis of voluntary group insurance plans in three large war plants in southern California. After making several requests, the committee has obtained the use of this source of information which contains a complete and detailed breakdown of the frequency and duration of claims and the various causes of disability.<sup>183</sup> This material has been helpful in comparing other estimates which have been made of the cost of an unemployment disability insurance program for this State. However, because of the limited coverage, the experience with voluntary plans is more significant in determining the various types of sickness and injuries which are most common to the locality and industry and the frequency of their occurrence than in determining the cost of a compulsory program with complete coverage.

The State of Rhode Island established a "Cash Sickness" program in 1942 and benefits have been paid thereunder since April 1, 1943.<sup>184</sup> During 1945, three States have already adopted the disability provisions of the Veteran's G. I. Bill.<sup>184a</sup> Your committee has communicated with the administrative agency of Rhode Island several times in order to obtain information on the actual experience with the general and specific features of their law. A critical study of the operation of the system in that State has been made. However, before considering the activity under the Rhode Island Cash Sickness Act, it is helpful to have in mind a brief digest of some of the salient features of the Rhode Island law.

(1) SUMMARY OF THE RHODE ISLAND CASH SICKNESS COMPENSATION ACT

The system is financed entirely by a 1 per cent tax on the wages (under $3,000) of workers who are subject to the Rhode Island Unemployment Insurance Law.<sup>185</sup> It is administered as a part of the unemployment insurance program although a separate fund is maintained from which benefits as well as administration expenses are paid. An individual is deemed sick if he is unable to perform his regular services because of a mental or physical condition.<sup>186</sup> The maximum amount of benefits payable in any benefit year is $364.50 and the minimum is $34. To qualify for the minimum, a worker need earn only $100 during a previous year period, and to qualify for the maximum total wages of $1,800 or more are required. Payments vary from $6.75 to $18 per week, depending on highest quarter earnings. The duration of benefits

<sup>183</sup> Approximately 200 charts and graphs were obtained. The frequency of claims was outlined in a letter to the committee as follows:

"Contractor 'A': This contractor had a plan of accident and health insurance with payment in the event of nonoccupational accident commencing with the first day, and with the eighth day, for sickness for which no workmen's compensation benefits are payable. Payment in the event of claim for any one disability was limited to thirteen (13) weeks. For the period analyzed the frequency of claims per year per thousand employees for male employees was 120, for single female employees was 250, and for married female employees was 500.

Contractor "B": This contractor had an accident and health insurance plan with benefits payable from the first day in the event of nonoccupational accident and from the fourth day in the event of sickness for which no workmen's compensation benefits are payable. The limit of payment for any one disability was thirteen (13) weeks. For the male employees there was an average frequency of about 210, and approximately the same for the single female employees, but with the married female employees frequencies in two months of analysis exceeded 800, which rate was sufficient to increase the average for all female employees to over 400 per year.

Contractor "C": Benefits under this contractor's accident and health insurance plan were payable from the first day in the event of nonoccupational accident and from the fourth day in the event of sickness for which no workmen's compensation benefits are payable, with not more than thirteen (13) weeks payable in the event of any one disability. Frequencies for male employees were 275, for single female employees approximately 500, and for married female employees approximately 750, with one month in which the frequency exceeded 1,200."

It was definitely pointed out that these figures reflect abnormal conditions and the "probabilities are that they do not reflect a general situation under normal conditions."

The average duration per 1,000 lives exposed per year was in one case about 2.3 weeks for males and about 3.1 weeks for females, and in another case about 2.5 weeks for males and 3.2 weeks for females.

<sup>184</sup> The Rhode Island Cash Sickness Compensation Act became effective May 10, 1942. Contributions were collected beginning June 1, 1942, and benefit payments were first made on April 1, 1943.

depends on the formula; however, the maximum duration is slightly more than 20 weeks. A one-week waiting period, which is a calendar week and not a period of seven consecutive days, is required in order to receive benefits.<sup>187</sup> Only one waiting period must be served during an entire benefit year. A claims examiner determines the validity of the claim and the right of appeal from his decision is provided. The administrative agency has authority to require an examination by a physician appointed by the agency to consider cases which the claims examiner has reason to question. No individual is eligible to receive sick benefits for any week in which he receives unemployment benefits under the laws of any State or of the United States; however, both sick benefits and workmen's compensation are payable simultaneously.

(2) ACTIVITY UNDER THE RHODE ISLAND CASH SICKNESS COMPENSATION ACT<sup>188</sup>

Worker contributions were collected beginning June 1, 1942, and benefits became payable after April 1, 1943. During this 10-month period when no benefits were paid out, a net reserve of $2,659,937 had accumulated in the fund. The total income to the fund on the basis of the 1 per cent tax from June, 1942, until the end of October, 1944, was $10,213,128. A total of $7,216,206 was paid out in benefits since April, 1943, leaving a balance after deducting administrative expenses of $2,758,685 as of October 31, 1944. This means that as of October 31, 1944, the system was able to pay all benefit claims and administration expenses and at the same time add nearly $100,000 to the original reserve. Although total expenditures exceeded total income during the month of October, 1944, and there is some question of the adequacy of the existing financial structure in a period of declining employment, the program during its one and a half years of benefit payments has maintained itself and provided a small reserve. It may be fairly said that up to this time the system has been self-sustaining, despite the problems encountered in administering a new law and the fact that benefits are paid concurrently with workmen's compensation and only one calendar week during an entire year is required as a waiting period. NOTE—At the time of printing your committee was informed by the Rhode Island agency that the balance in the sickness fund as of April 1, 1945 was $2,765,453. Thus, the Rhode Island system after two years of benefit payments (April 1, 1943 to April 1, 1945), has not touched the original reserve of $2,659,937 which had accumulated during the first 10 months before benefits became payable and in fact has been able to add to this reserve over $100,000, although during the calendar year 1944 more money was paid in benefits than was collected in contributions.

During the first year of activity (April 1, 1943-March 31, 1944) a total of $3,881,162 was paid in benefits to 32,624 claimants. The average number employed at the middle of each month during the year period was about 240,000 workers; however, the number with sufficient earnings to qualify is estimated at 260,000 to 285,000. More than one in every eight workers received benefits, and the average length of benefits for the 32,624 workers was about seven weeks. Of the 32,624 claimants, <sup>187</sup> Under Joint Resolutions 13 and 14 issued pursuant to the Rhode Island Act, it appears the waiting period may be as short as five days or as long as 11 days since claims filed after Wednesday are dated the following week and claims filed on or before Wednesday are dated back to the first of the week.

<sup>188</sup> Data from statement by Mortimer W. Newton, Chairman of the Rhode Island Unemployment Compensation Board, published "Health Insurance in America," Second National Conference on Social Security, U. S. Chamber of Commerce, January, 1945, pp. 151-151, Monthly Labor Review, United States Department of Labor, February, 1945, Vol. 60, No. 2, pp. 225-242; Ninth Annual Report (1944) of the Rhode Island Unemployment Compensation Board.

45 per cent or 14,239 were men and 55 per cent or 18,385 were women, although there are more men than women in the labor market in Rhode Island. In this respect it is interesting to note that 40 per cent of the women and 20 per cent of the men exhausted their wage credits. The average benefit payment was $119 per claimant.

The largest single amount of benefits was paid to women workers for pregnancy. This accounted for about 17 per cent of all payments during the year. Other expensive items in order of their cost include fractures, heart diseases, arthritis, mental and nervous disorders, pneumonia, influenza, bronchitis, appendicitis and other causes.

Of the 32,624 persons who received benefits during the year, 4,633 were in hospitals, 6,396 remained at home, and 15,113 received treatment in physician's offices. The remaining cases involved a combination of these methods of treatment.

On the basis of this actual experience of Rhode Island with its cash sickness program, an identical program for California assuming the same frequency and duration of disability would have cost approximately $40,000,000 during the year 1944.<sup>189</sup> This would include double payment in industrial accidents, injuries, a one week waiting period in a benefit year, and payment in pregnancy cases. With worker contributions in this State of $53,000,000 during 1944, it is clear that a 1 per cent tax would be adequate to finance such a program under present conditions. Other estimates have been made on the basis of the incidence of disability in the United States and special studies of morbidity in certain areas of the United States, as well as on the basis of British experience. These studies indicate the annual cost of a disability program for California under the benefit provisions of the present Unemployment Insurance Act, (a two-week waiting period) would range from $15,000,000 to $27,000,000 per year.<sup>190</sup>

<sup>189</sup> The coverage under the Rhode Island Law in terms of number of eligible claimants is approximately one-tenth of the coverage under the California Unemployment Insurance Act. Assuming a similar pattern of frequency and duration of sickness, Rhode Island would be a 10 per cent sample of the conditions in California. The total benefit payments in Rhode Island for a one-year period ending March 31, 1944, was $3,881,162. Expanding this figure by 10 times would indicate a total cost of about $39,000,000 dollars for an identical program in California.

On the basis of the Rhode Island experience with one out of every eight eligible persons filing a claim and an average duration of seven weeks benefits per claimant, a computation was made with the technical assistance of the statisticians of the Department of Employment of the cost of a program for California assuming the same frequency and duration of disability. It was revealed that with 2,600,000 eligible workers in California during 1944 and an average benefit payment of $18 per week (the average unemployment insurance check during 1944 was $17.44), the total cost, assuming the same incidence and duration of illness as in Rhode Island, would be approximately $41,000,000. The cost of administration would not increase this amount by more than about 4 per cent.

<sup>190</sup> Estimates of the cost of cash sickness benefits were estimated by three different methods in 1941. These estimates and methods appear in the Employment Security Bulletin No. 8, pages 39 and 40 (Department of Employment).

The following computations use the same figures on the incidence and duration of illness used in the 1941 estimates. The weekly benefit rate and the number of eligibles has been changed, however, to reflect present conditions. The average weekly rate is assumed to be $19 and the number of eligibles to be 2,650,000 persons. Numbering of methods correspond to the numbering in the 1941 computations. All methods assume a two-week waiting period to be served.

Method 1

The incidence of illness of over 2 weeks duration during a year, based on a survey published in the Social Security Bulletin, indicates about 400 compensable weeks per thousand workers per year. The present annual cost on this basis is:

$$0.4 \times 2,650,000 \times $19 = $20,140,000$$

Method 2

The incidence of morbidity for 30,000 persons studied by Falk, Klem, and Sinai shows the average "employed" person spent 2.2 days in bed because of illness per year. Allowing for cases of illness not confined to bed, this figure was raised to 4.0 days per year. The British Social Insurance Commission in 1917 indicated that only 52.47 per cent of all weeks of illness are compensated under a two-week waiting period. The estimated cost is:

$$\frac{4}{9} \times .5247 \times $19 \times 2,650,000 = $15,098,000$$

Method 3

Assumes 9.1 days of illness based on all members of a family rather than workers who usually have a lower illness rate, (a disability rate approximately twice that reported in the U. S. National Health Survey). Cost is:

$$\frac{9.1}{7} \times .5247 \times 2,650,000 \times $19 = $34,344,239$$

A deduction of 20 per cent was made in the 1941 calculations for industrial accidents covered by workmen's compensation. Correcting for this factor, the estimated cost is $27,475,000.

After a careful analysis of the data available, your committee recommends a temporary unemployment disability insurance program for California with the following basic provisions:

- (1) That the 1 per cent tax on the wages of workers up to $3,000 which is now required under the Unemployment Insurance Act be diverted into a separate disability fund.
- (2) That an amount not to exceed 10 per cent of all contributions be provided to defray administrative expenses in operating the program;
- (3) That the system be administered by the Employment Stabilization Commission through the Department of Employment as a part of the unemployment insurance program;
- (4) That coverage be identical with coverage under the Unemployment Insurance Act;
- (5) That the amount and duration of disability benefits be made identical with unemployment benefits;
- (6) That a waiting period of seven consecutive days be required for each period of disability;
- (7) That no disability benefits be paid to an individual receiving unemployment benefits or workmen's compensation under the law of this State or of any other State or of the United States;
- (8) That no disability benefits be paid for any disability arising in connection with or resulting from pregnancy;
- (9) That no disability benefits be paid during any week in a benefit year after unemployment benefits have been completely exhausted;
- (10) That no disability benefits be paid during any week for which an individual is serving a disqualification imposed under the Unemployment Insurance Act.<sup>1904</sup>
- (11) That no disability benefits be paid from the Disability Fund until one year after the effective date of the law;
- (12) That provision be made as a safeguard against the possibility of any immediate and unforeseen danger to the solvency of the fund by permitting the Governor in case of emergency to authorize an increase in waiting period or decrease in benefits until such time as the Legislature takes action.

With the foregoing limitations and qualification in an Unemployment Disability Insurance Act, your Committee is convinced that a 1 per cent tax will be ample to finance the system on a permanent basis and at the same time provide a sound, workable and properly restricted program. This conclusion as to the adequacy of the 1 per cent tax is based primarily on an analysis of the Rhode Island experience. As pointed out above, assuming a similar frequency and duration of sickness, California could finance a program identical with that provided by the Rhode Island law. However, the program recommended by your committee excludes several of the very high cost items which are found under the Rhode Island Cash Sickness Act and would reduce the total cost of such a plan by at least 30 per cent.

Primarily, Rhode Island has paid disability benefits even though the worker receives workmen's compensation. This factor increases materially the total liability against the Disability Fund. The actual per cent of cost to the Rhode Island fund which was attributable to this dual payment was not available,<sup>190b</sup> however it is known that in California there were 550,809 industrial injuries during 1943 within the scope of the Workmen's Compensation Act and of this total 150,148 were disabled for one day or more.<sup>191</sup> It is the recommendation of the committee that no disability benefits be paid in such cases where workmen's compensation is received.

Secondly, the Rhode Island law provides for sickness benefits in maternity cases. This alone accounted for 17 per cent of the total benefit payments from the Rhode Island Fund and was the most expensive item for which benefits were paid. Your committee recommends that such cases should not be included in a program designed to provide against the wage loss sustained by those individuals involuntarily unemployed because of disability.

Thirdly, the Rhode Island law provides for only one calendar week waiting period during the entire benefit year. Under this calendar week waiting period an individual who becomes disabled in the middle of the week can qualify for benefits within a period as short as five days.<sup>192</sup> However, after this waiting period has been served, there is no waiting period for any subsequent spells of sickness which may occur during that benefit year. The significance of such a provision in terms of cost may be appreciated from nation-wide frequency figures which show about 600 out of 1,000 persons in the labor force are disabled for one day or more in the course of a year, while only 200 out of 1,000 are disabled for a week or more.<sup>193</sup> An analysis of the experience with voluntary group insurance in one of California's aircraft plants indicates an average decrease of 40 per cent in frequency of claims after changing from a three-day waiting period to a seven-day waiting period. <sup>192</sup> The effect of this short waiting period is probably offset by the operation of Joint Regulation 13 and 14 which on the average would bring the waiting period up to a full week in most cases.

In respect to the duration of these spells of disability, it is estimated that from three-fourths to four-fifths of all disabilities lasting a day or more do not exceed seven days in duration. Mr. Saunders, who is Chief of the Division of Health and Disability Studies of the Social Security Board, further indicates the distribution of spells of disability lasting more than a week in 1940 to have approximately the following pattern:

	Spells of Disability
More than 1 week	1,000
More than 2 weeks	650
More than 3 months	100
More than 6 months	40
More than 12 months	25

mittee recommends a seven consecutive-day waiting period for each period of disability. This will rule out short-time disabilities without imposing a heavy financial burden on the worker and at the same time will reduce the cost of the program considerably.

Other safeguards which are recommended at this time by your committee would prohibit the payment of disability benefits while an individual is serving a disqualification, or after unemployment benefits have been exhausted. These provisions would not operate inequitably except perhaps in a few cases, and at the same time would discourage an attempt to allege sickness when unemployed and unable to obtain unemployment benefits for other reasons than physical inability to work, and would also prevent a heavy drain on the disability fund in times of high unemployment as has occurred under similar programs in other countries. Furthermore, it is recommended that the commission under certain circumstances be permitted to extend the waiting period if the solvency of the fund should become impaired.

During the year period while contributions are accumulating without any benefit payments, the commission will have an opportunity to carry on an intensive educational program. The cooperation of the medical profession on whom the primary responsibility will rest for making proper and honest certifications as to the mental or physical condition of the claimant is necessary for the successful operation of a disability insurance program. In most instances the examination of the doctor and his statement as to the fact of illness or injury will be a substantial factor in determining eligibility for disability benefits.

Your committee finds that the need for the payment of benefits to the person who is involuntarily unemployed because of sickness is greater than the need for benefits to the unemployed and healthy. An adequate program to meet this need can be provided for the people of the State of California on the limited basis set forth above.<sup>193a</sup>

SEASONAL EMPLOYMENT

The problem of seasonal employment under the California Unemployment Insurance Act, particularly in the canning industry, was suggested to the committee as a field of needed investigation at its first public hearing held in December of 1943.<sup>194</sup>

In approaching this question, your committee began with a general study to ascertain the exact scope of the seasonal employment problem in respect to unemployment insurance and the possible solutions available. The pattern followed in the course of the investigation and some of the findings made by the committee are presented herewith.

In California, fruit and vegetable canning, and to a large extent, sea food canning, are the most significant seasonal industries, although they are not the only ones whose employment may be characterized as seasonal.<sup>194a</sup> The payment of unemployment insurance benefits to workers in this industry has been cited as a large loophole which threatens the solvency of the Unemployment Insurance Fund. Your committee wishes to point out that such statements are made without knowledge of the actual facts. The following information will reveal the extent of unemployment insurance activities in the canning industry and is fundamental in establishing a proper perspective for an intelligent and honest understanding of the specific problems involved in this industry.

From the foregoing figures it is seen that a considerable amount of the employment in the canning industry is not seasonal in nature and exists throughout the year. However, there is a definite seasonal period of increased employment in the canning industry in the late summer months which reached a peak in the month of August, 1944, of 84,000 workers. The lowest employment occurs, generally, in the month of February, and in 1944 there were approximately 25,000 workers employed at the end of that month. However, the total number of workers engaged in canning throughout the year is much greater than the number employed at the end of any particular month. During the one-year period ending September 30, 1943, there were 148,000 individuals who had some earnings in canning employment subject to the Unemployment Insurance Act, although the largest number employed at the end of any month during this period was 83,800.

From the foregoing it will be seen that 62 per cent of those employed in the canning industry during 1943 earned less than $300 and were therefore ineligible for benefits. On the basis of a study made by the Department of Employment for the year 1939 it was found that 83 per cent of those engaged in the canning industry earned less than $300.<sup>197</sup> Of the total 56,000 who earned more than $300 during 1943 and were eligible for benefits, 15,500, or less than 28 per cent filed a claim for benefits and approximately 24 per cent actually received benefits. It is apparent that not all cannery workers earning more than $300 file a claim for and receive unemployment benefits.

With the fund balance at the present time of about $650,000,000, and an annual income to the fund during 1944 of nearly $180,000,000, it is apparent that benefit payments to cannery workers does not present any possibility of bankrupting the Unemployment Insurance Fund.

After obtaining an accurate picture of the general conditions in the canning industry as a whole, it was recognized that the cannery worker problem from an over-all view of its effect on the solvency of the fund has been greatly exaggerated and the actual problem is restricted to about 15,000 to 20,000 workers, some of whom receive benefits during the off season when it is highly questionable whether or not they are in the labor market and willing to work. With this background and a clear picture of the extent and scope of the cannery worker problem in California, your committee carried on a comprehensive investigation and detailed study of seasonal employment with particular emphasis on specific areas and individual problems. The name and address of all fruit and vegetable cannery operators in this State was obtained from various sources. A questionnaire was sent to over 120 cannery operators in this State in which the following questions were asked.

1. Name and address of firm.
2. Type of canning.
3. Maximum number of workers and the particular month in each year. Minimum number of workers.
4. How many workers during year 1943 employed longer than nine months? Longer than six months? Longer than three months? Less than three months?
5. Estimated individual wage received by those working less than three months.
6. What percentage of workers are women for 1940? for 1941? for 1942? for 1943?
7. What percentage of workers are skilled?
8. What percentage of workers are ordinary unskilled laborers?
9. How many of your workers draw unemployment benefits some time during the year?
10. Do you feel that payment of insurance benefits during off-season is necessary in maintaining your labor supply?

The cooperation from the employers in returning the data requested was excellent. It should be pointed out that the Cannery League advised its members to answer question No. 10 in the negative for the reason that it might discourage a complete investigation of the problem.

The actual employment pattern of each individual cannery operator in this State was then obtained from the records of the Department of Employment and information was also secured from the War Manpower Commission. From this data a more accurate appraisal of the actual conditions in each area was made possible.

A public hearing was held in San Jose and devoted entirely to the cannery problem.<sup>201</sup> It was found that the chief concern of the canning industry is the practical one of taxation. It is not only the fact that no merit rating is obtained by firms in the canning industry, but the fear of an additional tax to offset the high unemployment insurance risk which this industry presents.<sup>202</sup> It is apparent that if merit rating is to rest on the stabilization of employment, this industry can hardly expect to obtain a reduced tax rate, although the failure to provide year-round employment may be beyond the control of the individual employer to a greater extent in this industry than it is in others. Apart

<sup>202</sup> This would be pursuant to Section 43 of the Unemployment Insurance Act. However, the statistical records of the Department of Employment prior to 1942 are not adequate to justify any conclusion as to the specific cost of the industry. Subsequent actual data shows that the reserve balance of all fruit, vegetable and seafoods canning and preserving to be as follows:

1941 (July 31)	1942 (July 31)	1943 (July 31)

These negative balances only refer to employer contributions and do not include any worker contributions. It should be pointed out that this industry has the largest negative reserve balance.

However, only four out of a total of about 71 industry classifications had a negative reserve balance as of July 31, 1943. These four include the classifications of (1) agriculture, forestry and fishing; (2) vegetable, fruit and seafoods canning and preserving; (3) sugar, (4) and lumber and timber products. If worker contributions are considered, only two of these industries have not paid their way. At present, however, all four are paying more in contributions than the benefit payments made their employees.

from this primary concern of taxation, a serious problem was brought to the attention of the Committee with respect to the practice of some cannery workers in many of the areas of this State who have received benefits during the off season when in fact they were not available for work. Another situation which developed from the hearing was in connection with those cannery workers who leave work during the season after having earned sufficient wages to qualify for benefits and then wait until after the season is over and no work is available to file a claim. It was pointed out however that these cases were not numerous and the payment of benefits to such workers was opposed by both the employers and union representatives.

Following this hearing, various canning areas throughout the State were contacted in order to obtain a first-hand picture of the actual conditions and the other employment opportunities in the locality. The local office of the Department of Employment in each area was visited.

It was found that fruit and vegetable canning in California is definitely restricted to certain areas and whatever problems arise can properly be classified as an area problem localized chiefly in the vicinities of Marysville, Sacramento, Stockton, Oakland, San Jose, Modesto and Fresno. Your committee would have desired to investigate further several of these districts if limitations of time and funds had not intervened. In addition to the difficulties of transportation, the committee's efforts have been delayed and impeded by the refusal of certain employees of the Department of Employment to make the necessary records readily available. The committee endeavored to secure the names of claimants drawing benefits during the off season in order to find exactly how many cannery workers in the particular area earn $300 or $400 and file a claim exhausting all of their unemployment benefits each year. It is clear that the great majority of the cannery workers who are paid unemployment benefits are women. An analysis of claimants in the various areas reveals that 90 per cent of the cannery workers filing claims for benefits are women. On the basis of the evidence obtained from the questionnaire sent to the cannery operators, it may be stated that an average of about 70 per cent of all cannery workers employed in this State are women, most of whom are married and are housewives.

The following information has been obtained with respect to those workers in the major canning areas of this State who have actually received unemployment insurance benefits.<sup>203</sup>

Sacramento Area

(Based on an analysis of 30 per cent of all the cannery workers from the Sacramento area who actually filed a claim for unemployment benefits during the year 1943 and involves 557 individual cases.)

1. Nature of Claimants—In terms of sex it was found that of these cannery workers who filed a claim for benefits 10 per cent were men and 90 per cent were women. In respect to age it was revealed that 54 per cent were 50 years of age or over while 46 per cent were under 50 years of age.
2. Amount of Annual Earnings—The total amount of earnings of 557 cannery workers during the year was $411,334.66 or an average of $739 per worker. A breakdown of the amount of wages earned shows that 18 per cent (98) earned more than $1,000 per year; 51 per cent (284) earned more than $700 per year; 76 per cent (423) earned more than $500 per year; and 24 per cent (134) earned less than $500 per year.

<sup>203</sup> The following analyses and breakdown was made by the committee on the basis of information obtained from the Department of Employment on 2,898 actual cases in which benefits had been paid.

3. Amount of Unemployment Benefits Received<sup>204</sup>—Further analysis of these workers who filed a claim for unemployment benefits reveals that 5 per cent did not draw any benefits whatsoever. The remaining 95 per cent of the claimants received a total of $50,296 in benefits or an average of $161 per claimant. Of these workers who actually received unemployment benefits, 33 per cent exhausted their entire benefit award while 66 per cent did not draw all of the benefits payable to them. The average benefit award to the cannery workers in this area who received some benefits during the year was $250 per claimant.

San Jose Area

(Based on an analysis of 30 per cent of all the cannery workers from the San Jose area who actually filed a claim for unemployment benefits during the year 1943 and involves 1,806 individual cases.)

1. Nature of Claimants—In terms of sex it was found that of these cannery workers who filed a claim for benefits 8 per cent were men and 92 per cent were women. In respect to age it was revealed that 27 per cent were 50 years of age or over while 73 per cent were under 50 years of age.
2. Amount of Annual Earnings—The total amount of earnings of 1,806 cannery workers during the year was $1,057,704.58 or an average of $586 per worker. A breakdown of the amount of wages earned shows that 5 per cent (103) earned more than $1,000 per year; 24 per cent (451) earned more than $700 per year; 57 per cent (1,021) earned more than $500 per year; and 43 per cent (785) earned less than $500 per year.
3. Amount of Unemployment Benefits Received<sup>205</sup>—Further analysis of these workers who filed a claim for unemployment benefits reveals that 6 per cent did not draw any benefit whatsoever. The remaining 94 per cent of the claimants received a total of $293,330 in benefits or an average of $190 per claimant. Of these workers who actually received unemployment benefits, 60 per cent exhausted their entire benefit award while 40 per cent did not draw all of the benefits payable to them. The average benefit award to the cannery workers in this area who received some benefits during the year was $241 per claimant.

Modesto Area

(Based on an analysis of 30 per cent of all the cannery workers from the Modesto area who actually filed a claim for unemployment benefits during the year 1943 and involves 431 individual cases.)

1. Nature of Claimants—In terms of sex it was found that of these cannery workers who filed a claim for benefits 10 per cent were men and 90 per cent were women. In respect to age it was revealed that 32 per cent were 50 years of age or over while 68 per cent were under 50 years of age.
2. Amount of Annual Earnings—The total amount of earnings of 431 cannery workers during the year was $240,420.55 or an average of $558 per worker. A breakdown of the amount of wages earned shows that 3 per cent (13) earned more than $1,000 per year; 20 per cent (87) earned more than $700 per year; 51 per cent (222) earned more than $500 per year; and 49 per cent (209) earned less than $500 per year.
3. Amount of Unemployment Benefits Received<sup>206</sup>—Further analysis of these workers who filed a claim for unemployment benefits reveals that approximately 4 per cent did not draw any benefits whatsoever. The remaining 96 per cent of the claimants received a total of $44,727 in benefits or an average of $147 per claimant. Of these workers who actually received unemployment benefits, 48 per cent exhausted their entire benefit award while 52 per cent did not draw all of the benefits payable to them. The average benefit award to the cannery workers in this area who received some benefits during the year was $200 per claimant.

Marysville Area

(Based on an analysis of 30 per cent of all the cannery workers from the Marysville area who actually filed a claim for unemployment benefits during the year 1943 and involves 36 individual cases.)

1. Nature of Claimants—In terms of sex it was found that of these cannery workers who filed a claim for benefits 11 per cent were men and 89 per cent were women. In respect to age it was revealed that 37 per cent were 50 years of age or over while 63 per cent were under 50 years of age.
2. Amount of Annual Earnings—The total amount of earnings of 36 cannery workers during the year was $19,157.40 or an average of $532 per worker. A breakdown of the amount of wages earned shows that 6 per cent (2) earned more than $1,000 per year; 11 per cent (4) earned more than $700 per year; 30 per cent (11) earned more than $500 per year; and 70 per cent (25) earned less than $500 per year.

3. Amount of Unemployment Benefits Received<sup>207</sup>—Further analysis of these workers who filed a claim for unemployment benefits reveals that 4 per cent did not draw any benefits whatsoever. The remaining 96 per cent of the claimants received a total of $4,090 in benefits or an average of $164 per claimant. Of these workers who actually received unemployment benefits, 56 per cent exhausted their entire benefit award while 44 per cent did not draw all of the benefits payable to them. The average benefits award to the cannery workers in this area who received some benefits during the year was $200 per claimant.

Oakland Area

(Based on an analysis of 68 cases, the actual number of cannery workers who filed a claim for benefits through the Oakland office during the first week of February 1944.)

1. Nature of Claimants—In terms of sex, it was found that of these cannery workers who filed a claim for benefits, 99 per cent (67) were women. The age of the claimants was not available.
2. Amount of Earnings—The total amount of earnings of these 68 individuals during a year was $63,634.01 or an average of $936 per claimant. A breakdown of the amount of earnings shows that 35 per cent (24) earned more than $1,000 per year; 60 per cent (40) earned more than $750 per year; 96 per cent (65) earned more than $500 per year and the remaining 4 per cent (3) earned less than $500 per year. It was found that 57 per cent (39) of these cannery workers were employed by two or more employers during the year while the remaining 43 per cent (29) were employed by one employer.
3. Amount of Unemployment Benefits Received—As of July 31, 1944, these 68 claimants received a total of $12,483 in benefits or an average of $151 per claimant. Of these workers, 26 per cent exhausted their entire benefit award while 74 per cent did not draw all of the benefits payable to them. The average award was $336.

In approaching a solution to the seasonal employment problem, your committee has considered at least five different methods of approach, namely,

- (1) A legislative provision on seasonal employment restricting benefits to the particular seasonal period.
- (2) Exclusion of all cannery workers from coverage.
- (3) Encourage development of other employment to supplement the seasonal industry so that the seasonal worker cannot exist.
- (4) Increase contributions from seasonal employers who are unable to provide year round employment.
- (5) Proper application and administration of the eligibility provisions of the existing law.

In reference to the legislative solution, a study was made of the seasonal provisions in the laws of all other jurisdictions and a communication was addressed to each of the 23 States having seasonal legislation. In general the reaction of most States was that "the administration of this type of legislation was practically impossible."<sup>208</sup> A brief digest of the seasonal provisions which are still found in 25 jurisdictions appears in Appendix J of this report. After making a careful study of this approach to the problem of seasonal employment, it is the opinion of your committee that the usual type of seasonal legislation found in many States creates more evils than it cures and presents serious administrative difficulties. Each seasonal industry must be segregated and classified, and each individual claimant must be found to be a seasonal worker. To determine the case of a worker who is engaged in non-covered employment during the off season has been a serious problem. In view of the information obtained by your committee, specific seasonal legislation is not recommended as a desirable amendment to the Unemployment Insurance Act.

<sup>208</sup> Letter to the committee from the Massachusetts Agency (January 19, 1944). Nearly all States suggested that seasonal legislation is perhaps sound in theory but difficult and impossible of administration. The committee wishes to point out that detailed and informative letters were received from the various States and in several instances copies of confidential and public reports on seasonal employment were enclosed. The cooperation extended has been gratefully acknowledged.

The exclusion from coverage as a solution to the seasonal employment problem has been suggested at various times on the basis that seasonal workers were never intended to be covered by unemployment insurance. In excluding seasonal workers, however, there is the important question of determining who is a seasonal worker and in which case the seasonal pattern of prior employment is a matter of choice or a matter of circumstances beyond the control of the worker.

As observed above, over 60 per cent of the workers who are engaged in cannery work today are excluded from coverage on the basis of the $300 minimum earnings requirement, although they are required to contribute to the unemployment insurance fund. It would appear that if a higher earnings requirement were required so that about 90 per cent rather than 60 per cent of all cannery workers are ineligible to qualify for benefits, some provisions should be made whereby the tax imposed on such workers is removed. To exclude the canning industry entirely from coverage under the Unemployment Insurance Act rather than preclude the payment of benefits to cannery workers would require that industry to pay the full three per cent Federal pay roll tax to the United States Treasury with no benefit to the California Fund. There is obviously little merit to this approach.

Perhaps the most satisfactory solution is found in the development of other employment to supplement the seasonal industry. However, the extent to which State Government may indulge in such undertakings is somewhat problematical. The commission, under Sections 43 and 91 of the act, in an attempt to "stabilize employment" is authorized to take action along this line. However, nothing has been done by the present commission in this respect. It should be pointed out that a number of canneries throughout the State have extended their operations, and by the development of dehydration and frozen foods, almost year round employment has been provided in certain areas of the State.

Provision is made under Section 43 of the Unemployment Insurance Act for the investigation by the commission of the unemployment hazards in various industries and occupations showing an excessive cost to the fund. It further provides for recommendation to the Legislature of a "higher tax rate of contribution for any classification of industries or occupations in which unemployment is excessive or chronic." In this respect it should be pointed out that the commission has taken no action, yet there is no doubt that the canning industry provides unstabilized employment which may be characterized as "excessive and chronic" and shows a proportionately high cost to the fund.<sup>209</sup> Whether the canning industry itself should be charged with the solution of its problem is a debatable question, although such an approach would seem to be within the contemplation of Section 43 of the act. It should be pointed out, however, that the seasonal nature of the work which creates the high unemployment insurance risk is inherent in the industry and is attributable chiefly to natural conditions beyond the control of the employer. At the same time, the fact that an employer has no control over the amount of employment within the industry is not peculiar to the canning industry alone. As a matter of fact the entire Unemployment Insurance System is predicated on the theory that fluctuations in employment are determined by conditions beyond the control of the individual industry or employer, since if such were not the case, an unemployment insurance program would be unnecessary. The Chairman of your committee wishes to point out that the fundamental problem is one of allocating the cost of unemployment insurance and Section 43 of the Unemployment Insurance Act relates to this phase of the law and embraces the concept of industrial unemployment insurance whereby each industry is charged with the cost of unemployment resulting from its operations. The entire question has been considered under the discussion of merit rating which involves this very same issue of the soundness of the existing method of taxation.

It is the opinion of your committee that the best solution to the problem of seasonal employment is found in the proper application and administration of the eligibility provision of the unemployment insurance law and a possible amendment to these provisions.

The fruit and vegetable canning problem in respect to unemployment insurance is not essentially different from any other. It is basically a question of determining whether the claimant is available for work and requires proper enforcement of the law by investigation of the cases where the availability of the claimant is dubious, as well as the proper education of the workers with respect to their rights and obligations under the law. Your committee feels that a proper application of the availability requirement to cannery workers may be accomplished through two different methods.

One involves enacting legislation imposing more severe and stringent tests of availability. The only difficulty encountered is that every determination rests fundamentally on a factual basis. Unless properly trained personnel is to administer the law, such a proposal will only serve to allow more guessing as to the facts concerning eligibility and more arbitrary decisions than now exist. In making this recommendation it is not intended to increase the present wage qualifications and in fact exclude all cannery workers from unemployment insurance benefits. The underlying purpose of such a proposal is to exclude only those workers who do not wish to work during the off season. The majority of the members of your committee recommend such legislation.

The other approach is to emphasize the enforcement phase of the law by permitting a determination on the basis of whatever facts are developed at the hearing. However, where there is doubt as to the veracity of the statements made by the claimant or uncertainty as to the claimant's availability for work, rather than merely acknowledge that condition as seems to be the case today, an investigation should be made to ascertain whether or not the statements made by the claimant are true. A field investigation would produce the facts necessary for the claims examiner to impose the penalty provided by law on those who obtain benefits in violation of the act. The chairman of the committee recommends that a proper enforcement of the present law in this respect is an adequate solution and does not entail legislation which may injure many honest workers in attempting to curb the wrongs of the few who are dishonest. However, the effectiveness of either approach to the problem places the entire responsibility upon the administrative agency.

While your committee wishes to emphasize that the many individual cases of abuse and violation of the existing law by cannery workers are flagrant and should be definitely penalized and prevented, nevertheless in considering the question of seasonal employment the magnitude and extent of the problem should be kept in mind. This requires a consideration of the number of workers in the canning industry who are not seasonal workers, the number of seasonal workers who are unable to qualify for benefits and are ineligible under the present law, and the number of seasonal workers engaged in other employment during the off season.

WAR RISK CONTRIBUTIONS

In the preliminary report submitted by your committee on June 15, 1944, attention was directed to war risk contributions in connection with the study of the solvency of the unemployment insurance fund. The desirability of imposing an additional tax or at least the suspension of merit rating with respect to large war industries with expanded pay rolls was suggested and it was recommended that consideration should be given to the enactment of war risk contributions in California. The reason for this conclusion was primarily on the "equitable basis of fairness to the permanent employers of this State in distributing the cost of post war unemployment as well as an added precaution against increased taxes after the war, possible insolvency of the fund under adverse employment conditions, and federalization of the unemployment insurance law."<sup>210</sup>

It has become apparent at this time that war risk contributions whether in the form of an additional tax or the suspension of merit rating must rest more on the theory of equity than the theory of solvency of the fund. In recommending the suspension of merit rating for a two-year period for those industries whose operations are largely expanded because of the war, it is recognized by your committee that this is necessary because of the principle of merit rating which exists in the California Law. The operation of merit rating is such that in times of high employment there is a low tax imposed, while in times of low employment a higher tax rate is required.

Although there have been statements made that the war risk industries are paying the standard rate of 2.7 per cent today and there is no need for suspending merit rating at this time for this particular group, your committee wishes to point out that such is not the case. As indicated in the preliminary report in June of 1944 these war industries would receive large tax reductions under the operation of merit rating while they are the very industries from which the large postwar liability will come. For the benefit of those who have considered the conclusion reached by the committee last year to be unfounded, the following information is presented.

The actual records of three of the largest aircraft companies and four of the largest shipbuilding companies in this State show that the tax rate when averaged for 1945 has fallen to .5 per cent below the standard rate of 2.7 per cent. The total State unemployment insurance taxes for these seven companies will be $1,500,000 less in 1945 than the amount collected in 1944 if the same pay rolls are maintained this year. On the basis of 1944 pay rolls, merit rating will save these seven companies $4,500,000 in taxes during 1945. In 1944 they saved about $3,000,000 in contributions because of merit rating. The significance of this tax reduction which was pointed out by your committee last year may be observed from the following:

TAX RATE OF SEVEN LARGE WAR INDUSTRIES

A -----	2. %	2.5%
B -----	2.5	2.5

E -----	2.5	2.5
F -----	2.7	1.5
G -----	2.	2.7

It could hardly be said that the merit rating received by these war industry firms reflects stabilization of employment through the efforts of the employer. The tax rate for employer "D" decreased from 2.7 per cent to 1.5 per cent, and the tax rate for employer "F" decreased from 2.7 per cent to 1.5 per cent between 1944 and 1945. Nevertheless, the following end of month employment figures for these two firms certainly does not reflect stabilized employment which may justify such a sudden change in tax rate.

Despite the tremendous turn-over in employment, these two companies will have tax reductions of over $3,000,000, if pay rolls in 1945 are the same as those in 1944. However, even with a decrease in pay roll, the tax saving will be tremendous. The employment pattern of the other four firms which have a reduced tax rate indicates even greater instability.

It is the opinion of your committee that if merit rating is to be retained in the law and there are to be no penalty rates imposed on those industries with a low reserve after the war, the suspension of merit rating for these definite war risk industries for the next two years is necessary.

The chairman of your committee wishes to point out that this entire situation whereby certain large war industries are granted a low tax rate at a time when they are able to pay and will have a maximum tax rate after the war when least able to afford a higher tax is one of the many inconsistencies of merit rating. If any tax reductions are to be extended, certainly they should be granted in times of low employment when economic conditions are depressed and not in times of high employment and a favorable economy. As a matter of sound tax legislation, no individual industry should be compelled to pay a higher individual tax rate for unemployment insurance than any other. The benefits derived from unemployment insurance taxation are enjoyed by all employers and other taxpayers of this State in the form of smaller appropriations and therefore lower taxes for direct relief. However, this concept of equal taxation is not consistent with the theory of merit rating which attempts to fasten the cost of unemployment which occurs because of general economic and industrial conditions under a private enterprise system to the former employer of the particular worker who happens to become unemployed. The Chairman therefore recommends suspension of merit rating for war industries solely on the condition that the inconsistent and illogical principle of merit rating remains a part of the law.

ADEQUACY OF APPEALS DIVISION (LOCAL APPEALS TRIBUNALS)

Under the California Unemployment Insurance Act, where an individual is denied a claim for benefits, an appeal may be taken from the original determination by the claims examiner to a referee and from the referee to the appeals board which is the final administrative remedy.<sup>211</sup> The claims examiner and the referee are public officials and under civil service or the merit system. The appeals board is composed of three non-civil service appointed officers who are nonpartisan, at least in law.<sup>212</sup>

Under this appeals procedure there is no provision whereby labor and management are permitted to participate in the actual operation of the unemployment insurance program, and all stages of appeal are handled by full-time government officials.

After a careful study of the operation of the California law in this respect, your committee recommends that provision be made to have a representative of management and a representative of labor from the local area where the disputed cases arise serve together with a referee, acting in the capacity of chairman, as members of a local appeal tribunal. This three-man tribunal would replace the single referee system which is used today. There are several basic reasons for recommending this change in the law.

In the first instance, as pointed out in the preliminary report, there is danger of complete failure of the entire appellate procedure if the number of cases on appeal increases substantially after the war, as may be reasonably expected. It was revealed in the preliminary report that during the first months of 1944 the Appeals Board was having difficulty in rendering decisions within the 60-day period required by the 1943 amendment to the act.<sup>213</sup> At that time an analysis of benefit cases disclosed that from the time the claimant first filed an appeal until the final decision by the Appeals Board was issued or dated, from three to four and one-half months had expired.<sup>214</sup> Your committee made a similar analysis of 10 benefit cases during the first months of 1945 and the time involved appears as follows:

Appeals Board Case No.	Date Claim Filed	Date of Appeal to Referee	Date of Referee's Decision	Date of Appeal to Appeals Board	Date of Decision by Appeals Board	Total Time, Months

It will be seen that the Appeals Board in rendering its decision has actually exceeded the 60-day statutory period in four cases. Furthermore, it is known that in several cases the date of the decision has been back dated in order to comply with the statutory requirement. The total time for an appeal in some cases has increased rather than decreased during the past year and final decisions have taken as long as six months. Obviously benefits do not serve their proper purpose if granted such a long time after a claim has been filed, and the administrative appeals procedure has little practical value or justification in an unemployment insurance program unless the rights of an individual to benefits receive a more prompt decision. The solution to this problem is not found in curtailing the amount of time which is necessary for the Appeals Board to properly decide a disputed case, but rather in curtailing wherever possible, the number of cases which are appealed. On the basis of discussion with other State agencies which have tripartite tribunals at the first appeals level, your committee believes that the number of appeals to the Appeals Board will be decreased considerably and this serious condition which now exists can be, to a large extent, overcome. The number of benefit cases decided by the Appeals Board during 1943 was 1,306 and during 1944 was 763.<sup>215</sup> It should be pointed out that during 1944, 32 per cent of the cases decided by the referee against the claimant were further appealed to the Appeals Board, and 10 per cent of the benefit cases which were employer appeals and decided by the referee against the employer's interest, were taken to the Appeals Board. After the war when unemployment increases, the number of disputed claims will undoubtedly increase. With a similar percentage of appeals to the Appeals Board it is apparent that the time consumed in rendering decisions will be even more extended than at present. It is the opinion of your committee that with the members of labor and industry from the local area in which the case arises participating in the first appeal determination, this percentage of appeals to the Appeals Board can be greatly reduced, particularly in those cases in which all three members of the local tribunal concur in the decision.

In the second place, the participation of citizens from the local area in the unemployment insurance program has a tremendous educational value in developing a better understanding of the purpose and provisions of the law. One of the basic weaknesses in the operation of the present Unemployment Insurance Act is that the individuals directly affected are too far removed and divorced from the program. The participation by private citizens from the particular area who are close to the actual problems and conditions which exist will encourage the cooperation of the public that is necessary for successful administration of the unemployment insurance system in this State.

Thirdly, your committee believes that individual claimants who appear customarily before such a tribunal without the benefit of counsel will be more satisfied that a proper decision of their rights has been made where members from labor and management from that particular locality participate in the hearing. The majority of the individuals who file a claim for benefits are honest citizens concerned primarily with a fair and proper determination of whatever rights they have. The fact that laymen are members of a tribunal does not mean an improper interpretation or determination of the law will be made. The purpose of the chairman of such a tribunal is to make certain there is no misunderstanding by the lay members of the act itself. However, the problems of law involved in determinations are generally few. Basically it is a question of facts, and in most instances these facts relate to labor conditions in the particular area, the prevailing wages for a particular type of work, and the degree of hazard involved in certain jobs, all of which are best known by individuals who live in the particular area and are close to the local conditions. In any case, it is only where both the labor and industry members of a tribunal are in disagreement with the referee that the possibility of an improper interpretation of the law would be any greater than it is today. The right of appeal to the Appeals Board remains. During 1944 the Appeals Board reversed the decision of the referee in about 25 per cent of the cases. Whether the reversal by the Appeals Board was based on the referee's improper conclusion of law or improper conclusion of fact, or both, is not known.

Under such a system of local tri-partite tribunals, labor and management throughout the State are in a position to reflect the actual conditions and problems in the various areas which are of assistance in forming sound unemployment insurance policy. At the same time, the final determination by the higher appeals authority will remain non-partisan to the extent that it is under the law today and the labor and management representation will appear at only one intermediate stage of the appellate procedure. It should be pointed out that administrative review panels have been recently established by the commission in certain areas of the State on which two members of industry and two members of labor serve with an employee of the department to hear and decide cases before they are appealed to the referee.<sup>216</sup> Both labor and management in the particular localities favor such a program, and on the basis of the several hearings which the committee has had occasion to observe through its representative, these administrative review panels compare very favorably with the present non-partisan Appeals Board in soundness of judgment and sincerity of the members both with respect to the application of the law and the findings of fact.

Local appeal tribunals at the first appeal level with labor and management representation are found in the laws of about one-half the States today and the experience of those States contacted by the committee has been favorable.<sup>217</sup> Your committee believes that similar tribunals in the State of California would, in addition to decreasing the number of appeals, encourage the various local communities to take a greater interest in the administration of unemployment insurance in this State and develop a better understanding of the meaning and purpose of the law, and at the same time insure proper application and interpretation of the Unemployment Insurance Act.

TIME LIMITATION ON APPEALS (BENEFIT CASES)

Under the present Unemployment Insurance Act an individual whose claim for benefits is denied by the claims examiner in the local office has the right to appeal from this initial determination to a referee.<sup>218</sup> From the decision of the referee, further appeal may be taken to the Appeals

Board, which is the highest administrative remedy available.<sup>219</sup> Any further review requires an action or special proceedings in court. As a matter of fact, however, no benefit case has been taken to court by a claimant in this State.<sup>219a</sup>

In order to exercise the fundamental right of quasi-judicial review provided by the Unemployment Insurance Act, it is necessary to file an appeal from the initial determination by the claims examiner within seven days after notification, and the appeal from the decision of the referee to the Appeals Board must be taken within 10 days.

When your committee began its work it was found in attending the meetings of the Appeals Board and following the decisions of both the referees and the Appeals Board that in many instances cases were not decided on their merits for the reason that the original appeal was filed eight or 10 days after the initial determination, although testimony in the record indicated that the delay was occasioned by illness or other unavoidable circumstance. These cases were dismissed on the grounds that the Appeals Board was without jurisdiction to entertain an appeal which has been filed after seven days from the original determination, irrespective of the reason for the late appeal.<sup>220</sup> On making inquiry as to the soundness of this determination holding the Appeals Board to be without authority or jurisdiction to accept such an appeal, your committee received an opinion from the Department of Employment reversing its previous position in view of the permissive language used in Section 67 of the act. Thereafter the Appeals Board has held that an appeal to the referee filed after seven days is valid if good cause can be established by the claimant.<sup>221</sup> However, the 10-day limitation on an appeal from the referee to the Appeals Board found in Section 68 of the act is expressed in mandatory language and under the opinion of the Attorney General no appeal is valid if filed after the expiration of this short period, irrespective of the reason for failure to comply with the statute.<sup>222</sup> Many cases have been dismissed because of this provision of the law without a determination of the case on its merits.<sup>223</sup> It is recognized by the Appeals Board that this condition operates inequitably, and should be corrected.

The purpose of the appellate procedure is to permit a fair and impartial hearing of the rights of the claimant. The existing time limit of seven days for the first appeal and 10 days for the second appeal is extremely short. Unless provision is made for extension of time where good cause for the delay is shown, a procedural requirement designed to assist in the determination of substantive rights will operate to defeat its very purpose and preclude a hearing in many cases where circumstances beyond the control of the individual have prohibited filing an appeal within the brief period required by the present statute.

It is therefore recommended by your committee that provision be made to protect the right of appeal at both levels in cases where good cause is established. However, in order to give finality to the

PROMPT PAYMENT OF BENEFITS (Decentralized Benefit Payments)

The time consumed in making payment of unemployment insurance benefits to eligible workers residing in California has been reduced about one week by the recent adoption by the Department of Employment of a procedure whereby checks are paid through the local office. This system of decentralized payments is somewhat new in the field of unemployment insurance and California has been the first State to initiate the program.

Briefly, the operation of decentralized benefit payments may be described in the following manner. When a worker becomes unemployed and files a claim for benefits he must serve a two-week waiting period, reporting each week to the local office. At the end of the third week he becomes eligible for his first week of benefits. Under the old procedure a notice of the determination for benefits made by the local office at the end of the third week was mailed to the central office and on the basis of this information the central office prepared and mailed the check which reached the worker after the fourth or fifth week of unemployment. Under the new system of decentralized payments, the worker receives his check from the local office at the end of the third week immediately after certifying for his first week of benefits. On the basis of the information mailed to the central office, at the end of the second week of the waiting period, a blank check not to exceed $20 with the name and Social Security number of the claimant is prepared and mailed to the local office. When the worker appears the following week and certifies for his first week of benefits, the check is filled out for the proper amount by a bonded employee of the department. If the worker gets a job during the week, the blank check remains in the file of the local office and no additional checks are written. In other words, the check is prepared in advance but is not signed and made until the claimant is found eligible for benefits.<sup>224</sup>

This system has been in effect for over eight months and apart from the irregular cases and difficulty with the mail service during the holiday season, the operation has been successful.<sup>225</sup> This procedure for prompt payment of benefits has not applied to out-of-state claims, however, and the long delay involved in such cases, as pointed out in the preliminary report, remains.<sup>226</sup> The problem of expediting benefit payments to workers who have moved to other States requires cooperative action on the part of the administrative agencies of the various States.

In order to meet the high claims load which is expected shortly after the war, a training program has been instituted by the Department of <sup>224</sup> After a general survey of the operation of decentralized benefit payments, it was observed that the present system is actually protected against fraud by employees of the department to the same extent as the former system. Your committee believes that this new procedure has been a definite improvement in the law and a progressive step by the administrative agency for which it should be commended.

<sup>225</sup> Effective May 9, 1945, the Benefits Division of the Department of Employment will institute a new practice whereby four checks will be prepared and mailed to the local office at one time. This, it is suggested, will remove the difficulties encountered from delays in the mail service and improve the system.

<sup>226</sup> Effective May 9, 1945, the decentralized system of benefit payments will apply to out of State claims and permit a more prompt payment in such cases to the extent possible under the present procedures.

Employment whereby individuals may be employed on a temporary basis to assist in the various local offices where a large number of claims are expected. The department feels that the problem arising from large layoffs can be adequately handled; however, there is some question whether or not a proper application of the unemployment insurance law is possible under the conditions which are expected to prevail after the war, unless sufficient, trained personnel and adequate public employment facilities are made available.

LAW ENFORCEMENT

A fundamental weakness in the application of unemployment insurance in California arises from the lack of proper enforcement of the law. Many of the problems which are cited as independent wrongs requiring legislative correction when traced to their source are found to be but the effects of this basic shortcoming in the administration of the present provisions of the act.

Your committee is convinced that the success of unemployment insurance in this State depends primarily on an effective and efficient law enforcement program which embraces both comprehensive education and public information as well as field investigation.

(1) Education and Information

There are far too many of the two and one-half million workers in this State protected by unemployment insurance who are completely unaware of the nature of the protection afforded by the State law. In fact, many individuals have the impression that unemployment insurance is provided by Federal rather than by State law. This lack of knowledge is also prevalent among many of the 50,000 employers who are subject to the act. There is, for example, an impression among many employers that whenever a notice is received that a former employee has filed a claim, benefits are paid in every case, and the employer's account is immediately charged with the amount of the entire award.<sup>227</sup> The dissemination of information in simple, brief, and understandable language relating to the basic provisions of the act should be carried on continually utilizing all possible methods of conveying such information to the public. Your committee has found that in general the employers of the State are willing to cooperate fully in distributing information to their workmen through various channels, including company magazines. In view of the fact that high unemployment is expected, the proper time to instruct the workers on their benefit rights is at present and not after unemployment occurs. It is possible that the press throughout the state would assist in a unified educational program. Under the present law an employer is charged with furnishing the employees with whatever information is supplied by the Department of Employment.<sup>228</sup> It is recommended that the law be amended to require that this information be furnished to the worker when he becomes unemployed. However, such a provision in the law is of little practical significance if the department does not make such information available to the employer.

<sup>227</sup> The committee received several communications from an employer in southern California who had received notices that former employees had filed claims for benefits and was vehemently critical of both the employment service and the Department of Employment. An investigation of all of the facts revealed that actually none of the workers who filed a claim received any benefits but were reemployed before the expiration of the waiting period. See Record of Hearing before the Senate Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance (November 13, 14, 1944), Los Angeles, California, p. 185.

An effective educational and informational program is of great importance in the proper enforcement of the law, permitting segregation of those who are intentionally and knowingly violating the act. The worker is placed in a position to know what his rights are and determine whether or not he has a just claim. Furthermore an informed public will assist in policing the law. However, the real importance of an effective educational program in the enforcement of the law becomes apparent if coupled with an efficient investigating staff to ascertain the facts necessary for detection and prosecution of those who violate the act.

(2) Field Investigation

No machinery has been established by the Department of Employment to investigate the facts surrounding individual cases throughout the State where benefits have been paid although the eligibility of the claimant remains dubious and uncertain. The failure to adequately police the law in this respect has created a general attitude that there is no harm in making false statements in order to obtain benefits. Your committee was informed by the claims examiner in a local office that in several instances he suspected claimants were working in nonsubject employment and at the same time filing a claim for benefits without reporting any earnings. On further inquiry, it was found that there was insufficient facts available before the claims examiner to justify any disqualification or the imposition of a penalty. However, the claims examiner had neither the time nor the facilities to make a field investigation himself to find out what the facts were. A special investigating staff to check such cases would present the examiner with the necessary facts to make a proper determination and recover any amount illegally paid as well as apply the penalty provisions of the law. Unless such enforcement is made in the various areas in the State and the importance of answering truthfully the questions of the examiner becomes apparent by prosecuting the unlawful cases, the law will continue to be abused by the dishonest individual and the entire program weakened to the injury of all workers, as well as the public. It must be recognized that a liberal law, such as unemployment insurance, requires strict enforcement in order to survive.

It is the opinion of your committee that an investigating staff and educational unit is a necessary part of the proper administration of the law and in view of the fact the commission has not created either a policing force or an adequate educational division under the authority vested in it by the Legislature, it is recommended these provisions be made a part of the law and that funds be made available for its administration in the event the Social Security Board does not consider the expense necessary for "proper and efficient administration."

WARTIME EMPLOYMENT

An expected postwar employment condition which has come to the attention of your committee in reference to the administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act concerns the thousands of workers in this State, many of whom are women formerly occupied as housewives, who have become employed in war industries with skilled qualifications and at high wages. The question involved is whether these individuals who have acquired wartime skills may rely on such training in a normal year and refuse other employment which is neither the same type of work nor equivalent in pay to their former war job.

Your committee made a thorough inquiry of this subject to ascertain whether or not a change in the law would be necessary to meet any problem of this nature which might arise after the war. It was found that the general rule which applies to all skills, whether temporary or permanent, followed by the Department of Employment requires a consideration of

- (1) The individual's "prior training"
- (2) The individual's "experience and prior earnings"; and
- (3) The individual's "prospects of securing work in a customary occupation."<sup>229</sup>

In the application of these three principles to an individual who has a temporary skill or even a permanent skill, it is seen that he cannot hold himself out for only skilled work if there are no prospects of securing that type of work in the community. In response to an inquiry made by the committee relative to this problem, the Chairman of the Employment Stabilization Commission pointed out that "The Appeals Board has in many cases sustained disqualifications in the case of shipyard and aircraft workers for refusal of suitable employment when the person insists on working within his most recently acquired skill and refuses to take a job in his old skill or in his usual 'occupation'."<sup>230</sup> Furthermore, testimony of a member of the commission given before a public hearing held by the committee revealed that this policy established by the Appeals Board was applied in the various local offices and that no change is needed in the present law to cope with the problem. An excerpt from the transcript appears as follows:<sup>231</sup>

MR. BRYANT

" * * * On the question of suitable employment, one question was raised, Senator Judah, about broadening the base of classifications so as to take care of labor that might be available in a tight market such as now, instead of binding them down to the suitable law too closely. In answer to that, the law provides that the work must be suitable. I think the law tries to protect a worker's skill. A worker who has earned wage credits at a certain occupation has a right to try to secure work in that occupation and the administration of the program should give him every opportunity to preserve that skill and not depress a worker's skill. However, whenever the agency cannot find work in that particular skill and the worker has had an opportunity to try himself, or through his labor union, to find work in that skill and it is not available, then we would look to what is suitable work in related skills. But I think we must always keep in mind that we must preserve a skill to a reasonable extent and remember that a person who has spent years in developing a skill should be allowed to keep it. I don't think an unemployment insurance agency should force a person to accept a lesser skill until both the worker and the agency have had full opportunity to try to place him in that skill. That is our general policy.

SENATOR SHELLEY

"Have there been cases where the commission found a person was standing on his skill where the chance of practicing that skill has become less or may no longer exist — have they then required him to take employment in another occupation where he had had previous experience?"

MR. BRYANT

"Yes. Even in a lesser skill."

SENATOR SHELLEY

"Has that been the policy of the commission for some time; and is that the general policy in practically all States?"

MR. BRYANT

"Yes."

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM

"Where does the question of skill come in? For instance I am an Oklahomian; I come here and get a job after a few weeks as a welder. I have been a farmer all my life. I learn to become a welder in a few weeks, and after a few weeks of working at that trade I quit. Am I a skilled worker?"

MR. BRYANT

"Not necessarily. We also consider the classification of a person before the war. If he can't get a job such as he has had in the war effort, we look to the job he had before the war and try to get him a job in that classification. It is suitable because it is part of his work history."

"There is another point I would like to make: Sometimes employers are confused when a claim is filed and think the person is drawing insurance. Many times the person does not draw benefits but is referred to a job which he takes and there are no benefits paid. But the employer, because he receives notice of the award, might assume that the amount of money is being paid, and perhaps the worker is working and has never drawn the award..."

It is apparent that the wartime riveter or welder will be required to accept employment which his experience prior to the war qualifies him to perform in order to be free from disqualification under the Unemployment Insurance Act. Your committee is convinced that the commission has ample authority under the existing provisions of the law to meet this postwar problem and no additional legislation is necessary.

EMPLOYMENT SERVICE

The public employment service maintained and operated by the State of California and financed by Federal funds was assumed on January 1, 1942 by the Federal Government as a part of a nation-wide war employment program. Since that time the War Manpower Commission has operated the United States Employment Service performing all the employment service functions in the State. Neither State nor Federal money has been made available for the purpose of operating a State service.

In order to obtain some of the facts surrounding the existing conditions, your committee has been compelled to penetrate much of the coloration which is nothing more than a specific expression of the well established political conflict in the United States over the line of demarcation which should be drawn between the activities of the State Government and the activities of the National Government. The assumption on a temporary basis by the Federal Government of this particular governmental function formerly exercised by the State has left a reaction which will undoubtedly continue burning below the surface until the rights of the State are restored.

Your committee has visited a large number of United States Employment Service offices throughout the State. Meetings have been held with officials of the War Manpower Commission and representatives of that Federal agency were called before a public hearing recently to explain the current changes in employment in southern California, and the practices followed by the United States Employment Service with respect to unemployment insurance.<sup>232</sup> Excerpts from this testimony appear in Appendix M of this report.

The primary objective of the War Manpower Commission has been to meet the employment needs of those industries classified as most essential for the effective prosecution of the war. Unemployment insurance considerations have only been incidental to this basic problem and therefor the operation of the employment service in many instances has been unfavorable when appraised in relation to unemployment insurance. It is fair to state that in some areas the United States Employment Service has worked satisfactorily in making job referrals for unemployment insurance purposes and in an effort to place workers has made referrals to many jobs which have been held unsuitable by the unemployment insurance representative. Unfortunately, in several instances your committee has found that the employees of the United States Employment Service, many of whom formerly were employees of the State Department of Employment, endeavor to perform unemployment insurance functions and to consider job placement only in respect to their opinion of the eligibility requirements for unemployment insurance benefits. This problem, however, is one arising from lack of proper training and has been corrected to a large extent.

In nearly every office visited by members of the committee or its representative, it was found that a close cooperation exists between the local officials of the United States Employment Service and the unemployment insurance representatives of the Department of Employment. Much of the criticism and friction reflected by the higher officials was not found in the individual local offices. In several offices your committee found that the United States Employment Service was actually reviewing every case in which claimants were receiving unemployment benefits for a period of more than four consecutive weeks and a special effort was made to refer these particular individuals to jobs, in addition to the weekly offer or "exposure" of employment which is made to all claimants. This practice, however, has not been in effect throughout the State, particularly in those areas where applicants are numerous and jobs are limited.

Unfortunately there is a lack of coordination between the unemployment insurance and employment service activities in many local offices. Either on the ground of insufficient personnel, or improper management, the United States Employment Service in a number of localities has not operated satisfactorily and fails to meet the needs of an effective unemployment insurance program. Your committee is aware that to a large extent this condition may be attributable to the restrictions placed on the employment service by the Federal Government with respect to job referrals.<sup>232</sup>

It is the opinion of the committee that the employment service should be returned to State operation and control as soon as possible in order that it may be more adequately coordinated with the unemployment system and other work programs of the State. Furthermore, unemployment insurance and job placement are functions which must be under the same control in order to operate successfully and on a permanent basis. Unemployment insurance defeats its very purpose if benefits are paid when employment opportunities are available but through limitations of the employment service the individual cannot be offered such jobs. It is recognized that changing the name and administration of the employment service will not remove all of the evils which now exist nor bring about any significant improvement, unless there is a more adequate and trained personnel available to perform the special type of skilled work involved in job placement. Senate Joint Resolution No. 5 introduced on January 23, 1945 by your committee and adopted by the California Legislature was designed to memorialize Congress to return the administration and control of the employment service to the State of California at the earliest possible date.

INTERSTATE COOPERATION

As pointed out in the preliminary report, the question of interstate cooperation is one that goes to the very heart of the State system of unemployment insurance in the United States. After the war when unemployment insurance payments increase and workers in the exercise of their constitutional right resume their normal migration from one State to another, the States will be faced with the challenge of providing effective nation-wide unemployment insurance protection.

The interstate problems in unemployment insurance may be classified into three main groups relating to coverage, benefit payments, and tax collection.

The problems of interstate coverage do not generally involve a large number of workers, but present a striking case in which the State system fails to provide complete coverage. In those cases where workers perform services in several States during the year but earn insufficient wages in any one State, coverage may be extended by cooperation of the States in combining all wage credits wherever earned. Again certain workers travel from one State to another although employed by the same employer at all times. It may be desirable for administrative purposes to allow one of the States to cover such an employer and his employees under a reciprocal coverage agreement. The administrative agency can determine what course of action to follow, so long as the Legislature makes certain the authority to enter into such arrangements as are necessary to meet the interstate problems in unemployment insurance coverage. Your committee recommends that the commission be authorized to enter into interstate arrangements for coverage purposes providing that it does not bring workers customarily working in California and residing in California under the law of another State.

In respect to benefit payments, the chief interstate problems relate to prompt payment of benefits and proper enforcement of the law. In order to penalize those individuals in this State who are drawing benefits illegally under the law of another State, it is recommended by your committee that provision be made in the California Law making the filing of a fraudulent claim in this State against any other State a misdemeanor.<sup>233</sup> Today it is almost impossible to prosecute individuals who file fraudulent claims against the California Fund while residing in another State.<sup>234</sup> It is hoped that by similar action on the part of other States and the effective enforcement of such provisions, the present condition may be improved. Under the existing law of this State there is authority for the commission to make interstate arrangements with respect to benefit payments. The development of an efficient and prompt method of paying interstate claims rests on the cooperative action of the various Unemployment Insurance Administrative Agencies. In respect to benefit payments, however, your committee suggests that further study should be made of the possibility of adopting uniform disqualification provisions at least as applied to interstate claims. Another problem relating more to the substantive provisions of the State laws than the procedural requirements for obtaining benefits arises from the wide variation in the amount of weekly benefits payable. Where a California worker goes to some of the other States in the Union, the weekly benefit amount which he is entitled to receive under the California Law is in many cases more than the prevailing wage for the type of work he customarily performs. At the same time, where a worker comes to California from such a State, the amount of benefits he is entitled to receive is insufficient to meet the higher cost of living in this State. There is merit to the suggestion that a worker receive the weekly benefit amount which is payable in the State in which he resides. However, the solution to the problem is not a simple one, requiring more study of its many ramifications. Perhaps a remedy can not be found in any type of cooperative State action.

The significance of interstate payments from the California fund should not be overlooked. As noted above on page 36 of this report, California paid 28,444 checks which amounted to $530,473 in 1944 to out-of-State claimants. However, it is estimated that approximately 20 per cent of the postwar claims against California will be paid to individuals residing in other States. In view of these circumstances, California has a primary interest in interstate cooperation with respect to benefit payments.

<sup>233</sup> S. B. 1086 introduced by the committee provides in part as follows: "It shall be a misdemeanor for any person residing in this State to wilfully make a false statement or representation or knowingly fail to disclose a material fact to obtain or increase benefits or payments under the unemployment insurance law of any other State."

<sup>234</sup> This results primarily because of the established rule of conflict of laws that no State enforces the penal laws of another. Restatement of the Law of Conflict of Laws (Am. L. Inst.) sections 610 and 611; 3 Beale, Conflict of Laws (1935), section 611.1; Wisconsin v. Pelican Insurance Co., 127 U. S. 265; Huntington v. Attrill, 146 U. S. 657.

In reference to interstate tax enforcement and collection, a serious situation exists today. Your committee has found that as of November 14, 1944, there were 247 employers who had moved to other States owing unemployment insurance taxes to California.<sup>235</sup> At the same time, 258 cases have been received from other States for collection in which the delinquent employer moved from another State to California. The only means of collecting contributions from such cases has been through voluntary payment. As pointed out in the preliminary report, in attempting to bring a court action there are legal as well as practical problems involved.<sup>236</sup> The legal question arising from the rule of conflict of laws with respect to revenue measures would probably not present a serious obstacle today.<sup>237</sup> However, there is a practical problem of finding a convenient method whereby an action to collect the tax may be instituted in the various States to which the delinquent employer has removed. This may be overcome through interstate cooperation and legislation. For example, the Attorney General of the State of Washington has recently consented to bring suit on behalf of California to collect money due this State from an employer who had moved to Washington.<sup>238</sup> In order that the Attorney General of California may reciprocate without any question of want of authority, and in an effort to encourage other States to adopt similar legislation to facilitate the enforcement and collection of unemployment insurance taxes, it is the recommendation of your committee that the Attorney General of California be authorized by statute to bring action in this State on behalf of and as agent for any other State to enforce judgments and obligations for unemployment insurance taxes which are due to other States, providing a like reciprocity is extended to the State of California.<sup>238a</sup>

<sup>235</sup> Letter to the Committee from the Department of Employment (November 14, 1944) reads in part as follows: "During 1943 and 1944 the Department has been requested to make collections for other States in 258 separate instances. I do not have a complete record of the number of accounts that have been referred to other States during these years, . . . but . . . there are at the present time 247 cases pending collection."

Letter to the Committee from the Department of Employment (September 8, 1944) reads in part as follows: "This reply to your letter of August 17 has been delayed while we were getting up-to-date information. At present there are 245 employers owing delinquent balances totaling $110,023.02 who have left the State. In most cases where the whereabouts of the employer is known we are receiving cooperation from the agencies of the other States in attempting collection."

<sup>236</sup> The legal problem involved in enforcing a tax obligation in the courts of another State arises from the early rule of law which considered revenue laws like penal laws and therefore not enforceable by other States (State of Maryland v. Turner, 132 N. Y. S. 173; State of Colorado v. Harbeck, 232 N. Y. 71; Estate of Martin, 240 N. Y. S. 393; Moore v. Mitchell, 28 F. 2d 997, affirmed in 281 U. S. 18 on another ground; see 65 A. L. R. 1360; 3 Beale, Conflict of Laws (1935), section 610.2).

The practical problem of extra-state tax enforcement is in finding a convenient method of bringing suit in the various States throughout the United States to which the delinquent employer may have moved, without incurring the expense of a qualified traveling attorney.

<sup>238</sup> The committee was recently informed by the Department of Employment that the Attorney General of the State of Washington was successful in collecting by court action the tax obligation due to California from the employer who moved to that State.

<sup>238a</sup> The language of S. B. 1086 introduced by the Committee is as follows: "The Attorney General is authorized to commence action in this State as agent for and on behalf of any other State to enforce judgments and liabilities for unemployment insurance taxes or contributions due such other State which other State extends a like comity to this State."

APPLICATION OF THE AVAILABILITY REQUIREMENT

In order to qualify for benefits under all State laws, a claimant must be "able to work and available for work".<sup>239</sup> This provision is a fundamental eligibility requirement in unemployment insurance. A worker who is not available for work is ineligible and disqualified from receiving unemployment benefits, although many individuals have the impression that the only significant grounds for disqualification are refusal of suitable employment, voluntarily quitting work, and discharge for misconduct. The facts show that during 1943 and 1944 there were more workers disqualified in California for not being available for work than for all three of the above named causes combined.<sup>240</sup>

Because of the importance of the availability provision in the administration of the unemployment insurance law, an effort has been made to ascertain just what "available for work" actually means and how it is applied. The purpose of the availability requirement is conceded to be to exclude those who are not in the labor market from receiving benefits. However, in reference to the term "available for work" it is necessary to keep in mind that it is more in the nature of a conclusion of law than a statement of fact. For this reason, to ask an unemployed worker or any individual who is not acquainted with the administrative interpretations of the unemployment insurance law, if he is available for work is practically meaningless. Nevertheless your committee has found that in local offices of the Department of Employment some of the claims examiners do just that and at the same time purport to be administering the unemployment insurance law. Although every claims examiner will conclude that the claimant is available for work or is not available for work, the manner in which this conclusion is reached will explain why the law is not properly administered. A claimant is frequently asked, "Are you available for work?" and the normal reply from any person who does not understand the refinements of the Unemployment Insurance Act would be "Yes, I guess so," and on the basis of such a statement it is determined that a worker is available for work. Such a procedure is improper administration for the following reason. In general, an individual is not "able to work and available for work" under the interpretation given by the Appeals Board to the Unemployment Insurance Act if such individual

- (1) is unwilling to accept work.<sup>241</sup>
- (2) is self-employed.<sup>242</sup>
- (3) is attending school.<sup>243</sup>
- (4) is on a vacation.<sup>244</sup>
- (5) limits wages acceptable to those above prevailing rates.<sup>245</sup>
- (6) restricts hours or conditions of work unreasonably.<sup>246</sup>
- (7) removes to an area where job opportunities are few.<sup>247</sup>

- (9) lacks transportation to work.<sup>249</sup>
- (10) refuses several offers of suitable employment.<sup>250</sup>
- (11) refuses to accept referrals to jobs.<sup>251</sup>
- (12) has domestic responsibilities restricting hours of work.<sup>252</sup>
- (13) is unable to work because of physical condition.<sup>253</sup>
- (14) is pregnant.<sup>254</sup>

The foregoing are some of the more important conditions which may render a claimant ineligible for benefits on the ground of not being available for work. There are two basic elements involved in determining availability for work. The primary test is a subjective one involving the state of mind or personal intent of the individual with respect to employment. Thus where an individual indicates he does not want to take any job and is unwilling to work he is clearly not available for work. However, if the individual states that he is willing to work and will accept a suitable job, then the secondary element involving more objective standards applies. The proper application of the objective test involves a finding of facts to determine whether or not an individual who is willing to work places such restrictions on hours, wages, or conditions of work that he cannot come within the meaning of "available for work" as used in the law. Similarly, an individual who is willing to work may have involuntary restrictions such as family responsibility, lack of transportation or attendance at school, which render him ineligible for benefits under the availability provision. Again, where there are no voluntary or involuntary limitations placed on the individual who states that he is willing to work, his conduct may be such as to show, by refusing to accept referrals to jobs or refusing several offers of suitable employment, that his statement that he is willing to work is not a true statement of fact.

The investigation by your committee has revealed that in general the availability provision of the law is not applied properly.<sup>255</sup> The usual procedure of asking a claimant whether he is available for work, if it has any meaning at all, will probably satisfy the primary test and indicate whether or not the claimant is willing to take a job. This does not reveal whether or not the claimant places limitations on the type of employment he is willing to accept nor does it reveal whether there are any involuntary limitations such as family restrictions and illness which may render him not available for work. It is only where the conduct of the individual is such, by refusing suitable employment and referrals to jobs, that the present procedure followed in most local offices is satisfactory.

<sup>255</sup> There is a general impression that a proper application of the law is measured in terms of the number of individuals who are denied benefits. In suggesting that the law should be more strictly applied and strictly enforced, it is not intended to recommend that determinations of ineligibility should be made without a finding of facts which will sustain the determination. However, a more careful examination and sincere interrogation with respect to the eligibility conditions of the claimant is needed. This requires a thorough understanding of the detailed provisions and refined interpretations of the law as well as of the general language of the Act. On such a basis the claims examiners will be in a position to apply the law more adequately in individual cases and at the same time insure a more uniform State-wide administration.

It is the opinion of your committee that when a claims examiner will ask questions which are necessary to bring forth the facts to show that none of the elements rendering an individual not available for work exist, then he may properly conclude that the claimant is available for work. If in the course of this determination there is reason to believe that a claimant is not answering truthfully all of the questions, an investigation should be made by a special staff to obtain the facts. On the basis of this evidence, the claims examiner may re-determine the eligibility of the claimant and impose whatever penalties are authorized by law. It is recognized that to obtain proper enforcement the present law should be implemented by establishing a field investigation unit in the Department of Employment. However, it is necessary to make certain that the availability provision of the act is properly applied by the claims examiners before any investigating staff can serve a proper purpose.

Your committee believes that when such action is taken the cases in which workers who are not in the labor market receive unemployment benefits will be reduced to a minimum and there will be no need to use the other existing voluntary quit or refusal of suitable employment disqualifications in order to deny benefits to an individual who is in fact not available for work.

ADMINISTRATIVE FUNDS

The cost of administering the Unemployment Insurance Act is paid by the Federal Government. No part of the money collected in the form of State unemployment insurance taxes is used to defray the expenses incurred in operating the Department of Employment. As pointed out on pages 18 and 19 of this report, Congress appropriates, annually, a lump sum of money which the Social Security Board is authorized to allocate to the States pursuant to Title III of the Social Security Act to defray the cost of administering the unemployment insurance laws of each State. For the fiscal year ending 1944, Congress appropriated $36,000,000 for this purpose, while for the current fiscal year ending 1945, the amount appropriated was cut to about $29,000,000. The effect of this reduced appropriation was to decrease the amount received by California by approximately 19 per cent of the amount granted during the previous year. For the Fiscal Year ending 1944, California received $2,595,814 for unemployment insurance administration. For the current Fiscal Year ending 1945 this amount was $2,192,779. During February of 1945, however, an additional $50,000 was made available by the Social Security Board. Thus, together with the $74,300 granted by the Veterans Administration for handling veterans' unemployment benefits in this State, the total amount received to date for the Fiscal Year 1945 by the Department of Employment for unemployment insurance functions has been $2,317,109.

As a result of this decrease in budget, it has been necessary for the Department of Employment to reduce the number of its employees and to eliminate many of its activities. In view of the high claims load which is expected in this State, even before the end of the war, it is possible that California will find itself unprepared and without adequate and trained personnel necessary to properly administer the Unemployment Insurance Act. Appropriations by Congress are generally based on the assumption that unemployment insurance activity will not become significant until after the war. The facts, however, clearly show that California is facing the beginning of its postwar unemployment problem at the present time. Between January of 1944 and January of 1945 the number of unemployed workers receiving benefits has more than doubled and the claims load shows a continual increase. It should be pointed out that two aircraft companies alone in this State employed about 95,000 workers on January, 1, 1945, while 13 months prior to that time the number employed by these two companies was about 250,000. This was a decrease of over 150,000 workers during a 13-month period. California's shipbuilding industry, which maintained relatively high employment during 1944, is now beginning to follow a pattern similar to that which occurred in the aircraft industry last year. It is apparent that California's postwar unemployment problem may well precede the termination of the war.

In view of this situation, your committee sponsored an urgency measure during the January Session of the California Legislature (1945) establishing a special Contingent Administration Fund in the State Treasury out of the money collected as penalties and interest on delinquent unemployment insurance contributions.<sup>256</sup> The purpose of this fund is to meet any critical unemployment condition which may arise at a time when the funds granted to California by the Social Security Board are insufficient to properly administer the Unemployment Insurance Act. In fairness to the Social Security Board, it should be pointed out that California's position is fully appreciated. However, the board can only authorize grants to the States if Congress appropriates the money. In this particular instance, the total appropriation made by Congress was inadequate. During previous years, the department has indicated that ample funds have been made available.

The special Contingent Administrative Fund which is now part of the Unemployment Insurance Act will accumulate a reserve at the rate of about $500,000 per year on the basis of present conditions.<sup>256a</sup> It is recognized that at the next session of the Legislature it may be desirable to provide a limit beyond which no further money shall accumulate. All expenditures from the Contingent Administration Fund are restricted and no withdrawals may be made unless the Social Security Board is unable to provide sufficient money necessary for the proper and efficient administration of the California Law. Under the procedure followed by the Social Security Board, if the State of California were to provide administrative funds to the Department of Employment in addition to the amount granted by the Federal Government, the amount made available by the State would be deducted from the total Federal grant.

Your committee believes that a strict accounting should be required with respect to the use that is made of money from the Contingent Administration Fund. This fund was established to avoid a possible serious situation in California, and not to provide an expense account to pay for out-of-state trips made by the commissioners which the Social <sup>256a</sup> The amount of fines, interest and penalties on delinquent accounts has decreased in recent years. This may be observed from a letter to the committee from the Department of Employment (February 20, 1945) revealing the amount of money which will accumulate in the newly created contingent administration fund:

Interest and Penalties.....	$1,627,252.94	$782,334.06	$724,985.95	$634,221.48	$473,293.67
Fines .....	2,946.50	2,495.00	2,347.25	1,114.50	817.12

Security Board does not recognize as necessary. It has come to the attention of your committee that several other States have created similar funds from which out-of-state tours by the heads of administrative agencies have been financed. Your committee wishes to point out that this was not the purpose for which the California Contingent Fund was created and a report of all expenditures should reveal whether or not its real purpose is adhered to.

Pursuant to the specific provisions of Senate Resolution No. 143 creating the Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance, the following information is submitted relative to the amount of money collected in California by the Federal Government under the Federal Unemployment Tax and the amount of money granted to California by the Federal Government for unemployment insurance administration under Title III of the Social Security Act.<sup>257</sup>

Although a total of $11,912,000 was collected in California under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act in 1943, and only $2,595,814 was granted under Title III of the Social Security Act for unemployment insurance administration, it should be remembered that California received a total of $40,000,000 from the Federal Government under the other provisions of the Social Security Act during 1943. This Federal aid was more than the amount received by any other State in the Union. It is generally stated that the amount of money collected under the Federal Unemployment Tax Act was intended to be used solely to defray the cost of administration of State unemployment insurance laws as well as to encourage the enactment by the states of unemployment insurance legislation. While this may have been the intention of Congress, the Federal Unemployment Tax Act contains no such provision and the funds collected are not earmarked. Actually it is a Federal revenue measure and all moneys collected thereunder are deposited in the general treasury from which appropriations are made by Congress to defray the cost of operating and maintaining the Federal Government including direct grants in aid to the States under the Social Security Act.

PERSONNEL

Your committee has found that many of the weaknesses in the administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act are directly attributable to the failure to maintain adequate and trained personnel in both the various field offices of the department as well as in the central office at Sacramento.

As pointed out in Chapter III of this report there are at present a total of 138 claims examiners in the State. At the same time there are approximately 79 local offices of the department. All of the claims for unemployment insurance, with the exception of the small percentage of cases appealed, are paid or denied on the basis of the original determination by this limited number of claims examiners. Unemployment benefits totaling $1,500,000 were paid during the month of February, 1945, on the basis of determinations made by these individuals whose salaries range from $160 to $200 in the case of a claims examiner, and $130 to $170 in the case of a junior claims examiner.<sup>258</sup> The importance of the work of the claims examiners is generally not appreciated unless one actually visits and observes the activity in a local office. From an administrative and monetary standpoint, the local claims examiner is perhaps the most responsible position in the entire department. The need for additional well-trained and qualified claims examiners is critical at the present time and it is the opinion of your committee that unless greater emphasis is attached to the work performed in the field offices no real improvement in the administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act can be expected.

The field auditing activity of the Tax Division of the Department of Employment is seriously handicapped because of lack of personnel. As of December, 1944, there were only 59 field auditors employed by the department performing tax enforcement functions.<sup>259</sup> When it is recognized that there are over 50,000 employers subject to the Unemployment Insurance Act, and the amount of revenue collected by this tax during the past two years has exceeded the amount collected by any other State tax, it is apparent that this limited number of field auditors are not in a position to properly enforce the tax provisions of the act.<sup>259a</sup>

The loss of competent and trained personnel, particularly during the war, has become serious in the central office in Sacramento; however, the conditions in the central office are not as critical as those which exist in the local field offices of the department. The Research and Statistics Section has placed the commission in a position whereby necessary data for determining sound policies can not be made available. The information needed to carry out the purposes of the act pursuant to Sections 43 and 91 of the Unemployment Insurance Act is not adequate. Your committee has been either unable to obtain or greatly delayed in obtaining necessary data for the purposes of its investigation, and in most instances the inability to provide the information or the delay was attributable to the limited research and statistical staff available.

<sup>259a</sup> The main check against tax evasion used by the department is when workers file claims for benefits and no wage credits appear on the records. Since few claims are filed today this method is not effective. Furthermore, many workers whose claims are denied will not insist that they should have wage credits and thus an investigation is not made.

ADMINISTRATIVE ORGANIZATION

The California Employment Stabilization Commission consisting of five full-time members at a salary of $7,500 per year was created by the 1943 Legislature.<sup>260</sup> During the course of the past two years your committee has had an opportunity to observe the operation of the present form of administrative organization. The fundamental weakness which the majority of the members of the commission have admitted before a public hearing is the division of authority which exists between the two administrative chiefs.<sup>261</sup> The three members of the commission who comprise the Appeals Board serve primarily in a quasi-judicial capacity (deciding appeals), and their activity is removed from the supervisory and strictly administrative functions of the department. However, it is the division of authority between the two members of the commission who are administrative chiefs which presents a serious defect in the law. Under the present arrangement, there is uncertainty as to the particular individual or individuals who are responsible for general supervision of the department and for executing and carrying out the policy determined by the commission itself. It is recognized that there is a need for a direct line of authority whereby one individual is responsible to the Governor for the operation of the Department of Employment in the same manner as every other State Department which has a single Director directly accountable to the Chief Executive of the State.

It is recommended by your committee that the very minimum change in the present law necessary at this time to provide a workable arrangement, without revising the entire existing administrative organization, requires that the chairman of the commission be appointed by the Governor from one of the two administrative chiefs and that he be made responsible to the Governor for supervising the activity of the entire department and carrying out the policies established by the commission. Under the present law the chairman is selected by the commission itself from one of its five members and there is no responsibility for supervising and coordinating the functions of the department as a whole.

Another problem has arisen in reference to the procedure followed by the commission in adopting rules and regulations pursuant to Section 90 of the act. Under the present law, rules and regulations are formulated by either one of the two commissioners who are administrative chiefs. After a public hearing the rule or regulation becomes effective unless a protest is made, in which case the Appeals Board determines whether or not the rule or regulation should be approved. Thus it is only in the case of a protest in which the Appeals Board passes on any rule, and even in such a case, the determination by the Appeals Board is not restricted to the question of whether the rule is in conformity with the act. In view of the recent decision of the Supreme Court<sup>262</sup> in which a ruling of the commission was held invalid on the ground that it was in violation of the act, it would appear that every rule and regulation proposed should conform with the substantive provisions of the act itself, as determined by the Appeals Board with the legal assistance of the Attorney General. Unless such a provision is made, rules and regulations will become effective without any legal determination as to their conformity with the law. This limitation should be placed on the rule-making power to avoid any possible violation of the express provisions of the law as written by the Legislature. In this respect it should be pointed out that the legal section of the department is not a well-defined unit capable of providing complete and adequate legal assistance to the entire department. There is need for closer coordination with and supervision by the Attorney General in order to insure proper and formal interpretation of the unemployment insurance law.

In connection with the administrative organization of the present Department of Employment there is some question as to the advisability of establishing advisory committees which are found in the law of several other States. The California Unemployment Insurance Act provides for an advisory committee composed of labor, management and the public only with respect to employment service activity.<sup>263</sup> Your committee has considered the possibility of providing a similar advisory committee with respect to unemployment insurance activity; however, no definite conclusion or recommendation has been reached at this time.

CENTRALIZED AUDITING SYSTEM

In the course of the investigation by your committee of the field operations of the Tax Division of the State Department of Employment a definite need for coordinating the activities of the various taxing agencies in this State has become apparent. Much of the information which is necessary for an effective and efficient audit for unemployment insurance tax purposes is available from the records of other State agencies, yet there is no central office which compiles such information and makes it readily available for all of the tax enforcement units. At the same time many of the functions performed by the field auditors of the Department of Employment are very similar to, and in many cases a duplication of, the functions performed by the auditors of other tax agencies of this State. Under the present system of independent auditing whereby each taxing agency maintains a separate field staff, there are at least two very serious weaknesses. In the first place, there is a lack of coordination of the data and information compiled by each agency which has application to the tax enforcement work of all the agencies. Secondly, there is a duplication of the functions performed by the auditors of the various agencies and yet no agency seems to have adequate personnel available to perform the work necessary for proper law enforcement.

Your committee wishes to call to the attention of the Legislature the importance of a central audit system in the enforcement of the tax laws of this State, although the problem is one which extends far beyond unemployment insurance operations and manifests itself only in part in the Tax Division of the Department of Employment. The existing system of separate enforcement units for each tax law results in the loss of money to the State and at the same time requires large expenditures for auditing purposes. While your committee is not in a position to recommend any particular form of centralized auditing and tax enforcement for the entire State, it is recommended that action be taken to consider a program that would at least coordinate the information available from the various state departments and unify much of the activity and operations now being duplicated by the separate tax enforcement agencies.

CONTINUATION OF THE COMMITTEE

During the past two years in which your committee was in existence a considerable amount of time was devoted to the study of employment and unemployment conditions in this State as well as the operation and administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act. A number of public hearings and meetings have been held and local offices of the department throughout the State have been visited. A study has also been made of employment opportunities in the various communities and areas. Considerable time has been spent on a study of the unemployment insurance law of this State and of the various other States, with particular attention focused on the problem of interstate cooperation and the work of the Council of State Governments in this field.

Although a thorough study has been made of several phases of the Unemployment Insurance Act and its operation, it has been impossible in view of the complexity of the law itself, and the many ramifications of the problems relating thereto, to review and study every aspect of unemployment insurance in this State.

It is the opinion of your committee that the employment and unemployment conditions of this State should be observed carefully and followed closely within the next two years. It is also recommended that further study be made of the operation of the Unemployment Insurance Act which has accumulated a fund of over $650,000,000 and is being administered by a new commission with only two years of experience during which little unemployment has prevailed and benefit payments have been at a minimum.

The members of your committee have acquired considerable background in this field as a result of their work and are now in a position to approach the problems involved with a better understanding of their significance. Several important studies remain uncompleted and there are many unsolved problems which have come to the attention of your committee. It is therefore recommended that the present interim committee be continued for the next biennium with the same personnel and that sufficient funds be made available to permit a more complete and detailed investigation.

PART III

CONCLUSIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS

It has been the endeavor of your committee to ascertain all relevant facts and circumstances surrounding the labor force of this State with particular attention focused on the employment and unemployment conditions that may be expected within the near future and during the period of postwar reconstruction. In this respect the following conclusions are submitted:

- (1) That California is now the third largest State in the Union and has reached a total population of over eight and one-half million (including all civilians and prewar residents now in the armed forces) which marks an increase of more than one and one-half million persons since 1940;
- (2) That California's working population expanded to three and one-half million workers (as of June, 1943), reflecting an increase in the number employed by more than one million since 1940;
- (3) That the actual amount of unemployment in this State after the war or immediately prior thereto may vary between one-half and one and one-quarter million workers, according to estimates available at this time;
- (4) That California reached its peak wartime employment in the late summer of 1943 and has experienced a sharp decline in the number employed, particularly in manufacturing industry since that date. (Present indications are that this decrease in employment will continue and become more pronounced.)

In the light of these general employment and unemployment conditions and other more detailed studies, your committee has endeavored to appraise the adequacy of the Unemployment Insurance System of this State. We have found serious limitations both in the provisions as well as in the administration of the Unemployment Insurance Act. Your committee believes that it is indispensable for the maintenance of the postwar economic and social stability of this State that intelligent action in the field of unemployment insurance should be taken at this time and not two or four years hence. The failure to provide an adequate program may result in the recurrence of another relief organization which, as pointed out in this report cost the State of California alone over fifty million dollars during the single year of 1940.

The recommendations submitted herewith are made with full appreciation of the heavy burden that unemployment insurance must carry in this State after the war and with a clear recognition of the fact that the unemployment insurance law of this State is a part of a nation-wide system which must, to survive, retain marks of integration and uniformity and at the same time manifest some progressive development.

The unanimous recommendations of your Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance are as follows:

- (1) That workers employed by establishments with one or more employees should be covered by unemployment insurance;
- (2) That unemployment benefits should be available for every eligible worker for a uniform period of 26 weeks;
- (3) That the variable disqualification provisions of the present California law should be adjusted to conform with the uniform disqualification provisions of the Veterans' G. I. Bill;
- (4) That the present two-week waiting period should be reduced to one week;
- (5) That an investigating staff be established in the Department of Employment to insure proper enforcement of the law and to prevent and discourage the filing of claims in violation of the Unemployment Insurance Act;
- (6) That provision be made for greater interstate cooperation in the administration and enforcement of the Unemployment Insurance Law of each State;
- (7) That the commission be given greater authority to determine whether or not workers who file claims for benefits are in the labor market when their prior earnings reveal short periods of employment;
- (8) That a bureau of education and public instruction should be established in the Department of Employment to promote a better understanding of the provisions of the Unemployment Insurance Act;
- (9) That children under the minimum age at which a full-time work permit may be granted should not be considered in the labor market and excluded from coverage under the Unemployment Insurance Act;
- (10) That workers in certain nonprofit organizations should be protected by unemployment insurance and the present exclusion of this group be removed;
- (11) That the worker contributions imposed by the Unemployment Insurance Act should be used to establish an unemployment disability insurance system to pay benefits to individuals who are unemployed because of illness or injury, for which no compensation is otherwise made;
- (12) That no large war expanded industries should be extended a tax rate below the general rate for a two-year period;
- (13) That provision be made for establishing tri-partite appeal tribunals in the various local areas throughout the State.

- (14) That provision should be made to provide dependent allowances to those workers who are the head of a family rather than increase the weekly amount of benefits necessary to more adequately compensate for the wage loss sustained by the unemployed worker;
- (15) That all individual tax rates determined by the Department of Employment each year should be made available for public inspection;
- (16) That consideration should be given to adjusting the merit rating formula according to employment variations or pay roll variations to the end that it more adequately reflects stabilization of employment, and that until such time as a fair and equitable formula based on actual stabilization of employment is developed, no individual tax rate should be reduced more than 1 per cent below the standard rate of 2.7 per cent;
- (17) That (in the opinion of the Chairman of the Committee) the present system of variable tax rates which allows a small percentage of the taxpayers to pay a tax of less than 2.7 per cent should be replaced with a uniform and equal tax on all employers, and that provision should be made for a lower uniform tax on all small employers with less than 8 workers who are not subject to the Federal Unemployment Tax Act until such time as the Federal act is amended to permit a uniform tax reduction for all employers equally;
- (18) That the present interim committee be continued with the same personnel and that adequate funds be made available to permit a more complete and detailed investigation of the subject of employment conditions and unemployment insurance in California.

Respectfully submitted.

The committee is unanimous in its appreciation of the work done by Mr. A. P. Guidotti who, through two years, has worked as the Counsel and Chief Investigator for the committee. We feel we would be remiss in not making some comment about Mr. Guidotti's devotion to his work and in expressing our gratitude for the assistance he has given us in gathering the materials for and organizing the details of this report.

THE EFFECT OF POSTWAR CONDITIONS ON THE CALIFORNIA UNEMPLOYMENT FUND

(Preliminary Report Revised March 21, 1945)

INTRODUCTION

A preliminary report entitled "The Effect of Postwar Conditions on the California Unemployment Fund" was made in October 1943 (Report 376 #1). Most of the detail considerations of the October 1943 report, with respect to postwar claims loads, remain valid and are assumed outright in these revisions.

Subsequent events have, however, invalidated two major assumptions of that 1943 report, namely those covering the timing of the end of both the German and the Japanese wars, and those assuming cost of benefit payments to discharged members of the armed forces would not be borne by the Federal Government but would be borne by the California Unemployment Fund.

That these two assumptions were significant is evidenced by the facts current assumptions of the termination of both the German and Japanese wars by mid-1946 with a high level economy maintained until that time permits additional income to the fund before that postwar year adjustment benefit drain occurs of around $200,000,000.

Passage of the G. I. bill by the Federal Government, with its provision for the payment of unemployment allowances for discharged members of the armed forces, will result in savings to the fund of $61,000,000 in benefit payments to veterans assumed in the 1943 report to be financed by the California fund during the postwar adjustment years.

Curtailed budget and personnel during the past two years has not permitted development of solvency studies originally planned either under various sets of assumptions or to keep the original estimates revised to reflect current conditions.

This current estimate is again made for only the stated set of assumptions set forth in this estimate. In making these assumptions, and in the development of the tabulations attached, an effort was made to assume conditions resulting in the most severe effect on the fund consistent with information available to this office.

Assumptions

1. The end of the war with Japan will occur mid-1946. The war with Germany will end some time prior to that date.
2. During the period between the end of the German and the Japanese war, the continuation of a full war economy accompanied by high Federal war expenditures will sustain a high level of National income within which it is inconsistent to expect major extended unemployment in California.
3. In an industrial economy as complex as California's, it is reasonable to expect that industrial demobilization will not occur simultaneously in all parts of the economy. Maximum unemployment will not immediately follow termination of the Japanese war, a several months' lag will occur during which there will be cumulative building up of the unemployment insurance claims load. The heaviest drain on the fund will come during late 1946 and early 1947 so that the fiscal year 1947 (July, 1946, through June, 1947) will be the period of heaviest benefit payments.
4. Assumptions of labor force, employment and pay rolls during the year of maximum unemployment (fiscal 1947) have been made to be generally consistent with low first postwar year estimates of the Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission.
5. Stored up buying power can create sufficient effective demand for goods and services to avoid a prolonged and deep depression immediately following the war.
6. Estimates contained in the October 1943 preliminary report "The Effect of Postwar Conditions on the California Unemployment Fund" on insurance payments to be made in the two most severe postwar years were considered to continue to be valid after subtraction of that portion of those payments then anticipated would be paid to veterans. This subtraction is warranted since the 1943 study assumed the cost of payments to veterans would be financed by the fund, whereas passage of the Federal G. I. bill provides the payment of these benefits by the Federal Government. In effect then, there was subtracted from the $338,000,000 estimated to be paid in 1945, plus the $217,000,000 estimated to be paid in 1946, under the 1943 study, the $61,000,000 assumed to be paid to veterans leaving a balance for the two years of $494,000,000. Instead of assuming the payment of this $494,000,000 to civilians during 1944 and 1945 as in the 1943 study, this current estimate assumes that total will be paid during the fiscal years 1947 and 1948 (July 1946-June 1947 and July 1947-June 1948). (See footnote * Table 1 attached.)

7. Unemployment allowances will continue to be available to demobilized members of the armed forces through the G. I. bill and will not necessitate benefit payments from the trust fund other than benefits based on wage credits which may be accrued following discharge from the service.
8. The Unemployment Insurance Act will not be changed with regards to coverage, contribution requirements, or benefit eligibility.
9. Sufficient controls will be exercised by government after the war to avoid a disastrous inflation.
10. Government controls of wage rates during the war will be reasonably effective.
11. Average experience rating tax rates as applied to total taxable pay roll will drop gradually to 1.55 per cent in 1947 from their estimated 1944 average of 2.15 per cent and will increase in 1948 to 1.80 per cent.
12. The rate of interest on the balances in the trust fund will average 1.9 per cent during the years 1945, 1946, 1947, and 1948. The actual average rate during 1944 was 1.885 per cent.
13. Between the present time and the end of the war with Japan, the effect of withdrawals from the labor force and rates of in- and out-migration will tend to minimize the number of civilians seeking available jobs.

SUMMARY

1. Under the assumptions described, the California Unemployment Fund will survive the postwar transitional years through 1948 with a minimum year-end balance of $527,200,000 in 1947.
2. Estimated benefit payments for the years 1945-1948, expressed in payments by six-month intervals rather than annually as in Table 1, would be as follows:

1945—1st 6 months-----	$12,500,000
—2d 6 months-----	12,500,000
1946—1st 6 months-----	20,000,000
—2d 6 months-----	73,500,000
1947—1st 6 months-----	220,500,000
—2d 6 months-----	133,000,000
1948—1st 6 months-----	67,000,000
—2d 6 months-----	30,000,000

3. Taxable pay rolls and unemployment estimates used are consistent with the low level employment estimates of the California Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission. Throughout the analysis, where selections permitted a choice, assumptions adverse to the solvency of the fund were used. It is difficult to justify more adverse assumptions than those used.
4. A solvency study, however, could well consider the effect of very severe and sustained unemployment conditions, conditions even worse than those admittedly severe conditions listed in the assumptions here. The stated assumptions provide major extended unemployment will not prevail before a rising trend of employment starts. (See curve of insured employment for all industries attached.)

If unemployment were to continue at its low or even at a somewhat lower point than indicated on the curve for all industries, and provision were made for a second severe year and additional payments of $358,300,000 established (see Table 2), the resulting status of the fund as of December 31, 1948, would be as follows:

	Stated Assumptions with Severe but Moderately Short Transition	Modified Assumptions to Provide Extended Severe Transition
Balance on hand December 31, 1944-----	$621,276,022	$621,276,022
Additions to fund 1945-1948-----	481,700,000	443,300,000
Total available for benefit payments-----	1,102,976,022	1,064,576,022
Benefit payments 1945-1948-----	569,000,000	830,300,000

APPENDIX M

I

At page 100, the record of the hearing before the Senate Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance, March 9, 10, 11, 1944, at Los Angeles, California, reads as follows:

MR. MASHBURN:

"Individually. In two cases they were not building firms, but were real estate firms subcontracting all their work. They have incorporated under Tuxedo Homes. That is one project which will probably last about 18 weeks. Secondly, they are incorporated under Beverly Homes, which is a separate project; and Boulevard Homes, under still another project. The same people may operate with these three corporations, and I have been given to understand under the law they do not need to pay unemployment insurance.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY:

"Unless they employ four or more people for 20 weeks or more.

MR. MASHBURN:

"That's right.

"Here is another type of subterfuge to keep from paying. A building contractor who has been for the past four or five years, or whatever it may be, subject to and paying to the Unemployment Insurance Fund and collecting from their employees, now becomes a real estate operator or subdivider, subcontracting all the work on the job. He employs no one directly, at all. They are all employed by the subcontractor—carpenters, plumbers, electricians, etc. Some of them are not subject to the Unemployment Insurance because they are such small employers, and because of another reason. We can't catch some of them because they spread their employment over a period of time because they are small. For instance, suppose they employed 15 or 16 men for a period of five or six weeks, or even 18 weeks; but for the rest of the year they employed only two or three, or the contractor worked himself on the job. So he spreads his employment out as seven men per day per week for a period not to exceed 20 weeks. So the average total of these employees does not make him subject to the act because he can spread them out. He usually carries his books in his hip pocket—not his check book because he doesn't usually have one. This is depriving the fund of its proper amount of income in that respect. It is depriving the employees who are working on intermittent employment, of their compensation, and it is also unequal for the fellow who is going along with the program. The law should be so written as to prohibit such subterfuge as that. It should not be permitted.

"We have one other condition of that kind here, but I do not have the facts or figures to back it up, except that when a nonunion contractor signs an agreement to become a union contractor, if we find out he is not paying unemployment insurance we can prove our points. I have mentioned spreading employment. That can easily be shown on the steward's cards where they keep a time record.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY:

"If that type of situation exists, naturally two things occur. The fund is being denied money to which it is rightfully entitled and the standing of these employees is very greatly impaired because after they leave that employer they have to work and they have to establish a whole new credit before they can collect.

MR. MASHBURN:

"They may stay with that type of employer because several in this area at present are not entitled to unemployment insurance at all, but if they are they have a break in continuity and with intermittent work such as the building trades, if we have this slump such as we anticipated in the postwar period, he is going to be in a difficult position. That is why we are so interested in that particular point of the law.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY:

"Let's see if I understand what you are driving at.

"You are a contractor. You have been 10 years; so am I, and so is Senator Powers. We have engaged in operations on a widespread scale; we get big jobs and we have been covered employers; our employees are covered. The three of us get together and we bid on some job and we get that job, and we get priorities for enough material to cover 16 or 18 weeks. We set up a new corporation first—a new fictitious corporation called the Southern California Building Corporation. We employ the same people that you and Senator Powers and I have been employing for years.

MR. MASHBURN:

"In many cases that is right.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY:

"But they are now employed by this new corporation, not by you or me or Powers as individuals, but by this new corporation. The work only lasts 18 weeks, and under Section 9 (a) of this act, the employers need make no report until they have employed those men for 20 weeks or over. But at the end of 20 weeks the job is done. If there is something more to do on the job we set up under a new corporation or go in and take a new job.

MR. MASHBURN:

"They take a plot of land and build up to that point and take priorities and build up to that amount. If it goes past 20 weeks they are subject to the act. There are four or five left whom we don't know about. We have corrected that situation pretty well, supply and demand has corrected it, because the men refused to work unless unemployment insurance was paid. But we are interested in the postwar period. If the law permits them to do it at the present time, then when you have everybody vieing for jobs and supply the demand, then we are going to deplete the fund. I think there was a condition in the Federal Housing Administration where, because of the small margin permitted, it caused them to reincorporate, not to be responsible in their own corporation, so if losses occurred it would be on someone else.

SENATOR POWERS:

"These contractors would reincorporate every 18 weeks, or they could not get away with it under the present law.

MR. MASHBURN:

"They are doing it.

"One firm in business here for a number of years, at least 10 that I know of, with the same personnel, who have one, two, three, four, five—five different jobs, so they have five different firms incorporated at the same time.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY:

"Can you give us the actual names?

MR. MASHBURN:

"We will be glad to furnish the list of names, the location, the new corporation, and location of the jobs, if you want them.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY:

"We would be glad to have it. We will be here until the end of the week, and we will be glad to have it here at the State Building, or you can bring it to us at the Biltmore * * *

II

At page 46 the record of the hearing before the Senate Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance, November 13, 14, 1944, Los Angeles, California, reads as follows:

BERNICE SAUNDERS—(Central Casting Corporation)

"Well, we do all the casting for the major studios and we have around 2,000 children registered aged from two weeks to 18 years. Out of the 2,000 children we don't always use all of them, but we have to have them available. They are racials and white children. The racials include Chinese, colored children, Mexicans, Arabians, and the various different races and classes. Sometimes we don't have calls for some of the races, but we have had runs on Chinese children, especially lately. The ages we use mostly are six to 12 years. Sometimes we have runs on high school children from 14 to 18 years of age. We do all the casting for the extra children and they are paid up to $16.50 a day. The child must go to the Board of Education every three months for a new examination card. Cards are issued by our office for them to go. They must have a very good school record and must have very good health, otherwise their permit is refused. All children under 12 years of age must go every three months for a physical examination, and children from 12 to 18 every six months. If the child has bad tonsils or bad teeth or whatever the Board of Education doctor thinks has to be remedied, he will not get a permit until the condition is corrected. When it is fixed, he goes back to the Board of Education and can receive his permit.

Our calls come in from studios on the teletype, giving age and type of children they want. These children are picked out of the files by ages and types and if they have a good permit. Naturally, if the permit has expired even one day, they are not called. When these calls come in from the studios they are filled immediately with these children according to age and type and race. Then they are sent to the State Labor Department. That is, their names are sent to the State Labor Department so that they can give an O. K. on them.

If we try to call the child and the mother is not at home, we don't wait for that child of that mother because our calls must be in to the State Labor Department by 3 or 4 o'clock every afternoon and 10 o'clock Saturday morning.

I guess that is most of the details. Are there any questions you would like to ask?

SENATOR JUDAH

Miss Saunders, what did you say the amount earned by these children is?

MISS SAUNDERS

Well, children that stand in get different amounts ranging from $8.25, $10.50 and $16.50.

SENATOR JUDAH

Is that per day?

MISS SAUNDERS

Yes, and occasionally they get only $5.50. That is not often. If they are wearing dress clothes, that is, evening clothes or tuxedos, they will be paid $16.50 a day because of the type of clothes they are wearing.

SENATOR JUDAH

There is hardly a case but where these child actors earn the minimum amount under the law to qualify them for Unemployment Insurance; isn't that right?

MISS SAUNDERS

A number of them do; of course, some of them don't.

SENATOR JUDAH

Do you have any idea as to the figures on how many do and how many do not?

MISS SAUNDERS

No, I don't think I have. I think Mr. Philbrick can answer that, perhaps, but I wouldn't know.

SENATOR JUDAH

In your case the school department furnishes the permits and functions perfectly in regard to the permits and you take care of that in your own office, do you not? That is, you take care of it yourself out of your office?

MISS SAUNDERS

That is right.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY

Are there any other questions? (None.) All right, Miss Saunders, we may call you back later. Thank you. Will you take the stand, Mr. Philbrick?

HOWARD R. PHILBRICK—(Central Casting Corporation)

I presume that the best place to start is to give your committee some idea of the number of children that are employed in the production of motion pictures. Bear in mind, however, that the figures that I will give you are only those pertaining to extra employment. Extra employment being those individuals who are background or atmosphere children as distinguished from actors who are portraying roles. My figures on the employment of actors are only approximate. I didn't have sufficient time to canvass the studios and our tabulating equipment never touched in the age bracket there and there could be error in those figures.

Central Casting, as Miss Saunders said, handles the placement for all major motion picture companies in Hollywood area, 10 in number, and a few minor ones. Another organization outside of our association also employs children.

We have employed 1,154 in the first three quarters of the present year between the ages of birth and 18 years of age. There are approximately, in addition to that number, 261 free lance performers or contract performers in the same age brackets. The spread in age I have scheduled out for you. Would you like me to read it into the record?

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY

Yes, by all means.

MR. PHILBRICK*CHILDREN'S REPORT 1944

Age Bracket	Number of Children	Gross Dollars	Average Earnings
0-1 year -----	38	$1,504 88	$39 60
1 year -----	24	1,638 64	68 28
2 years -----	14	389 88	27 85
3 years -----	23	654 58	28 46
4 years -----	19	508 51	26 76
5 years -----	9	572 93	63 66
6 years -----	71	8,149 93	114 79

I think Miss Saunders mentioned that the employment of minors became heavy from six years and above. The working conditions that are in the statute books and promulgated by the State Labor Department are very stringent on the employment of very young children.

Age Bracket	Number of Children	Gross Dollars	Average Earnings
7 years -----	50	$6,235 48	$124 71
8 years -----	53	7,190 63	135 67
9 years -----	65	9,564 90	147 15
10 years -----	74	8,508 88	114 98
11 years -----	84	13,633 76	162 31
12 years -----	80	10,295 01	128 69
13 years -----	61	5,776 61	94 70
14 years -----	92	9,962 66	108 29
15 years -----	67	4,398 12	65 64
16 years -----	50	3,604 06	72 08
17 years -----	17	2,115 24	124 43

Now, if any of you have added those figures you will note that you are 263 short in the total. Two hundred sixty-three children appearing in our accounting record have no age listed. However, although we have no age on those children, we know they would generally spread back into the foregoing figures at about the same ratio as our records now show. I don't want you to think that nobody knows how old those children are—those 263 children. But they were children submitted to us by name. That is, the studio itself might have obtained the permit from the Board of Education and simply sent us the name of John Doe and we have no basic data on that particular group of children, so I couldn't spread them through the age brackets, but with the number involved in the statistical report, it should tally out.

Now, this 1,154 children as a group earned $109,428.09 at extra work.

We have also distributed for whatever assistance it may be to you the average earnings by age bracket. Averages in this type of employment where you have such high extremes and such low extremes, produces an artificial average from a statistical point of view and the extreme high and extreme low should be listed in order to give you a true picture. However, I can submit a copy of that data for the record later. I think I have sufficient copies of this information for all members of the committee; in fact, I know I have.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY

Suppose you don't read the names, just give us the facts.

MR. PHILBRICK

You know how it is, all the mothers believe that their children are better performers than the other children.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY

Just refer to them as Case A, Case B, Case C, et cetera.

MR. PHILBRICK

All right. Case No. 1 involves the employment of twins aged nine months. Each twin, that is, each child earned $631.50 in a period of approximately six weeks in addition to which the mother earned approximately $300 in the same period of time. She was essential to the hiring of the children. During the same three-quarter period the children had extra talent employment at a different studio amounting to $31, or rather one of the children did—$31.50. I mentioned that they were nine months of age, did I not?

SENATOR JUDAH

Mr. Philbrick, it is obvious that at nine months of age they are not available for work when they get through at the studio.

MR. PHILBRICK

Well, I am not an expert at employment, but I wouldn't want the job of having to find them employment. Case No. 2 is a child of 14 years of age, earning $612.50 at one studio and $1,429.17 or a total in excess of $1,800 for the first three-quarters of this year.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY

What was the age of that one?

MR. PHILBRICK

Age thirteen. Case No. 3 is aged 14, earning $2,718.60. Case No. 4 aged eight in 1943 earned $794.62; in 1944 for the first three quarters earned $1,212.25 at one studio plus $992 in general extra work in 1944. I thought it might be helpful to you if in at least one case I bracketed the earnings into quarters, starting with 1943 in the first quarter, $16.50; second quarter, $276.75; third quarter, $126, and fourth quarter, $375.75. In 1944, first quarter, $434.50; second quarter, $354.75, and the third quarter, $403.

Case No. 5, general extra work, earned $345.63 at one studio and $1,366.50 at another studio and $988 in a third, all in 1944, or earnings slightly in excess of $2,500. This child was 13 years old.

Case No. 6 is a boy of 13 earning $1,975.01.

Case No. 7, a child, a boy of seven years of age, earned $3,000.

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM

Seven years old.

Case Number 8, child age two months earned $1,500—age two months—$710 earned in the first three quarters of this year at one studio $47.25—pardon me, I am in error on this. This is $1,300 earning $610 at one studio and $710 at the other studio. I might say in checking this data I originally intended to sample any one studio, but to keep the name of that studio, if I could, confidential and present it as typical of the employment at one particular studio, but then it came to my attention that a great many of these children are free lance performers and had very substantial earnings at other studios, so that is the reason for breaking it into these fragmentary items.

The next case is a child age 10 earning $913.34 at one studio, $35 at the other studio. Child age 14 earned $3,366.67. Child age two months, $1,540. Here is one I have no age on. Here is one age 14, $1,478.83. Another age 14, $725. For your guidance in some of the higher earnings, we might take the last case. That sum of money was earned on a rate of approximately $300 a week, so it would give you some idea of the time which the child would be required to work to build up earning credits to make him eligible for Unemployment Insurance benefits. That completes the typical examples on the acting side of the employment of minors. There are, of course, a great many children who have no earnings at all as compared to this, and there are many who are full-fledged actors, AJ or AM members of the Screen Actors' Guild, in the 14 to 18 age bracket whose employment is quite small for a number of reasons. They are having their teeth straightened or the type of employment has changed or something. That is all I have in mind, but if there are any questions, I will be glad to answer them.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY

May I ask a question? Although I am familiar with the commission's rules on the student angle in connection with the youngsters employed in studios, I would like to know—are there educational facilities held out to these children by the studios—that is, by the studios themselves?

MR. PHILBRICK

Very definitely. There have been inferences here that the Board of Education and other regulations are not too stringently enforced at this time, but I think without fear of contradiction, I can say that in the employment of children in motion picture work it would only be a freak accident that would permit a child to be employed with a permit not of good standing. And second, no child is employed in production of motion picture work without there being a Social Welfare Worker and teacher also engaged during the school year. Let me start over. There are regulations and rules that govern the length of time that the child may appear before the camera and be rehearsed et cetera, and during the working day the child must receive its schooling just the same as if it were in the public schools. And I believe the school board selects teachers for the studios in a very careful manner, selecting teachers that can fit into various types of educational systems. I have seen some of this work and some of the teachers and I think the work they do is very good. In fact, I happened to be on a set several weeks ago with the Commissioner, Mr. Dalton, and I think one of the children there said that she liked going to the studio school and that she learned more there than in the regular school, so I don't think there is any doubt of the educational facilities.

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM

That is maintained at your expense?

MR. PHILBRICK

Yes, everything is maintained at the expense of the picture companies.

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM

I notice in one or two instances you referred to remuneration for the mother of young children and in other cases you did not when children of approximately the same age were involved; what is the reason for that?

MR. PHILBRICK

It just happened that I knew in the first case of the twins that the mother was engaged too. I don't happen to know about the other case. The studio that employed the child carried the mother on the pay roll the same length of time in the first case. I do not know whether this is true in the second case or not.

MISS SAUNDERS

She was not paid. The baby was making $50 a day.

MR. PHILBRICK

In the second case the mother was not employed, but under the regulations the mother was present and did accompany the child to the studio.

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM

Have you any knowledge of the number of children who seek benefits under the Unemployment Insurance Act among those you have mentioned?

MR. PHILBRICK

No, that is a bit of information that I would imagine the commission has. I would imagine that to be the exclusive knowledge of the commission.

SENATOR CUNNINGHAM

I presume we can get it from them. I just wondered if you had it.

SENATOR JUDAH

I think we have it right here."

III

Beginning at page 82 the record of the hearing before the Senate Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance November 13, 14, 1944, at Los Angeles, California, reads as follows:

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY

That is very fine. Come right up. Will you state your name and organization for the record.

BERT HARNISH

(State Director for Southern California of the War Manpower Commission)

Upon receipt of your letter, Senator, I broke the thing down into two component parts. As I understood your letter, the committee was interested first, to some extent, in the program and policies of the War Manpower Commission, which I propose to discuss as quickly as I can today; and second, you wanted to know the relationship between the War Manpower Commission and the United States Employment Service offices as pertains to the payment of unemployment insurance. If it is satisfactory to your committee, sir, I would like to cover the first point this afternoon, and have Mr. Christian, of the United States Employment Service, one of our executives, appear tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and discuss the relationship of the USES and the payment of unemployment insurance benefits. If that is satisfactory to you, gentlemen, I will proceed on this other subject.

I prepared quickly this morning, a statement which I have presented to the secretary here. I want to go just a little bit into the historical background of USES.

By Executive Order No. 9139, issued April 18, 1942, the War Manpower Commission was established to assure the most effective mobilization and maximum utilization of the Nation's manpower in the prosecution of the war.

Executive Order 8990, dated December 23, 1941, transferred personnel of the State Employment Service, as an emergency measure, to the United States Employment Service, Social Security Board, effective January 1, 1942.

Subsequently, by Executive Order 9247, issued September 17, 1942, the USES and all functions, duties and powers of the Social Security Board in the Federal Security Agency, relating to employment service, were transferred to the War Manpower Commission.

So much for the historical background of the War Manpower Commission and the USES.

It may prove of interest to note that in Southern California, with only two exceptions, the entire executive staff of the WMC and USES are individuals previously employed by the California State Agency.

In your letter, Senator, you raised the point that certain State officials and employers have advised to the effect that the WMC controls are not working to the best interests of the industry in California.

We acknowledge, without reservation, that some State officials, employers and workers, object to the various manpower controls, and also we realize that such controls do not work to the best interests of everyone. However, we are not operating a popularity contest—and although the expression may be considered somewhat trite—there is a war on. Manpower needed to keep the "must" plants on schedule has to be obtained, although other industries may be adversely affected. Certainly all of us here agree that the materials, services and equipment needed for the successful prosecution and early termination of the war must take priority over any other activity.

What I am attempting to convey to the committee by that comment is, that high military authority, both in the War and Navy Departments, advise through their various functions or agencies the articles most urgently needed for effective prosecution of the war. After those determinations are made we set up certain "must" programs. As long as those programs are under-staffed and materials and services are behind schedule, we are referring, and will continue to refer people to those jobs, even though it is detrimental to less essential or nonessential activities.

One of the controls we put into effect on February 22, 1943 was the minimum wartime work week. The purpose of this regulation is to aid in meeting the manpower requirements of our armed services and our expanding war production program by a more complete utilization of available manpower. Effectuation of this purpose requires that in situations of labor shortage, employers do not hire new workers when their manpower needs can be effectively met by a fuller utilization of their current labor force. The application of this order has reduced the labor requirements of both essential and nonessential industry.

The wartime work week was applied to Southern California business and industry on July 22, 1943. Through modified compliance, WMC program gained 229,056 man-hours, which indicates that the application of this program added approximately 5,205 persons to the local labor market, excluding the number added through voluntary compliance (employers of less than eight of which no statistical record is available).

In July, 1944, a comprehensive report, based upon 242 Wage and Hour compliance inspection surveys, showed the following average work week schedules of firms located in Southern California: Production workers, 49.73 hours; office workers, 45.97 hours. These figures disclose that after one year of operation under the extended work week plan, local employers are maintaining work week schedules which exceed the 48-44 minimum as called for by the program. That is one program that employers as well as workers objected to.

On September 4, 1943, there was a West Coast Manpower Program instituted by Director Justice James F. Byrnes. That program was instituted primarily due to the fact that on the Pacific Coast we were far behind in our production of materials needed for our fighting forces. That West Coast Manpower Program did several things. First, it set up an Area Production Urgency Committee, composed of representatives of the various Federal agencies.

Also under that West Coast Area Manpower Program there was established an Area Manpower Priorities Committee. First the Urgency Committee establishes the relative urgency of the end product and then it goes to the Priority Committee who lists in a vertical manner the companies who make that particular product. Then we come out with a priority list. We convert the urgency of production list into a priority list. For instance, take the building trades; the military will determine which construction products are most essential to the effective prosecution of the war, and after that has been determined the Priorities Committee then puts these in relative order and that becomes the priority list and the War Manpower Commission refers the available workers to establishments in the order of their priority rating.

Members of the committee include representatives of the Army, Navy, Maritime Commission, Office of Defense Transportation, War Food Administration, Aircraft Resources Control Office, War Production Board, Selective Service, Committee for Congested Production Areas and the War Manpower Commission.

The third item under the West Manpower Program is the Committee for the Establishment of Manpower Ceilings. An employment ceiling is merely a wage rationing device for distribution of the available labor.

In other words, our committee says you may have a ceiling of so much. It is merely a rationing device in order to attempt in every manner possible—and incidentally all of these are voluntary programs, attempting to reduce ceilings in order to drive people out of the less essential or nonessential industry into essential industry. When we established ceilings in Southern California we were involved with some 30,000 employers.

Possibly the committee would be interested in a quick resume of the present labor conditions in the area of Southern California. I can skip through that hurriedly, if you like. It might be of some assistance in whatever your deliberations may work into.

In 1940 the population of Southern California was 3,817,411. In 1944 the population increased to 4,450,344; or an increase of 16.6 per cent. Your labor market; that is, your workers employed in 1940 were 1,387,356, and in 1944 the total was 1,983,905, which is an upward change of 43 per cent. Boiling it down into Los Angeles County and Orange County, our population has increased in those two counties by 440,566 and our employment has increased to the extent of 460,418 people. Seventy-five per cent of all the workers I have just referred to are employed in nationally essential and locally needed establishments.

Now, we have a peculiar situation existing in the labor market. It is this: the peak of employment in Los Angeles and Orange Counties was reached in December, 1943, at which time we had 543,195 workers. This is a sample that we had taken on what we call our ES. Seventy-two reporting firms showed this 543,195 employed in December, and as of September 1st of this year that total had dropped to 475,947. That is a reduction of 68,000 or thereabouts. That many less people are in the labor market employed in Los Angeles and Orange Counties today than in December, 1943.

The peculiar part of that particular figure, gentlemen, is that that seems to be a complete disappearance of people from the labor market. Certainly your Unemployment Insurance benefit payments do not reflect any such total as that.

It is my humble opinion that that disappearance from the labor market is composed in the main of school youth who have gone back to school, and secondly, of women and men who have come into the labor market on a patriotic basis and returned to their previous existence and not filed for Unemployment Insurance.

In the aircraft industry the numbers employed jumped from 34,788 in May of 1940 to 165,000 in September of 1944, and during that time there was also a loss of approximately 67,000 workers in the airframe manufacturing industry, such as Lockheed, Douglas, North American, Northrop, etc.

CHAIRMAN SHELLEY:

What period would that be—that loss?

MR. HARNISH:

The peak in the aircraft industry was met in July, 1943, at which time in the airframe manufacturing industry 232,667 workers were employed as compared to 165,846 on September 1st, this year. That is a drop of approximately 67,000 workers.

It may be of interest to this committee to realize that the problem that faces many of us in government service, in which we are joined, of course, to the community, is the reconversion aspect of this particularly uninteresting statistical data that I have just read to you. It does seem to me that the entire State of California has a tremendous job of reconversion. I look at it rather as a conversion problem, instead of reconversion, that we are going into. Certainly these tremendous plants with their enormous employment is going to present quite a problem. Up to the present time we have considered 274 applications for reconversion, of which we have denied only 40. We have approved 234 of those reconversion projects.

In conclusion, gentlemen, I want to bring forth the major problems with which we now have to contend:

1. An increasing difficulty in holding workers in war plants.
2. Decreasing number of workers coming into local employment offices.
3. Increasing evaporation from the labor force—the loss of 1,000,000 in September can not all be accredited to students returning to school. That loss included a large number of others.
4. Increasing difficulty in effecting releases from less essential for transfer to war jobs. Many employment offices report a growing number who come in from war jobs and ask for transfer to less essential activities.

5. A growing protest against all controls.
6. Low pay and relatively bad working conditions.

That sums up my statement, gentlemen. I would be very happy to answer any questions tomorrow afternoon. Also Mr. Christian will be here then to discuss with the committee our operations that apply to the Unemployment Insurance benefits. I would like to make one statement off the record at this time.

* * * * *

MR. CHRISTIAN

My name is Walter O. Christian. I am a Field Representative of the War Manpower Commission.

SENATOR JUDAH

We understand, Mr. Christian, that you are to supply additional information following an appearance here yesterday by Mr. Harnish of the War Manpower Commission, particularly applied to the operation of the Unemployment Insurance Act. That is the subject on which you are to give testimony?

MR. CHRISTIAN

It was my understanding, gentlemen, that you would like to know the present procedures, the cooperative measures in the local office, plus the current trends in the USES, on Unemployment Insurance operation.

SENATOR SHELLEY

May I say there is one thing that is in my mind that I want to ask about and I think it is in the minds of the Committee. I want to put it in front of you right now, Mr. Christian. We are a little bit at a loss to understand the situation when we see all this advertising and hear all these radio programs on National hook-ups, people needed in industries in California and the War Manpower Commission Canteen, which seems to be based on the supposition that there are not sufficient employable people to successfully prosecute the war effort in this State; and then on the other hand, we go to the State Unemployment Insurance records and find, for example, that for the State of California compensable claims for the month of September, 1944, were 34,281 claims. Here for the month of August, 32,271 claims. Last spring our Committee was very happy to see the number of claims even on a State-wide basis were down two or three thousand and although we can understand that some people just won't fit into certain jobs in the war effort, we can not understand certain other things. Right here in Los Angeles, we find a record of 1,226 claims for the month of October in the local office of Los Angeles alone. Here we have 3,363 claims—this isn't just Los Angeles.

I had a discussion with Mr. Kagel in San Francisco because I happen to be one of the Labor members of the Management Labor Committee of the War Manpower Commission of northern California. We find a similar situation there. We want to get this cleared up and if you can clear it up, or anybody else can, we want to hear what you have to say.

MR. CHRISTIAN

It is a sort of an anomalous situation. I won't guarantee to clear it up, and I'm not sure whether what I say will muddle your thinking or help it. To begin with, our demands are centered around the shipbuilding jobs and heavier industries. These are jobs which require a physically strong man to do the work. We have an increased load in the Unemployment Insurance offices that is largely composed of women. There are very few able-bodied men in this group. The men who do apply are largely professional workers, clerical workers, are men with unrelated skills, or those in the upper age bracket who can not go out and build ships or do heavy construction work which we now need. Our work here in that category is very large, and gentlemen, we couldn't do the job that the army and navy say must be done in order to win the war, with the type of labor that is available and drawing unemployment compensation now. That is the situation here; it is not quite the same as it is in San Francisco where the demand is largely in the ship repair industry.

SENATOR SHELLEY

May I throw in this idea? The situation in San Francisco, as explained by Mr. Kagel, is that in the shipyards while they were engaged in new contracts, they employed a lot of unskilled labor and in-migrant labor who had no previous trade background, but were employed as helpers. Today the laborers in the shipyards have been quickly trained welders and burners and cutters. With the burden now shifted from construction, in the face of contract cancellations, to repair of battle damages what they need is more and more highly skilled workers. And these other people just don't fit the picture. Does that apply down here also?

MR. CHRISTIAN

It does but not to the extent that it does in San Francisco. We are getting a big push in repair in shipyards, but we are still maintaining a fairly high average in actual production in the shipyards. That will not be true six months from now. In San Diego they have completed one contract down there and are waiting for ship repair jobs.

In part of the material I have here, Senator, I can probably point out a little better another portion of the question you ask.

SENATOR SHELLEY

Don't let me get you off the track, but I want to give you this idea to hit upon.

MR. CHRISTIAN

Very definitely it is not a question that is new to us. We have it thrown at us many times each week. You gentlemen, I am sure, since you have been members of this Committee, know the procedures a person must go through to file a claim, an Unemployment Insurance claim, in an office. He must go through a receptionist, through a United States Employment Service interviewer, who takes his work application and exposes him to employment opportunities. Then he makes the decision as to whether he is going on the job or not.

SENATOR SHELLEY

I think you ought to define that expression a little more, "exposes him to employment opportunities."

MR. CHRISTIAN

It can only be called exposing him. The interviewer compares the man's qualifications and matches that with the job opportunities open. We continually expose a man to a job and try to impress on him the need for his taking a job in a particular firm, which we will go into a little more later. After it is determined if he doesn't take the job, we get him his claim rights and send him to the Department of Employment and they continue to process. Each week he comes there to the office and he is either screened by the United States Employment Service—by screening I mean they go over the job opportunities he might be able to fill. We go through our applicant lists and offer him priority employment first. That is speaking of men. On women—and we will point out there has been a continually larger number of women available here—we try to expose them to priority jobs, but after they have been exposed and nothing is available for them, we go down below that. We have been trying to meet the problem of the rapid rise of women available here and getting them into any type of employment, and get them off our rolls. Our local office manager has been instructed from time to time to relax as much as they possibly could. We have, particularly in our ceiling program, we have relaxed almost 100 per cent. In many cases in order to carry on, it is necessary to bring women into the job. We have every indication that we have been successful in that program. I found out this morning that in the month of October we placed 1,961 more women in southern California from our office than in September. That means that fewer women are drawing unemployment compensation. You fellows there—you gentlemen—have the work load figures of California. A study of those figures and the comparison of them indicates that northern California is not paying as large a number of claims as we are in southern California. I would like to tell you why.

In cooperation with the assistant chief of the Benefits Division, Mr. Wade, various studies have been in progress during the past several months in an attempt to keep abreast of the increase of the Unemployment Insurance load. As an example, an analysis of the July load—I apologize for not being more up to date—indicates 65 per cent of our claimants in July were women. Thirty-seven per cent of these were over 41 years of age. Forty per cent are experienced in the clerical field and an additional 40 per cent are unskilled or last employed in fruit packing or processing work, or work of similar nature. Of the 35 per cent of the total who were men 24 per cent were 50 years of age or over. In that age group you can't go out and construct refineries and lay pipes or construct ships, as we are having to do. Of this 35 per cent of men 68 per cent had professional, clerical, or sales backgrounds. A large proportion of this group had physical handicaps or deficiencies which prevented conversion into production industries. The analysis further indicated that we had a situation of virtually no claimants from among the production worker group with, however, clerical and other non-production workers being released frequently involuntarily with insufficient jobs for them to find immediate employment; since, however, our average claim extends only four weeks, it seems very likely that this frequently represents a period in which the individual is attempting to find employment, either in his last occupation or in deciding that such employment is unavailable to him, and taking his viewpoint, possibly less desirable employment. That is, after moving around for a period of four weeks he says, "I am going to have to take some other work because that big job I had laid out is no longer available."

Figures released by the Department of Employment indicate that of the 5,265 claimants per week during October in Los Angeles County, that approximately 2,000 were last employed in the aircraft industry. During a ten-month period ending September 1, 1944, major airframe companies experienced a decrease in total employment of 49,856 workers. Since there has earlier been a rather large recruitment for aircraft employment of women, workers of both sexes not normally in the labor market and of marginal workers and since spot surveys indicate that claimants came, to a large degree, from aircraft and related operations, it is easy to understand the growth of claims in Southern California as compared to Northern California. In the north, industrial activity is built largely around shipyard work and there have been no significant decreases in shipyard employment.

Current figures indicate that from January 1st to November 1st, 1944, there has been a total decrease in employment in Los Angeles County of approximately 70,000 workers. Comparing the 5,200 claims paid in Los Angeles County with the 36,000 orders in the USES offices, we find that at least two-thirds of the claimants are of the wrong sex, and a great many of the men are unable physically to qualify for the job openings. These determinations have been made through a recent survey on the adequacy of certain forms as used by the USES to notify the Department of Employment of action taken in the referral of claimants to employment. The survey of the activity at the 11th and Flower Street office indicated the following: 4492 DE 1173's were made, 1013 were for acceptance of referral, 568 were for refusal or referral, 2911 were for no openings. Of the 1013 for the acceptance of referral, a sample was taken of 254 of these cases, and of the 254 only 26 referrals resulted in hires. This by no means is an alarming percentage since in many instances, the applicant was referred to related jobs, and in some cases to jobs paying less than the applicant had previously been making since every effort is being made to place these people. There is also an indication that employers are raising the specifications on orders being currently placed with the local offices.

Approximately four tenths of 1 per cent of the total of those presently engaged in covered employment are, at this time, claimants. It is logical to conclude that as employers and employees contribute to the Unemployment Insurance Fund, a certain proportion will eventually draw benefits. This is apparently happening at this time in the case of certain individuals not ready placeable in employment even in today's labor market.

An excellent cooperative attitude is being constantly maintained between the Department of Employment and the War Manpower Commission—USES staff. When problems are present, both organizations have continually demonstrated their willingness to arrive at an equitable solution. There has been a continuing study made of trends. Necessary changes have been made in procedures, with every move pointing up to the effort to get people into jobs. A Committee of five composed of two members of the Department of Employment and three members from the War Manpower Commission—USES, has recently been formed with the objective of working out adequate provisions for necessary expansions, alterations and changes in the present operating offices or office areas and to bring the thinking of the two organizations as closely together as possible so that the end result will meet the demands that will be placed upon them. In other words, let's be ready for the tremendous load which we know we are going to have when this is over.

MOTION TO PRINT COPIES

Senator Shelley moved that 2,000 Copies of the report of the Senate Interim Committee on Unemployment Insurance be printed.

RESOLUTIONS

The following resolution was offered:

By Senators Mixter, Hulse, and Deuel:

Senate Resolution No. 104

Resolved by the Members of the Senate of the State of California, That this body in accordance with its long-established custom and policy to pay a fitting tribute to those who have performed a "Service well done," that at this time and in this particular instance it is directed to one who has in the past shown a spirit of ambition, energy and ability; and

WHEREAS, This official cognizance is directed to one of the Members of this body, a Member of the Senate of the California Legislature in this Fifty-sixth Session, demonstrating that one can reach the pinnacles of fame and fortune in this glorious land of opportunity, in these United States of America, under the privileges and advantages afforded to all has become a proven fact and reality;

AND FURTHER, It takes into consideration the fact that he entered as a participant in the proceedings of the California State Legislature at an early age in the year of 1899 and only after several weeks of patience, perseverance and hopeful desire, received an appointment as an attache in the State Assembly to the post of assistant to the Chief Assistant to the clerk of the Committee on Judiciary (which position and post has now and for many years past been abolished); that as a result of this appointment and opportunity he devoted his limited spare time in a careful study of the law-making procedure, scanning the volumes on the then limited law library shelves in the State Library which occupied a small corner and space in the State Capitol at that time, and thus enhanced his young legal mind with added knowledge that has in the subsequent years proven beneficial and thus established a sound foundation for his successful career; and be it FURTHER NOTED, That only four years later, in the years of 1903 and 1904, he again returned to the State Capitol, chosen this time by the voters of his district, to the advanced post of Assemblyman. Again, 38 years later, he was again chosen by the people of his district and county to represent them in the Senate. This was in the year 1942, and he is now serving in the second Legislative Session of this term, all of which demonstrates the honor and high esteem in which the citizens of his district regard him.

So, WHEREAS, AND IN TESTIMONY, Of this high regard and esteem of his coworkers in the Senate in his demonstrating that the old proverb "Mighty Oaks from Small Acorns Grow" is a true adage; it is further

Resolved, by the Members of the State Senate, with the exception of the honored personage to whom this resolution refers and is duly directed, That they extend to him their congratulations and best wishes for his continued success on his further climb up the "Ladder of Success" which is conceded assured due to his untiring effort, vigorous energy, eagerness and perseverance to do his part in promoting measures for the general benefit to the public welfare.

So, TO THE HONORABLE JESSE R. DORSEY, This resolution is directed, a distinguished Member of the Senate, a native of California, former District Attorney of the County of Kern, a lifelong resident of the State of California where he has many friends far beyond boundaries of the county and district he has the honor to represent in the Legislature, and it is further

Resolved, That the Secretary of the Senate be directed to arrange for presentation of this resolution in a suitably engrossed form to the Honorable Jesse R. Dorsey as a token of the friendship of his colleagues in this Senate.

Resolution read, and on motion of Senator Mixter adopted.

Address by Edward N. Scheiberling

We meet here today in what is, indeed, in the words of our great President, a "solemn and a glorious hour." Victory has been achieved—at a tragic cost—over one barbaric enemy in Europe. For that victory we give our humble thanks to Almighty God.

But we can not forget that, across the waters which bathe the shores of California, there waits another cruel, rapacious enemy; an enemy as yet unbroken and undefeated; an enemy of great treachery. Not until Japan has been crushed can we speak of peace; not until Japan has been rendered incapable of war can we say that our way of life is safe.

I do not need to tell you of California of the grim and deadly danger of war. Pearl Harbor is too fresh in your mind; too clearly etched are those desperate days of 1941, when our Pacific Coast stood all but open to the most inhuman armies that have ever spread murder upon the earth.

The danger of those days of 1941 must never be repeated. Never again must the peril of death and torture be brought to America. We know of the inhuman cruelties inflicted by Japanese armies in the cities they have raped and plundered; in Shanghai, Nanking, Hongkong, Manila and others. Even now, when victory in the Pacific is certain, our blood is frozen in horror at the thought of the same hideous fate which might have overtaken Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, and other of our American cities.

We are proud of our way of life. We know that our system has resulted in more security and comfort for more people for longer periods than has been provided by all other types of government. We have given our people security at home; security of person, of thought, of ideals. We believe that we have attained a high level of civilization.

But we can not truly say that we have realized the utmost in civilization, we cannot say that we have offered the utmost in security, if each quarter of a century we must send millions of the young men of the world to die in battle.

Must we confess that we can not give our people this last, great freedom, this one final, supreme security? The American Legion does not believe so. The American Legion believes that adult, intelligent, civilized men and women can bring peace to the world.

The American Legion believes that we "must" achieve peace; or see our way of life vanish in bankruptcy, savagery and confusion. The world as we know it cannot endure a repetition of wars such as this. Our economic and social system cannot survive such destructive, disruptive shocks.

We stand at the crossroads today. One path leads to a new, glorious world of freedom; the other back to the dim shadows of ignorance and misery. Great empires and great civilizations have died in the past; we must not let our life become one with Egypt, Greece and Rome.

I have said that we stand here in a solemn and a glorious hour. That is true not alone because of victory in Europe. It is true because, at San Francisco the free nations of the world are charting a course toward peace.

It is my high honor, the official representative of the American Legion, to participate in that conference as a consultant to the American delegation. Success of the San Francisco conference is the highest objective of the Legion. By the grace of God, out of that conference there must come the common understanding that will serve as a foundation for peace.

No one nation is strong enough, today, to assure its own safety. Only through an association of free nations, armed with the force to maintain peace, and cloaked with the authority to use it, can we guarantee our future.

It is too early, yet, to detail the pattern of the international organization that will come out of the conference. But I can report to you now that the conference will succeed. An association of free nations is being born. The instrument for peace is at hand.

But it is only the instrument: A tool waiting the skilled hands that will wield it in the interests of the world. San Francisco will not be the end; it will be the beginning; the first step along a bright pathway of security.

Through me, the 2,200,000 men and women of the American Legion have pledged their complete support to Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., Secretary of State; to the American Delegation, and to the Conference. Those are not idle words. The Legion will work with all of its energy to make the association of free nations successful.

All America must solemnly dedicate itself to the success of this pattern for peace. With victory there will emerge forces of disruption and confusion. Voices will cry for a soft peace, for retirement into a false shell of isolationism. We must be on guard against them with the eternal vigilance which is the price of liberty.

Our President has designated next Sunday as a National Day of Prayer; prayer and thanksgiving for the victory we have won, and for support in the struggle ahead. He has asked all Americans to pray, too, for guidance in the way of peace. I know that in those prayers, humble pleas will be spoken for the guidance and success of the San Francisco Conference.

I have spoken of the pattern to be established at San Francisco as an instrument, a tool with which we can create peace out of a world of war. It will take strength to use that tool. There are few today who believe that no aggressor power will ever again challenge the peace of the world; few who would say that the tool need never be used.

The history of freedom is a story of struggle. We know that we must carry that struggle forward. We do not say that, because of the mere wish, there will be no war. We do say that, under God, the next time we shall be ready for it. The next time we shall have the strength to stamp it out. The next time the free nations of the world, linked together in free association, shall be stronger than the aggressor from the outset. Next time there shall be no valley of shadow and doubt through which we must pass to victory.

The peace we contemplate is a peace of strength. Force is inherent in the San Francisco pattern; and America must be prepared to furnish a large part of that force. America must be the citadel of Democracy in peace as in war.

You of California know that well. You have the longest coast line of any State of this Union, more than 1,000 miles bordering on the Pacific. You know that America must remain powerful. You know that we must retain control of the island bases we have wrested from Japan; the distant bases with which we can keep any future aggressor far from our shores. Mr. Stettinius, Commander Stassen and others in the American Delegation have assured me that we shall retain full control over all strategic bases; and that there will be no limits placed on our right to fortify them. Next time we shall not be caught napping in the Pacific; and I pledge you that the American Legion will be alert to any threat to our full development of those bases.

You know that we must be prepared to back our delegates to the international organization in any threat to peace. You know that such preparedness can best be achieved through universal military training, so that we will always have available physically fit and trained reserves for all our armed forces. You have given voice to that knowledge by passing in this present Legislature a resolution advocating universal military training. The American Legion is grateful to you for this evidence of genuine Americanism at its best.

There will be those in the days to come, who will say that universal military training is incompatible with peace. That is a false and dangerous doctrine!

We of the American Legion commend the attitude of this legislative body in enacting legislation for the benefit of the returning servicemen and women. You have set the pace in many respects, and particularly in the "Farm and Home Purchase Act". It is indeed gratifying to see this Legislature assume its burden and responsibility in this connection.

War follows no rules or pattern. War today is sudden, swift and deadly. The aggressor of the future will not wait for the mobilization of an international force. He will strike with stunning swiftness—strike at the most powerful of his enemies in an effort to win his war with one paralyzing blow.

American strength, American production: that will be the target.

The American Legion is committed to the principle of collective security. We believe with all our hearts that it holds the key to peace.

But we know that we shall have to absorb the first shock of the next attack alone, while the world force is being mobilized. If America dies, the free world dies with her.

It is our solemn duty to be ready. We must meet the first attack of a future aggressor and hurl it back. Let no one say otherwise; in the first days or weeks of war, when an enemy strikes at San Francisco or New York, American men, American guns, American ships and American planes must hold the citadel of freedom.

To that end we must have a strong navy. We must have a strong air force. And we must have a force of citizen soldiers, trained and ready to defend their homes.

But the great hope of the future is this: That, after the first attack, a whole world of free men will stand mobilized beside us. That is what San Francisco means.

By the grace of God, that is the pattern we shall follow, until war, a relic of barbarity, is banished from the earth!

Address by Private First Class Herman Pheffer

Victory in Europe is a wonderful thing. But we all know that the war isn't over. They say that people from Brooklyn don't appreciate the importance of the Japanese war. I don't know about others, but that isn't true of the soldiers from Brooklyn.

We know that the Japanese war is going to be a tough, dirty war. A lot of boys are going to have to die in it. They're counting on us to back them up with guns, tanks, ships, and planes. We've got to do it. We can't let them down. I hear of people quitting their war jobs, looking for a peacetime job. This isn't any time to do that.

War is no good. It's a crazy way of settling things. It never does really settle anything. We've got to learn to stop war. And I know that every soldier is praying for two things: for the success of the San Francisco Conference, and that the United States will remain strong after this war.

We've got to make those prayers come true.

EXPLANATION OF VOTE

Senator Carter asked for, and was granted, unanimous consent to have the following explanation of his absence during the roll call on Senate Bills Nos. 281 and 3, and his vote if he had been present.

May 9, 1945

During my absence while answering a long distance telephone call, Senate Bill 281 and Senate Bill 3 were taken up, and therefore I was absent on roll call. Since I have voted against Senate Bill 9 and Senate Bill 279, the other two bills of the so-called Governor's tax reduction program, I feel that I should state that I would have voted No on Senate Bill 281 and Senate Bill 3.

It seems to me that a tax reduction at this time, particularly on a two-year basis, is both unsound and unwise. All of these bills contemplate that it will be necessary to restore taxes to their 1943 level when our income drops and our expenses continue to increase.

We should continue to collect our revenue on the 1943 basis, so that we will be able to lighten the burdens of the taxpayer when business conditions will make tax reduction be of some benefit to us.

OLIVER J. CARTER

While I feel unworthy of those very kind words thus spoken of me, yet I do, nevertheless, sincerely appreciate the sentiment expressed.

By this action on the part of my friends, I shall ever be mindful of the kindness of the Senators from Exeter, Imperial and Chico, and the generosity of Members of the Senate in thus spreading those sentiments upon the minutes that they may be preserved in the archives of this Legislature. I shall, as long as I am a member of this body, and ever after, strive to retain the esteem of my colleagues and to keep inviolate the confidence reposed in me by my coworkers in this Senate.

Again: I thank you.

RESOLUTIONS

By Senator Carter:

Senate Resolution No. 106

In tribute to the memory of Lieutenant Paul Carr, United States Army, and Ensign Kenneth J. Carr, United States Navy

WHEREAS, The great costliness of war in its most tragic implications has been brought home once again to California with the untimely passing of two brothers from Shasta County, Lieutenant Paul Carr of the United States Army and Ensign Kenneth J. Carr of the United States Navy, each of whom, in April of this year and within one week of each other, did give his life in the service of his Country; and

WHEREAS, In the flower of their youth and exemplifying the finest qualities of American manhood, these men, sons of the late Judge and Mrs. Francis Carr of Redding, California, had gone forth to war, casting aside their peacetime endeavors for the immediate task which lay at hand; and

WHEREAS, Lieutenant Paul Carr, at the age of 29, was killed in action in Italy on April 15, 1945, where he was serving with the Mountain Infantry Division of General Mark Clark's Fifth Army; but shortly before, he had been awarded the Bronze Star for meritorious service in combat on March 3, 1945, near Mt. Terminale, Italy; and

WHEREAS, Ensign Kenneth J. Carr, at the age of 23, met his death on April 9, 1945 when his Navy fighter plane plunged into the ocean during maneuvers off the coast of Southern California; and

WHEREAS, The name of Carr has long been one of the most esteemed of Shasta County and is well known throughout California: Of the three remaining sons and the two daughters of the late Judge Francis Carr, Lieutenant (j.g.) Francis J. Carr, a former Deputy Legislative Counsel and Sacramento attorney, is now stationed with the Navy at Quonset Point, Rhode Island; Lieutenant (j.g.) Laurence W. Carr, former district attorney of Shasta County and one-time Legislative Secretary of Governor Earl Warren, is now on active duty in the Pacific; and James K. Carr is an engineer with the United States Bureau of Reclamation in Sacramento; and

WHEREAS, It is fitting that the memory of these two native sons of California be perpetuated in the official records of the State as lasting evidence of the high regard in which they were held, of the supreme sacrifice which each so willingly made, and of the profound sorrow which their passing has occasioned; now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate of the State of California, That we, the members, extend to all members of the Carr family our deep sympathy in their great loss; and be it further

Resolved, That when the Senate adjourns this day it shall do so in respect to the memory of Lieutenant Paul Carr of the United States Army and of Ensign Kenneth J. Carr of the United States Navy; and be it further

COLORADO RIVER BOARD OF CALIFORNIA

EL CENTRO, California, May 4, 1945

Hon. Frederick F. Houser, President, California State Senate, Sacramento, California.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: Enclosed herewith please find copies of a draft of a report and a brief letter of transmittal relative to the United States-Mexico Water Treaty, the originals of which were mailed to Governor Earl Warren.

It is appropriate at this time that on behalf of the Colorado River Board of California, I express the sincere thanks and appreciation of that agency to the California Legislature for its excellent support in opposing ratification of the Treaty.

Also, permit me to thank you personally for your excellent cooperation in aiding our defense fight against ratification.

Yours very truly,

EVAN T. HEWES, Chairman, Colorado River Board of California

May 3, 1945

*Honorable Earl Warren, Governor
Capitol, Sacramento, California.*

DEAR SIR: Herewith enclosed is report which the Colorado River Board has directed me to submit to you, respecting the proceedings on the Mexican Water Treaty.

The report summarizes the issues and proceedings, and contains a very preliminary appraisal of results.

The Colorado River Board will, as soon as possible, submit to you its views relative to the work-program which it considers essential for the defense of California's interests in the Colorado River.

Very truly yours,

COLORADO RIVER BOARD OF CALIFORNIA

By EVAN T. HEWES, Colorado River Commissioner

May 3, 1945

*Honorable Earl Warren, Governor
Capitol, Sacramento, California.*

DEAR SIR: The Colorado River Board of California has directed me to submit to you the following summation of the proceedings before the United States Senate on the Mexican Water Treaty relating to the Colorado and Tijuana rivers and the Rio Grande.

This treaty was signed at Washington, D.C., on February 3, 1944, and was transmitted by the President to the Senate for its advice and consent. Upon receiving the text of the treaty, the Colorado River Board concluded that the treaty was dangerous to the interests of the State of California in the Colorado River, for the following major reasons:

1. The treaty allotted an excessive amount of water to Mexico, with the consequence that there would not be, under conditions of ultimate development of the basin, sufficient water available, particularly in dry cycles of years, to serve all needs in the United States and supply the amount allotted to Mexico. It was recognized that in view of the controversies between the states in the basin as to the proper interpretation and application of the Colorado River Compact, the Boulder Canyon Project Act and the secretarial contracts executed under that act, it is impossible to foretell whether the deficiencies would fall upon California, Arizona, or in part upon the upper basin, but the hazard that it would impair important California water rights was regarded as sufficiently acute to justify every proper measure in opposition to the treaty.

2. The treaty invested the International Boundary and Water Commission with excessive and uncontrolled authority, administrative, legislative and judicial in character, conflicting with the jurisdiction of other Federal agencies and of the States and subjecting the entire basins of the rivers involved, and the water rights of users throughout the basins, to dictatorial management by the commission. This feature was regarded as harmful to the California water and power agencies.

Accordingly, in March, 1944, with your approval and with the full support and approval of the Legislature, members of the board and its advisors proceeded to Washington for hearings on the treaty which were scheduled shortly to be held before the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations. The proposed hearings were, however, indefinitely postponed early in May, 1944.

In view of the fact that the treaty was supported by official representatives of five States in the Colorado River Basin as well as by Texas and the National Administration, the board considered ways and means to interest in the treaty, organizations and agencies outside of California. Representatives of the board proceeded to confer with public officials and representatives of organizations in the States near and on the Canadian border, with apparently favorable results. Efforts were also made by representatives of the board to bring to the attention of various national organizations the fact that their interests were adversely affected by the treaty, with the result that a substantial number of such organizations adopted resolutions opposing the treaty or particular features of the treaty, and thereafter furnished material contribution to the fight against the treaty. Among these organizations may be mentioned The American Federation of Labor, The American Bar Association, Veterans of Foreign Wars, The National Grange, Brotherhood of Railway Train Men, Railway Labor Executives Association (representing the 19 railway brotherhoods), Inter Mountain Section American Society of Civil Engineers, Western Regional Conference of American National Farm Bureau (representing 11 western States). These organizations were represented when the committee hearings were finally held. What was considered adequate action was obtained from the American Legion and the American National Farm Bureau Federation, but their executives did not consider themselves obliged by such action to appear at the hearings.

Following conferences with Nevada officials, that State declared its opposition to the treaty, and thereafter rendered full and helpful cooperation to California throughout the proceedings. The active assistance of Governor Carville, Senators McCarran and Scrugham, Attorney General Bible and State Engineer Smith is warmly appreciated by the Colorado River Board.

To offset the official support of the treaty by five States in the basin, it was considered advisable to ascertain the sentiment of the actual water users throughout the basin. For that purpose a meeting, called by Governor Carville, was held at Las Vegas, Nevada, January 11 to 13, 1945. It was attended by over 50 delegates. A full discussion of the objections to the treaty was had and a resolution opposing the treaty on many grounds was unanimously adopted. It was estimated that 80 per cent of the actual water users in the Colorado River Basin were represented. Steps were taken for the formation of a permanent organization, and since the meeting, the constitution and by-laws of "The Colorado River Water Users Association" have been prepared, a board of directors has been designated, and Attorney General Alan Bible has been designated as chairman. Representatives of this group appeared at Washington at the hearings, and were very helpful. The cooperation of Mr. Fisher Harris, Judge Arthur V. Watkins and Mr. Hampton Godbe of Utah, and Mr. Greig Scott and Mr. Victor I. Corbell of Arizona, was active and important.

In January, 1945, all Members of the Colorado River Board and advisors proceeded to Washington and organized the work under the chairmanship of Evan T. Hewes, Colorado River Commissioner. A list of the persons representing California at the hearings and thereafter, is attached. The group held daily conferences for the first month, and later, conferences every other day, for the purpose of planning and coordinating the work.

The task of discussing the treaty with Senators was put under the leadership of Otto J. Emme, and the work of preparation and introduction of testimony at the hearings was organized under the leadership of Phil D. Swing.

The hearings before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee commenced on January 22, 1945, and ended on February 21, 1945, including 26 days on which testimony was taken, most of which were full days. California presented nineteen witnesses; other opponents of the treaty—seven; national organizations opposing the treaty—six; State Department—seven; Department of the Interior—four; "The Six States Committee" supporting the treaty—nine; and Texas—nine. The printed transcript in five volumes runs to 1816 pages.

Governor Warren attended the hearings on February 5 and made a clear and forceful statement. Attorney General Kenny made a vigorous opening statement for California on January 30. Both furnished valuable and welcome leadership and advice to the delegation.

On February 23d, before any of the transcript had been printed, the committee voted on the treaty. The vote was 18 to 4 in favor of the treaty, Senator Bridges passing. Senators Johnson, Shipstead, Murray and Pepper voted "no." The majority report was filed February 26th and a minority report signed by Senators Johnson and Shipstead alone was filed March 13th. Senators Pepper and Murray declined to sign on the ground that they were not sufficiently familiar with details to stand cross-examination on the floor.

Senators Johnson and Downey attended the hearings constantly. Senator Downey carried very ably the burden of cross-examination of proponents' witnesses, and made a full day's statement before the committee. Senator McCarran made an excellent statement before the committee, but was away from Washington during much of the hearing. Senator Scrugham of Nevada was confined to the hospital throughout the hearings but signed an effective statement which was presented, together with one from Governor Carville of Nevada, by State Engineer A. M. Smith. It is considered that the showing presented by the California witnesses and other witnesses opposing the treaty was good. Its effect, however, was limited by the actively partisan tactics of the chairman, Senator Connally of Texas, who constantly forced attention to false quantities and continuously scolded and harassed the California witnesses. The value of the testimony was further limited by the fact that at times only two or three of the 23 members of the committee were in attendance, the maximum on any one day being about 12. Senator Millikin of Colorado and Senator Murdock of Utah attended the hearings regularly, and during part of the time, Senator MacFarland and Senator Hayden of Arizona, Senator Millikin carrying the burden of examination of witnesses on behalf of proponents of the treaty.

Mr. Emme, assisted by many other members of the delegation, carried on a full-scale coverage of the Members of the Senate in personal discussion with results which, in the early stages, appeared eminently favorable. This work was greatly facilitated by the fine cooperation of Senator Johnson and Miss Mary Connor, his secretary, who were able to open freely, doors to Senators' offices.

A series of educational booklets in mimeographed and printed form was prepared for use with Members of the Senate, and copies were distributed among the Senators under covering letters from Senator Johnson and other Senators. Part of the printed material went out over California signatures, others over the name of the Colorado River Water Users Conference, and one over the signature of the Salt River Water Users Association of Arizona.

Mr. Swing took charge of the organization of the California delegation in the House in aid of the program. All 23 Members of the House delegation signed a statement protesting the treaty on specific grounds, which statement was presented at the hearings, by Congressman Lea, chairman of the delegation. The congressmen carried on individual canvassing with Senators with whom they had acquaintance and influence. They also presented on the floor of the House, a series of short speeches for the purpose of arousing interest in the subject. A committee of the California delegation, consisting of Congressmen Phillips, King and Hinshaw, with Congressman Sheppard as chairman, expedited the work in the House.

Press relations work was regularly and diligently carried on by Messrs. Jensen and Kinsey, and later with the assistance of Mr. William Herron, with reasonably good news coverage throughout the country and occasional favorable articles by feature writers. However, editorial comment in Washington and New York was bad, being mainly inspired by State Department handouts, and factually inaccurate.

A number of the California group developed a series of statements as material for senators who appeared willing to make speeches opposing the treaty. This part of the work, however, was unproductive for the most part, in that senators preferred to work up their own statements.

Debate on the treaty opened on March 16 and was concluded on April 18, 1945, on which date the vote on the treaty was taken.

Senator Connally opened the debate with a half-day argument in which he was apparently surprised by being continuously heckled by Senators Johnson, Downey, Chandler, Murdock, Wheeler, Hawkes, and others. On the 18th of March, the Senate took up the nomination of Aubrey Williams for R.E.A. Administrator, and returned to the treaty on March 23rd, at which time Senator Hawkes made an able statement in which he presented a letter written to him by Herbert Hoover, opposing the treaty and explaining its background in so far as it relates to the Colorado River Compact. Senator Downey followed him and continued on March 26th at length, making an able and comprehensive presentation on behalf of the opponents of the treaty, concluding his speech on the 27th. Senator Millikin followed him on the 27th, but on the 28th the Senate took up the War Manpower Bill, the debates on which extended to April 3. On April 4, Senator O'Daniel made a brief statement on behalf of Texas interests, and Senator Millikin concluded his speech in support of the treaty. Senator Downey then, on April 5th, commenced the presentation of the first of a group of about 35 amendments to the treaty, presenting two or three of them but withdrawing them on April 6th, when it appeared inevitable that they would be defeated. On April 9th, Senator Downey consented that the treaty go from the committee of the whole to the Senate itself without amendment, with the purpose of offering reservations rather than amendments in the Senate. The Lend-Lease Bill was taken up on the 10th of April, and a comparatively short discussion of the treaty occurred on the 11th, pending a report from a sub-committee of the Committee on Foreign Relations as to certain reservations initially suggested by Senator Connally.

Senator Connally had originally proposed three reservations. They were discussed by the sub-committee with interested senators and other parties, and were elaborated into a set of eleven reservations. Dissatisfaction with the form of several of these reservations led to amendments to them on later days of the debate.

On April 12th, Senator MacFarland made an extended speech favoring the treaty. On April 14th, Senator McCarran presented and discussed a reply which he had received from Commissioner Bashore of the Bureau of Reclamation to an extensive list of questions submitted to him by Senator McCarran. This reply was printed as Senate Document No. 39, and confirmed unmistakably the existence of a deficit in the supply of Colorado River water available to meet Lower Basin contract requirements and the Mexican Treaty requirement under conditions of full development in the United States. Senator Murdock also made an extended statement, followed by Senator Downey. The Connally reservations were adopted as amended.

On April 17th, Senator Downey acceded to a unanimous consent agreement that the treaty be voted on at 4:00 o'clock on the 18th. On the 17th, Senator Downey presented three reservations, which were defeated. Senator Hart presented a reservation relating to the Tijuana River, which was withdrawn. Senator Wherry, Senator Chandler, Senator Hawkes and Senator McCarran presented reservations which were defeated. The highest votes for a reservation, other than those presented by Senator Connally, were 24 yeas to 54 nays on the Wherry reservation and 23 yeas to 63 nays on the Hawkes reservation.

On the 18th, all reservations being disposed of, the treaty proceeded to the final vote, which was 76 yeas to 10 nays, the negative votes being cast by Senators Chandler, Downey, Johnson of California, Langer, McCarran, Moore, Shipstead, Wheeler, Wherry and Young.

On the 18th of April, prior to the vote on the treaty, Senator O'Mahoney filed, for himself and Senators Murdock, Hatch, Chavez, Johnson of Colorado, Millikin, Robertson and Thomas of Utah, being all the senators for the four Upper Basin states, Senate Bill No. 894, authorizing the Bureau of Reclamation to construct, operate, and maintain reservoirs and related works in the Upper Basin of the Colorado River in accordance with the comprehensive plan for the Colorado River Basin now being developed by the Bureau of Reclamation. Upon the ground that such construction would "support and facilitate the administration of the water utilization treaty with Mexico," such works are to be constructed under the Reclamation Law, "except that the cost of construction of such reservoirs shall be borne by the United States as an expense of the administration of the water utilization treaty with Mexico." This bill for free development of the Upper Basin is regarded as an extremely hazardous measure so far as the interests of the Lower Basin are concerned. The factors chiefly contributing to the final vote on the treaty in the Senate appear to be the following:

1. The fact that the need of the Texas projects on the lower Rio Grande for conservation of the waters of the Rio Grande by international storage dams is immediate and pressing, was contrasted with the inescapable fact that for many years there will be sufficient water in the Colorado River for all needs, and that any prospective uses in the Colorado River Basin will be adversely affected. It should be noted that such future uses in California are covered by contracts with the United States, under which California institutions have expended more than $500,000,000.00, believing in the integrity of commitments contained in the Boulder Canyon Project Act and in those contracts.

2. The inference is strong that the Upper Basin senators were committed to the treaty by the prospect or promise of securing construction of projects in the Upper Basin at the expense of the United States, without reimbursement.

3. The incorrect idea was frankly expressed by some eastern and southern senators that while the Colorado River Basin would suffer from the treaty, Texas was gaining enough so that the United States as a whole was not making a very bad bargain.

4. The fact that Mexico greatly increased her use of water during the period of negotiations, led to the feeling that the 1,500,000 acre feet was not an unreasonable allotment, in spite of the fact that the State Department, in conjunction with the Bureau of Reclamation, caused additional releases of water from Boulder, during the period in question, without which Mexico's increased uses could not have been attained.

5. The most important factor, however, was the imminence of the San Francisco Conference, which, coupled with the trend toward internationalism, impelled many senators to vote for the treaty to escape the imputation of isolationism. The argument was strongly voiced that the Senate must not block this treaty, or reject "it, by attaching amendments which would require renegotiation or a fresh consent from Mexico. The leadership of both parties appeared to be committed to this position.

It remains to consider the outcome of the work done at Washington by the California delegation. At the time the treaty was presented to the Senate in February, 1944, it was represented by the State Department to the public as a "model" treaty. At the conclusion of the hearings in February, 1945, although Senator Downey had suggested numerous reservations to the Committee, the majority of the committee still considered it perfect and voted the treaty out without amendment or reservation. When the debate opened, however, there was such an atmosphere of hostility, and it was so evident that many senators were opposed to various features of the treaty, that Senator Connally and the State Department felt compelled to initiate or accept a total of eleven reservations, which were, during the debates, worked over by senators opposing the treaty, to the end that some of them were made more effective. As finally adopted, the reservations are to the following purport:

- (a) No commitment for works to be built at the expense of the United States, other than for eight specific items provided for in the treaty, shall be made without the prior approval of Congress. This prevents wholesale commitment for American expenditures by agreement between the two State Departments or the two Boundary Commissioners.

(b) The powers of the Secretary of State, the American Commissioner, and the American Section, or any other officer or employee of the United States, in so far as they affect persons and property in the United States, shall be subject to statutory and constitutional controls. This reservation retains in Congress and in the courts, control over these officers and goes far to curb their powers, although its precise import is not readily determinable. It should substantially assist California in the protection of its interests.

(c) The treaty does not authorize the Secretary, or American Commissioner or American Section, to alter or control distribution of water in any of the states, "directly or indirectly". The effect of this reservation is uncertain, but it may be some protection to American water users.

(d) The term "international dam or reservoir" means a dam or reservoir on the international boundary.

(e) The term "international plants" means hydroelectric generating plants at international dams.

The three last reservations limit the terms in question to the Rio Grande.

(g) The jurisdiction of the Commission is limited to the boundary parts of the Rio Grande and Colorado Rivers, and the land boundary between the countries. This sharply cuts down the original extent of the jurisdiction of the Commission.

(h) The term "agreements", as used in Article 24 of the treaty, is limited to agreements made under treaties. This cuts down the field of such agreements.

(i) The term "disputes" in the second paragraph of Article 2 refers only to inter-governmental disputes. This eliminates from the quasi-judicial jurisdiction of the Commission all disputes between States, basins, and private individuals and agencies.

(j) The 1,500,000 acre feet allotted to Mexico is included within the 1,500,000 acre feet specified in Article 10, and the 1,500,000 acre feet is the limit of Mexican rights and claims. This reservation eliminates several dangerous ambiguities.

(k) United States "recognizes the duty to require" that the protective structures to be constructed under Article 12(a) are adequate to prevent damage to property in the United States. This is a half-hearted attempt by the Arizona senators to protect the Yuma Project against flood and seepage damage occasioned by the Mexican Diversion Dam.

In addition to the eleven reservations, a provision was added to the resolution of ratification, to the effect that the reservations "will be mentioned in the ratification of this treaty as conveying the true meaning of the treaty, and will in effect form a part of the treaty", which requires that the reservations be communicated to and accepted by Mexico. Also, there was signed on November 14, 1944, a protocol to the treaty, by which the conflict of jurisdiction between the Boundary Commission and other Federal agencies was cleared up, the effect being that agencies such as the Bureau of Reclamation will continue to construct and manage their existing and future projects, and the direct jurisdiction of the Commission is limited to works along the borders and those used exclusively for carrying out treaty functions.

In general, the eleven reservations and the protocol have drastically whittled down the powers of the Secretary of State and the American Commissioner. The ambiguities in connection with the water allocation, which might have been held by a court of arbitration to allow Mexico as much as 3,000,000 acre feet or perhaps more, have been cleared up.

It is obvious that all of the eleven reservations are directly the product of the effort made by California in opposition to the treaty. That effort, in the opinion of the Colorado River Board, has been justified, although it would have been justified had the outcome been entirely negative. The purpose of the State Department, to set up on the Colorado River by perpetual treaty beyond the control of Congress and the courts, an international supergovernment, has been, for the most part, defeated. The result is that citizens and projects in the United States will not be exclusively subject to the orders of this supergovernment, but will have available a substantial measure of relief at the hands of Congress and the courts.

The main issue of the treaty, the quantity of water allocated to Mexico, remains unchanged, although clarified. Three possible avenues of relief to California from the excessive allocation made to Mexico, should be noted.

1. The State Department engineers estimate that as much as 1,000,000 acre feet of water furnished to Mexico will be "return flow", coming principally from projects in Arizona. California engineers estimate this return flow as low as 250,000 acre feet, but the dependable supply from this source can not be definitely known until the United States approaches full development of the Colorado River Basin.

2. It is conceivable that California may improve its position by pumping back to the river, return flow in the Imperial and Coachella Valleys, which would otherwise flow into Salton Sea. If and when water becomes valuable enough in California to warrant the operation, it is possible to pump this return flow water back into the river for delivery to Mexico. The record before the Senate and the Senate Committee is reasonably clear that the intent of the treaty is that Mexico must take any water that comes to the boundary, whatever its quality may be. By pumping return flow water into the river, the net consumptive use in California would be pro tanto reduced, with the possibility of claiming an additional equal quantity from Boulder Dam.

3. The question as to what State or States must shoulder the Mexican burden is undetermined. It is possible that other States can be forced to assume a large proportion of the burden. This question can only be settled by decision of the Supreme Court interpreting the compact, Project Act, and the contracts made thereunder. Priority in the time of development and use of California's water projects will undoubtedly play a substantial part in the controversy.

Looking to the future, it is evident to the Colorado River Board that the ratification of the treaty does not determine its activities, but merely transfers the controversies to another forum. The treaty makes more acute the competition among the States for water. As above shown, there will be, under ultimate development, a definite shortage. The board is proceeding at once, with the assistance of its technical advisors, to appraise all relevant factors in the situation as it confronts California, with the purpose of outlining plans and procedure to protect the State's interests. It is obvious that the issues to be met have become more complex. Much of the difficulty and controversy relating to the Colorado River arises from the process of compromise which occasioned the use of ambiguous and unsatisfactory language in the Colorado River Compact and the Boulder Canyon Project Act. The Mexican Treaty and protocol add further ambiguity and confusion, on which the eleven reservations have imposed additional uncertainties.

As rapidly as it can be done, the board expects to present to you for consideration, its views as to its future scope and method of operation.

Respectfully yours,

COLORADO RIVER BOARD OF CALIFORNIA
By EVAN T. HEWES
Colorado River Commissioner

By Senator Collier:

Senate Resolution No. 107

Relative to the creation of a Senate Fact-Finding Committee on Highways, Streets and Bridges and the allocation of costs for the construction, maintenance and improvement thereof

WHEREAS, The public highways, streets and bridges of California are useful, necessary and indispensable arteries of travel and commerce and have been constructed and improved at great public expense; and

WHEREAS, Such facilities have been built and are maintained by the use of funds derived from taxes on property, from Federal aid, and from registration fees, gasoline taxes and other fees collected as compensation for road use; and

WHEREAS, The demands of war have subjected the streets and highways of this State to unusual and destructive burdens while limiting the materials and manpower available for necessary maintenance, reconstruction and expansion; and

WHEREAS, It is recognized that pavements and other highway improvements are not permanent, but must be rebuilt, resurfaced and modernized, indicating the need of foresight in the treatment of financial problems in connection with the inevitable postwar program of reconstruction; and

WHEREAS, The planning and construction of highways, streets and bridges in California has not included a complete analysis of all the problems involved, including the fullest economic development of the State by opening up underdeveloped areas to economic opportunity and to provide proper transportation to meet changing economic and industrial conditions; and

WHEREAS, No adequate study has been made to determine whether the funds contributed for highway, street and bridge construction and maintenance have been levied equitably either on property of business in relation to its benefits or upon the users in direct proportion to their use; and

WHEREAS, There is inadequate information available to the Senate as to the actual annual cost of roads and streets and the fair apportionment of such cost between those who use them; and to that end the Senate is in need of data as to the total mileage of roads and streets, the capital investment therein, the total sum which should be collected each year in road use charges or other fees in order to maintain, replace and modernize the same, and the proper amount which should be paid each year by users of public thoroughfares to meet the total annual cost of all public roads and streets; and

WHEREAS, The Senate is in need of an adequate report on the foregoing matters, including (a) the present status of the highway system, (b) existing deficiencies therein to meet present demands, (c) a schedule of progressive improvements necessary to keep abreast of future demands, (d) a schedule of maintenance to keep the capital investment up to standard, (e) a schedule of improvements necessary to develop areas of the State that should be opened up to economic opportunity, (f) special problems relating to highways and matters incidental thereto, (g) the financing of highways and the administration of the highway system, (h) the interrelationship between State and local governments in relation to the foregoing and the interrelationship of the State and Federal Government, and (i) the control of traffic on the highways in the interest of safety, which report should include so far as feasible both present needs and future needs for a period of at least 10 years; now, therefore, be it

1. The Senate Fact-Finding Committee on highways, streets and bridges is hereby created and appointed and authorized and directed to ascertain, study and analyze all facts and matters relating or pertaining to the subjects set forth in the foregoing recitals, including but not limited to all facts relative to the cost of constructing, maintaining and improving public highways, streets and bridges in the State, the need and cost for bringing them up to acceptable standards, the cost of maintaining them in such condition, and the need and cost of expanding the highway system of the State to meet the increasing demands for travel, the demands arising and changing economic and industrial conditions, and the opening up of undeveloped areas, the use now and hereafter to be made of such highways, streets and bridges, and the proper distribution and allocation of the cost and burden of construction and maintenance in proportion to benefits both to users and to property as demonstrated by impartial engineering studies, and also including but not limited to the operation, effect, administration, enforcement, and needed revision of any and all laws in any way bearing upon or relating to the subject of this resolution, and to report thereon to the Senate, including in the reports its recommendations for appropriate legislation.

2. The committee shall consist of nine Members of the Senate appointed by the Rules Committee thereof. Vacancies occurring or existing in the membership of the committee shall be filled by the appointing power.

3. The committee is authorized to act during this session of the Legislature, including any recess, and after final adjournment until the commencement of the next regular session, with authority to file its final report not later than the 15th legislative day of the next regular session.

4. The committee and its members shall have and exercise all of the rights, duties and powers conferred upon investigating committees and their members by the provisions of the Joint Rules of the Senate and Assembly as they are adopted and amended from time to time, which provisions are incorporated herein and made applicable to this committee and its members.

5. The committee has the following additional powers and duties:

(a) To select a chairman and a vice chairman from its membership.

(b) To cooperate with and secure the cooperation of county, city, city and county, and other local law enforcement agencies in investigating any matter within the scope of this resolution and to direct the sheriff of any county to serve subpoenas, orders and other process issued by the committee.

(c) To report its findings and recommendations to the Senate and to the people from time to time and at any time, not later than herein provided.

(d) To do any and all other things necessary or convenient to enable it fully and adequately to exercise its powers, perform its duties, and accomplish the objects and purposes of this resolution.

6. An Advisory Council to the committee is hereby created, to consist of five non-legislative members appointed by the committee, which council shall aid and advise the committee in the studies conducted by the latter in carrying out the purposes of this resolution. The Advisory Council shall have and exercise powers and duties as shall be defined from time to time by the committee within the scope of the powers and duties committed to the latter by this resolution. Members of the Advisory Council shall be entitled to the same mileage and expenses, or the allowance in lieu thereof, as members of the committee.

7. The sum of fifty thousand dollars ($50,000) or so much thereof as may be necessary is hereby made available from the contingent funds of the Senate and of the Assembly for the expenses of the committee and its employees, and of the Advisory Council, and for any charges, expenses or claims it may incur under this resolution, to be paid from the said contingent funds equally and disbursed, after certification by the chairman of the committee, upon warrants drawn by the State Controller upon the State Treasurer.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

SACRAMENTO 14, May 14, 1945

*To the Honorable Members of the Senate,
State of California
Sacramento, California*

GREETINGS: I am returning herewith, without my signature, Senate Bill No. 691, entitled: "An act to amend Section 3515.5 of the Revenue and Taxation Code, relating to transfer to the Veterans' Welfare Board of tax-deeded property."

My objections to this bill are as follows:

This bill purports to provide a procedure whereby delinquent taxes on real property belonging to the Veterans' Welfare Board may be cancelled. In the first place, this bill is legally insufficient to accomplish its apparent purpose. I am advised by the Attorney General that the bill contains ambiguities which destroy its effectiveness in providing a means to secure automatic cancellation of such delinquent taxes. Furthermore, the State Lands Commission has advised me that the bill is unworkable as it affects that agency.

In the second place, this bill is unnecessary, as adequate provision is already found in the law to permit cancellation of such taxes. Section 4986 of the Revenue and Taxation Code provides an adequate method for the accomplishment of this purpose. Furthermore, I have signed Senate Bill No. 672 which further strengthens and clarifies the existing procedure whereby the Veterans' Welfare Board may secure cancellation of delinquent taxes on land owned by it.

My objections to this bill have been discussed with the authors, and I am assured they have no serious opposition to a veto of this bill.

Respectfully submitted.

EARL WARREN, Governor

Message read.

President of the Senate Presiding

At 2.16 p.m., Hon. Frederick F. Houser, President of the Senate, presiding.

MESSAGES FROM THE GOVERNOR

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, GOVERNOR'S OFFICE

SACRAMENTO 14, May 15, 1945

To the Honorable Members of the Senate, State of California
Sacramento, California

GREETINGS: I am returning herewith, without my approval, Senate Bill No. 407, entitled: "An act to add Section 1225 to the Government Code, relating to public office and employment", first, because in my opinion it violates the spirit, if not the letter, of the Constitutions of the United States and of the State of California; and second, because it would accomplish no public purpose. To many people a casual reading of the bill would not disclose these defects, and I will therefore give my reasons for vetoing it somewhat in detail.

The bill as originally introduced provided that all conscientious objectors who claim and are granted exemption from military service during World War No. 2 are ineligible thereafter to any State or local office or employment. The constitutionality of the bill was questioned and the Legislative Counsel, by his opinion which appears in the Senate Journal of April 23, 1945, confirmed the objection. The bill was then amended in the Assembly in order to accomplish the same purpose and at the same time avoid the constitutional objection. As finally adopted, it provides that every candidate for public office, every appointee to public office, and every applicant for employment by the State or any political subdivision, municipal corporation or public district or corporation shall be required to answer in writing and file his answer to the following question: "If necessary, are you willing to take up arms in defense of the United States of America?"

It is obvious, therefore, that in final form the bill seeks to accomplish by indirection what it could not constitutionally accomplish directly. That is to say, instead of prohibiting a conscientious objector from holding public office or employment, it compels him to publicize his minority religious beliefs in a manner which would as effectively prevent his election or appointment thereto.

The main question in determining the desirability of such legislation is whether it conforms to the letter and spirit of the constitutional provisions guaranteeing to every American freedom of worship according to his own conscience. Particularly is this true when we are in the middle of a terrible world war wherein people of all religions are joined together under the banner of the United Nations for the preservation of the Four Freedoms, among which is the Freedom of Religion—not just your religion and mine, but all religion. Bearing on this subject is the first sentence of the Bill of Rights in the Constitution of the United States (Amendment I) reading as follows: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; * * *". More specifically, however, the Constitution of California, in its "Declaration of Rights," Article I, Section 4, provides that "The free exercise and enjoyment of religious profession and worship, without discrimination or preference, shall forever be guaranteed in this State * * *". Article XX, Section 3, further provides: "Members of the Legislature, and all officers, executive and judicial, except such inferior officers as may be by law exempted, shall, before they enter upon the duties of their respective offices, take and subscribe the following oath or affirmation: 'I do solemnly swear (or affirm, as the case may be) that I will support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the State of California, and that I will faithfully discharge the duties of the office of-----according to the best of my ability.' And no other oath, declaration, or test shall be required as a qualification for any office or public trust."

In the spirit of the Bill of Rights, Congress has, in all of the important wars, made provision for those who have religious scruples against bearing arms. In this war it has provided in the Selective Service Act, Subdivision "g" of Section 309, Title 50, that "Nothing contained in this act shall be construed to require any person to be subject to combatant training and service in the land or naval forces of the United States who, by reason of religious training and belief, is conscientiously opposed to participation in war in any form." It then further provides for such persons other types of service in furtherance of the war effort. As a result, many of them are today serving on battlefields in ambulance units, as stretcher bearers and on other dangerous missions of mercy.

Shall persons who thus exercise their constitutional and statutory rights in connection with their religion be held up to public scorn merely for doing so? I cannot believe that it is in the interest of the public welfare to so punish them. By this I do not imply that I share their beliefs. My own religion and my sense of loyalty to my country impel me to bear arms. I did so in the last war and would willingly do so now. My only son of military age, according to his own desires and to my great satisfaction, is now bearing arms in the Pacific. It is difficult for me as an individual to understand how others cannot conscientiously do the same thing. On the other hand, I am convinced that there are people who do so believe and whose beliefs are as sincere as my own and those who agree with me. Happily, from my point of view, they are decidedly in the minority, because otherwise we might not have achieved victory over the cruel Nazis. I am told that fewer than one in a thousand registrants have asked for and received such exemptions.

In the last analysis, the question resolves itself into whether we shall punish throughout their lives those who hold such beliefs. I am satisfied that the people of our country do not find it in their hearts to do so, and I would regret seeing California, which has always been distinguished by religious tolerance, initiate a type of legislation which might degenerate into "witch-hunting." From such a statute might flow efforts to require applicants for the public service to answer other questions concerning their religion and consciences. I am sure the proponents of this bill have no such designs, but flood gates opened carelessly occasion the same damage as if they were opened intentionally. I believe the sponsors originally intended to keep out of the public service, not those who are serving as stretcher-bearers and medical attendants on the field of battle, but those who refuse to bear arms for their country under the guise of religious belief against war and without actually having such conscientious scruples. Such persons, of course, are fakers and deserve the contempt of all people. On the other hand, there are also those who from the same base motives and without just reasons claim exemption from military service on the grounds of dependency, occupation, physical disability, etc. But we should not taint all who have fairly exercised their rights under the statutes merely because of the derelictions of a comparative few.

I cannot escape the conclusion that this bill would operate only against the person of true religious conviction because he would be the only one to answer the question truthfully when seeking a public position. The fakers and the subversives would lie to accomplish their ends. It would therefore serve no useful purpose.

I trust that on consideration of this veto message the Legislature will bear in mind the great objectives of the war and the things that are making it possible for us to win. To my mind one of the most fundamental things we are fighting for is to retain the right we have always had in America to believe and live according to our religion and our individual consciences. We have been successful in this war beyond imagination and almost entirely because we have achieved unity—the unity of people of all races and of all religious beliefs—a unity that would be shaken, if not shattered, by legislation of this character.

Respectfully submitted.

EARL WARREN, Governor

Report and Comments of the Joint Legislative Fact-Finding Committee on Agricultural and Industrial Labor Appointed Pursuant to the Terms of Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 13 and Continued by Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 40 of the Fifty-fifth Session of the California Legislature, and Continued by Senate Concurrent Resolution No. 1 of the Fifty-sixth Session of the California Legislature, Covering the Committee's Investigation of Farm Labor and Related Subjects

To the Senate:

This committee has completed the work assigned and submits its final report and comments.

Several phases of the committee's work have been reported to Senators prior to this final summary.

This cumulative report is concerned with the committee's investigation of farm labor in California, and to some extent Nationally, from the date of the first hearing until the filing of this report.

Much material of an obviously historical nature has been included in these findings, for farm labor problems will always exist in California and we should profit from the costly experience which has taught us so many lessons for the future.

While hearings have not been held recently, the committee, pursuing its purpose, has been able to gather much valuable, enlightening, and current information regarding farm labor and related subjects. The committee includes this new material, augmenting testimony, for the information and possible guidance of Senators and to present a continuing record of this increasingly perplexing problem.

We have found no one who can tell us now how farm labor supplies will be affected by the impact of peace. Although at war, we must be thinking of a peace which might come quickly, and how peace will affect our National economy, particularly food production and the abundance or scarcity of farm workers.

It will be helpful at this point, no doubt, to show the tremendous production of California agriculture and its importance not only to the State and the Nation but also to the world.

Reports prepared for the committee by Margot Wakeman Lenhart, Farm Labor Market Analyst of the Agricultural Extension Service, show that California growers produced $1,700,469 (8.44 per cent) of the Nation's $20,136,378 agricultural wealth in 1944, a critical war year, and in the two previous wartime years their contribution was as follows:

1943	$ 1,573,465	(8.21 per cent)	California
	$19,169,024		United States
1942	$ 1,148,351	(7.50 per cent)	California
	$15,316,418		United States

It is also enlightening to bear in mind the contributions of California growers to the total production of their crops throughout the Nation, the same source citing that:

1. California produces 100 per cent of the almond crop.
2. California produces 100 per cent of the fig crop.
3. California produces 100 per cent of the lemon crop.
4. California produces 100 per cent of the olive crop.
5. California produces 97 per cent of the prune crop.
6. California produces 91 per cent of the grape crop.
7. California produces 90 per cent of the apricot crop.
8. California produces 90 per cent of the English walnut crop.
9. California produces 65 per cent of the lettuce crop.
10. California produces 61 per cent of the orange crop.
11. California produces 56 per cent of the carrot crop.
12. California produces 37 per cent of the peach crop.
13. California produces 34 per cent of the pear crop.
14. California produces 30 per cent of the barley crop.
15. California produces 30 per cent of the dry bean crop.
16. California produces 28 per cent of the hop crop.
17. California produces 29 per cent of the tomato crop.
18. California produces 23 per cent of the rice crop.
19. California produces 20 per cent of the cherry crop.
20. California produces 19 per cent of the sugar beet crop.
21. California produces 14 per cent of the hay crop.
22. California produces 10 per cent of the flaxseed crop.
23. California produces 10 per cent of the potato crop.
24. California produces 6 per cent of the apple crop.
25. California produces 3 per cent of the cotton crop.
26. California produces 1 per cent of the wheat crop.

Thus, through unchallenged production figures, we are shown the prodigious proportions of California agriculture.

Also is shown, we submit, the wisdom of the State of California, through the provident action of its Legislature and the approval of Governor Warren, in making far-sighted preparations in 1942 to finance and operate its own Farm Labor Placement Service in case the National Farm Labor Recruitment Program should have bogged down altogether.

The evidence shows that in 1942, the year before the operations of the Farm Production Council, California growers lost crops worth about $14,000,000 through lack of harvest labor, but that during the first year of the council's operation there had been practically no loss of importance due to lack of farm help. (See "Estimated Crop Losses in California Due to Farm Labor Shortages During 1942," by Geo. A. Scott, Principal Agricultural Statistician, California Cooperative Crop Reporting Service.)

The enactment of the Food and Fiber Act and the subsequent creation and operation of the California Farm Production Council was California's answer in bold and prompt action at that critical period when, due to incompetence and hesitancy in Washington, D. C., the entire farm labor program in this State and this Nation was threatened.

In view of what occurred then, what could have happened, what the committee has learned first hand from many witnesses, and from its own conclusions regarding the present situation, the committee suggests that it has been proved beyond a doubt that California should never in the future be without a "stand-by" set up that could take over responsibility quickly and operate an orderly plan in case the National farm labor procurement program should become snarled again. This important consideration in the present farm labor situation in California is the subject of a special recommendation made a part of this report.

The Senate should be constantly and clearly informed on this important activity.

The committee is fortunate in that it has had the benefit of the testimony taken in California by the Special Committee to investigate farm labor conditions in the west. This committee was headed by the Honorable Sheridan Downey, United States Senator from California. The committee also had the benefit and enlightenment of the printed reports of the hearings held by the Subcommittee of the Committee on Appropriations of the United States Senate, Seventy-eighth Congress, 1944.

In the light of this testimony, the committee takes this opportunity to point out the remarkable services performed for California and the Nation by Colonel Philip G. Bruton, formerly Director of Labor, War Food Administration, since returned to active duty with the United States Army. Colonel Bruton, in innumerable and particular ways, was able and eager to help California agriculture solve many difficult farm labor problems. Because of his "know how" in Washington, D. C., his personal knowledge of California farm conditions, and his sympathy and understanding for and of the farmer's problems, this outstanding Army officer was able to and did perform to the very highest standards of public service.

The committee also wishes to point out to Senators that from that day the responsibility for the administration of the Farm Placement Service was sheared from the United States Employment Service and the importation of foreign workers removed from the functions of the Farm Security Administration, criticisms and complaints formerly directed at farm labor recruiting and administration have mostly vanished. This shifting from condemnation to approbation is a bright compliment to the administrative and field staffs of the Agricultural Extension Service, headed by Professor B. H. Crocheron, and his able assistants, Warren R. Schoonover and Frank R. Buckner, and to the coordinating efforts of the Farm Production Council and its staff, headed by Professor R. L. Adams, and to the Office of Labor, War Food Administration, headed by William A. Anglim, Chief of Operations, Berkeley.

These agencies and these thoughtful men, and many others unnamed but nonetheless important, are all working harmoniously for the welfare of California agriculture and the people of the State, and together they show what can be done when authority on a State level is coordinated, responsibility fixed, and locally directed.

The committee finds, corroborating what every farmer knows and has known for years, that the lack of new farm machinery, replacements and repair parts, is perhaps the most perplexing farm problem at present. Now we are informed that there will be less controlled materials for the production of farm machinery in the second quarter of 1945, considerably less, only 195,000 tons compared with a net usage of 256,000 tons in the first quarter of the year.

The amount of steel allotted for repairs will remain the same for the second quarter, and this means that the cut must be absorbed in the production of new farm machinery.

Furthermore, a report of the War Production Board on March 1st showed manufacture of wheel tractors to be 3 per cent behind schedule, repair parts, 9 per cent; attachments, 4.4 per cent; all other equipment, 20.4 per cent.

Considering the situation, let us revert to 1943 and consider what United States Senator Harry S. Truman, now the President of the United States, said about the situation then. In the Second Annual Report by the Special (Truman) Committee to Investigate the National Defense Program, the then Senator Truman wrote (Congressional Record, March 11, 1943, beginning on page 1902):

"While supremely confident of victory, the committee is convinced that the year ahead will be the toughest and grimmest in our Nation's history, both on the fighting fronts and for the men and women on the home front. If we are to do the job we have set for ourselves and cut down the loss of life in this war, this year will demand harder work, longer hours, greater sacrifices, and more single-minded devotion from every American * * *. Three basic weaknesses in our war program have been responsible for nearly all the failures and shortcomings which the committee has found in a score or more of investigations of specific phases of that program. These are:

"1. Inadequate overall planning within Government agencies at the beginning of the various programs, and delay in determining basic policies necessary to carry out such programs effectively.

"2. Conflicting authority over and responsibility for various phases of the war program, resulting in delays and buck passing.

"3. Hesitancy of Government to adopt unpopular or unpleasant policies long after the facts clearly indicated such policies were necessary.

"Farmers produced food magnificently under handicaps in 1942. Greater production will be required in 1943. Prices of commodities including both labor and farm prices, must be controlled if inflationary spirals with consequent disaster are to be avoided. "Full and effective utilization of our available manpower is one of the biggest jobs on the home front this year, and it will become more and more urgent as induction of men into the armed services continues. Strong, firm policies of government, backed by the cooperation of labor, industry, and agriculture will be essential. * * * Care should be taken to provide the machinery which is necessary to produce and transport food, oil, coal, and the various minerals."

During Senator Truman's report, Senator Clark of Missouri pointed out that "farm machinery was allotted to States only on the basis of the extent of mechanization they already had, so that the State of Iowa, for instance, which was about 90 per cent mechanized, could obtain 90 per cent of the available supply of machinery, whereas the State of Oklahoma, perhaps only 14 per cent mechanized, could obtain farm machinery only on the basis of 14 per cent of the available machinery. I think that was one of the most asinine orders ever issued."

Senator Truman concurred in Senator Clark's remarks. Commented Senator Truman: "I think that if the Secretary of Agriculture had made the fight as he should have made it, the supply of farm machinery would not be short now."

These remarks, particularly those of the present President of the United States, then a United States Senator, are incorporated in the report to show the National situation and to point up one of the fundamental weaknesses of the whole farm labor situation, the lack of new machinery, repair, and replacement. This difficulty, fundamental in relieving the farm labor situation, continues to this very day and this very hour.

The committee finds that there is a grave threat to the welfare of agriculture and the continued success of our farm labor program in the "mumbo-jumbo" method of liquidating vast amounts of Federally-owned surplus equipment useful in agriculture.

The committee emphasizes that somehow the farmers of the Nation, and the food processors, must be given first opportunity to purchase this equipment at fair prices. If the vast amounts of equipment needful in the operation of farms, orchards, and ranges is not made available to all the people producing food in this country and food production consequently falls drastically, then the condemnation of the Nation can justly fall on those responsible.

Farmers should not be required to pay exorbitant prices to speculators for this material purchased with the people's money.

It still is true that in order to live, people must eat. Nothing outweighs that consideration. It does not suffice that a man obtain a new automobile, his family a new radio set, or his wife nylon stockings, if they cannot obtain food.

An editorial comment on the deplorable situation regarding the disposition of surpluses as at present, is inserted in the Appendix. (See "Surplus Property Disposal" in New York Times, March 26, 1945 printed in the Congressional Record, Page A 1896-7, April 17, 1945 at the request of Honorable Daniel A. Reed of New York.)

The testimony of all witnesses has been summarized and is a part of this report. The complete transcribed testimony is also available in the records of the committee. Also available for inspection and study are the exhibits listed.

Wartime Problems of Farm Labor Recruitment in California

California farm labor problems really took on importance from an administrative standpoint in 1940, the first year after the start of the European war, when the State Department of Employment became more concerned with an organized program for recruiting and placing agricultural workers.

A State Supervisor of Farm Placement was appointed within the Department with responsibilities strengthening field offices and developing an information service for the benefit of workers and employers. In consultation with many interested groups, the Farm Labor Reporting system was inaugurated which would furnish information regarding labor shortages and surpluses and would provide current information on working conditions in the varied crops throughout the State.

This was in anticipation of critical changes in the farm labor supply of the State which would undoubtedly be occasioned by the European War and which would become extremely serious if the conflict would eventually involve the United States.

California harvests are largely dependent upon migratory agricultural workers. Seasonal workers were estimated before the war to constitute approximately 50 per cent of the total labor force and of this number a great number followed the crops from one location to another. It is extremely important that these workers shall be guided into the areas of labor shortage at the time of need. Reliable work information is, therefore, very necessary to any successful program.

The farm labor supply in California in 1940 was sufficient to harvest all crops with no more than normal losses, or those losses which occur as a result of abandonment, market conditions, extreme weather, or cultural practices. In fact, labor surpluses were reported in a number of areas during this year.

The general farm wage in 1940 was 40 cents an hour.

In 1941 the farm labor supply was adequate for nearly all crops, although some difficulty was experienced in the late harvests of cotton and sugar beets. Labor stringencies were not apparent until the fall months of the year and wage levels did not change materially from the previous year. A slight movement of workers began during the later months from farm work to war industries which were beginning to expand as a result of increased purchases by the European Nations and the growing defense program in the United States.

Industrial wages were so much more attractive than farm wages that the competition grew to alarming proportions within a short period of time.

Immediately following the outbreak of war in December, 1941, all State Employment Services were organized into the United States Employment Service by presidential order which became effective January 1, 1942. This required a change of administrative authority which became invested in the Social Security Board and was removed entirely from State administration.

It was during this year that the farm labor problem became involved in a combination of circumstances which are unlikely to be repeated under any other conditions than that of another war.

The necessity of industrial production led to ever increasing wages and increasing competition between the war industries and agriculture. It has been estimated that as many as 90,000 regular farm workers left California farms during this year to work in shipyards, aircraft factories, munitions plants, military installations, and other war activities.

The evacuation of persons of Japanese ancestry from California removed 93,000 of the population of the State of whom it was estimated that from 15,000 to 20,000 were either agricultural employers or workers. About 6,000 California farms were owned by Japanese at this time. These farms produced a wide variety of crops but were chiefly planted to vegetables and fruits.

Production goals were set for this year which would return needed quantities of specified fruits and vegetables for war purposes. Particular emphases were placed on canning tomatoes and dried fruits, citrus fruits, and other commodities which could be concentrated into commodities of great food values and which would, as much as possible, conserve shipping space and materials for containers. These demands resulted in drying the entire crop of raisin grapes for the first time in the history of the State. They also resulted in greatly expanding the canning tomato acreage in one season, an increase from 89,940 acres to over 124,680 acres.

Increasing demands of draft boards made inroads into the agricultural labor force and, because agricultural deferments were not recognized, resulted in the removal of not only the field workers or common laborers but also in the induction of many farm owners and superintendents and other key persons.

Agricultural deferments were not recognized until the Tydings amendment to the Selective Service Act was passed in the later months of 1942.

California farmers began talking about possibilities of importing Mexican nationals early in the spring of that year. A request for the importation of 4,000 Mexican nationals was received by the United States Employment Service from the sugar beet industry in March, 1942.

This request was forwarded at once with a recommendation of approval from the State representatives to the Social Security Board and a plea for quick action was made. The proposal to import foreign workers was considered by many government agencies from March until August when an arrangement was finally concluded with the Mexican National Government to bring in 3,000 workers for the sugar beet industry in California. The first workers arrived in the State on September 29, 1942, and 3,000 had been delivered by the end of October of that year.

Other employers immediately became interested in this source of labor and a second importation was authorized for the delivery of 1,800 Mexicans to the vegetable growers of the Imperial Valley. Workers began to arrive for the vegetable industry by early December.

The citrus industry then indicated an interest in Mexican nationals and arranged an organization to employ all workers released by the sugar beet industry at the end of the sugar harvest and to obtain additional workers by importation from Mexico.

Approximately 1,500 of the sugar beet workers remained to harvest citrus fruits and additional workers were brought in during the early months of 1943.

Cooperative farm labor associations immediately developed in many parts of the State to employ Mexican nationals. These organizations varied in size from associations which contract for Mexicans to perform work in as many as 10 counties down to associations which employ Mexican nationals within only a very small area within a single county. Individual employers also contracted for Mexican nationals and the program grew by leaps and bounds. By February of 1943, California employers had filed orders for approximately 20,000 Mexican nationals.

Harvests during the first year of the war were largely successful because of the effort of many volunteer organizations and because of the willingness of inexperienced and unaccustomed workers to lend a hand. Innumerable organizations, such as the California State Employees Association, public schools, youth organizations, YMCA, YWCA, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, American Women's Voluntary Services, American Youth Hostels, Chambers of Commerce, merchants' associations, and service clubs, provided thousands of workers to pick and harvest perishable foodstuffs.

Organized harvest camps for both boys, girls and women were utilized effectively. Day-haul programs from centers of population accounted for thousands of workers.

Significant crop losses for the year were tabulated by the California Cooperative Crop Reporting Service and a copy of this report is included in the Appendix. This total loss represents a very small per cent of the total production value of California crops in 1942, but the loss came at a time when it could ill be suffered.

During 1942 the California Legislature appointed an Interim Committee on Agricultural Labor composed of Senators Robert Kenny and John Phillips which committee conducted a series of hearings throughout the State. The committee's excellent report should be considered in any study of the California farm labor problem.

The U. S. Senate likewise appointed a special investigating committee to examine the farm labor problem on the Pacific Coast. This committee was composed of Senators Downey of California, McFarlane of Arizona, and McNary of Oregon, who conducted hearings in Sacramento and Los Angeles in late November and early December, 1942. A transcript of the Los Angeles hearing is available for inspection and study. No transcript was kept of the Sacramento hearings although a great quantity of testimony was taken and made available to the committee.

In late January of 1943, Paul V. McNutt, Chairman of the War Manpower Commission, relinquished the Farm Placement function to the U. S. Department of Agriculture, and requested Secretary Claude Wickard to assume the responsibility of recruiting and placing agricultural workers.

This action resulted in passage of U. S. Public Law 45, Seventy-eighth Congress, which lodged the responsibility for the Farm Placement program with the Agricultural Extension Services of the Land Grant Colleges of the respective States. This law was passed by Joint Resolution of the Congress and was approved by the President on April 29, 1943. Funds were made available to the War Food Administrator who was charged to apportion not less than $9,000,000 and not more than $13,000,000 for expenditure by the Agricultural Extension Services in such States.

The Agricultural Extension Service of California, with the approval of The Board of Regents of the University of California, assumed full responsibility for farm placement approximately June 1, 1943. The Extension Service immediately established farm placement offices in all counties of agricultural importance and in the two metropolitan areas. About 130 such offices are now in operation.

The Farm Placement program is dependent upon congressional action for its continuation. The War Emergency program was authorized by U. S. Public Law No. 45, Seventy-eighth Congress, for the calendar year 1943. By Public Law No. 229, Seventy-eighth Congress, it was extended for the calendar year 1944 and by Public Law No. 529, Seventy-eighth Congress, for the calendar year 1945.

Farm Labor Recruiting in California Under Agricultural Extension Service

When the farm placement program became a responsibility of the Agricultural Extension Service in midseason of 1943, approximately 130 farm placement offices were established in all counties of agricultural importance, and in the San Francisco bay region and metropolitan Los Angeles. Some offices are operated seasonally to meet special harvest problems. Offices were placed in charge of qualified persons who were employed locally and who were familiar with community conditions.

The Farm Labor staff became employees of the University of California through the Agricultural Extension Service. These offices were charged with the responsibility of all local recruitment of farm workers, and were sources of information for migratory workers who were following the crops from area to area.

All offices are required to submit periodical farm labor reports which are summarized by the headquarters in Berkeley into a weekly report for information purposes. This report is the basis for an informational service which is complete and as reliable as possible.

Farm placement managers cooperate closely with county farm labor committees which were established by the California Food and Fibre Act of 1943 (California Farm Production Council) and which serve as local advisory boards in all matters pertaining to farm labor.

Farm placement managers take any necessary steps to mobilize volunteer workers for emergency harvests, and to arrange the establishment of harvest camps for women, boys, and girls.

Requests from employers for foreign workers or prisoners of war usually originate through the farm placement offices in the various counties. Offices in the metropolitan areas were established primarily for the recruitment of volunteer workers. Contacts have been made with various civic groups to recruit week-end crews and vacation families.

Metropolitan offices are also being used to recruit farm laborers from industrial workers who are being laid off or are leaving their industrial jobs because of the slackening of work for national defense.

Distinctive highway signs have been located on all principal highways of the State inviting farm workers and employers to call on the farm labor offices for information.

Farm labor offices of the Agricultural Extension Service filled 342,192 jobs during the last seven months of 1943, and 659,339 jobs during 1944.

This program of activities has proved to be very effective and it has received the full cooperation of all interested groups. Farm labor offices are well recognized by the employers and by farm workers of the State and are being used by an increasing number of people which in itself is a splendid indication of the effective service being rendered.

The California Farm Placement program is administered under the direction of Professor B. H. Crocheron, Agricultural Extension Service, University of California. State headquarters of the emergency farm labor project are located in Berkeley.

The emergency farm labor program has been financed by Federal appropriation under Public Law No. 45, Public Law No. 229, and Public Law No. 529 of the Seventy-eighth Congress. The present appropriation will expire December 31, 1945.

In view of the continuation of the war, it is reasonable to believe, in fact it is probable, that Congress will continue to finance the program during the emergency. It is indefinite as to whether the program will be continued thereafter or how it will be financed.

History of the California Farm Production Council

The California Farm Production Council came into being through enactment by the Legislature in March 1943, of the Food and Fiber Production Act. Its submission to the Legislature grew out of a series of conferences participated in by farm leaders at which it was pointed out that at that time there seemed little likelihood of agriculture receiving assistance from the Federal Government in dealing with production problems, particularly farm labor shortages.

The Food and Fiber Production Act charged the council of seven representative farm leaders, appointed by Governor Warren, with broad responsibilities. To accomplish the work entailed in meeting these responsibilities, the Legislature has appropriated a total of $2,789,882.

Shortly thereafter, the Congress enacted the first of a series of three annual farm labor program acts which, to some extent, duplicated the activity provided for the Food and Fiber Production Act. The council immediately conferred with the Federal agencies in California charged with the Federal farm labor program and agreed on a division of responsibility by which all duplication of effort would be avoided.

The council chose as its major activity the provision of farm labor housing, absolutely essential to the maximum use of the limited available farm labor supply, together with rendering other necessary services in the production programs that California farmers found difficult or impossible to provide for themselves.

A very large part of the first appropriation was spent in acquiring and equipping housing for farm labor. This has come from the following sources:

- (a) Acquisition of 18 SRA and State Guard Camps;
- (b) Adaptation of county and district fair association buildings;
- (c) Leasing of three Japanese Assembly Camps at Stockton, Merced, and Tulare;
- (d) Purchase and loan of tents;
- (e) Use of available Guayule camps;
- (f) Purchase of a transient camp at Ryde;
- (g) Construction of wooden, demountable camps; and
- (h) Acquisition by purchase and by transfer from the SRA liquidation account, of mess gear, bedding facilities, and kitchen gear for outfitting these camps, plus that required by farmers, forced to replace on-farm workers with transients.

This housing program has required the council to establish procedure to determine the actual need for housing by farmers, the suitability of sites, the transportation of camps and equipment, the conversion of existing housing for farm labor use, recruitment and training of an adequate staff for the operation and administration of camps, and to adopt regulations under which the State's interests will be fully protected at all times.

The council has sold some housing and much equipment, unobtainable elsewhere, directly to farmers, and at the same time has rented other housing and equipment to farmers and farm labor procurement associations. Through this program, the council has made housing available for approximately 40,000 farm workers, including regular seasonal workers, Mexican nationals, and German prisoners of war. Additional housing has been provided through acquisition of three CCC Camps which have been made available for use by farm groups.

One source of equipment has been that remaining from SRA and State Guard operations, and, as a result of these sales, the council has turned back to the SRA liquidation account up to March 1, 1945, a total of $163,480.17.

To assist growers in early camp operations, the council provided commissary service the first year of its operation, serving 1,169,677 meals. It also maintained a pool of 4,033 Mexican national workers to aid smaller farm operators, these workers serving 913 different farmers and receiving $2,090,178 in wages.

The transportation of camp buildings, equipment, workers, supplies, and farm products involved the operation of passenger equipment a total of 639,209 miles and freight equipment 895,066 miles the first year. Present operations involve about 75,000 to 80,000 miles for all vehicles per month, including the delivery of equipment, moving of camps, and emergency transportation of workers and farm products.

The council has aided farmers in their production problems in numerous other ways. It has campaigned vigorously for the Federal program providing for the importation of Mexican national farm workers and the operation of a statewide domestic labor recruitment and placement service, including the sending of a staff member to Washington, D. C. It has assisted farmers in obtaining priorities for scarce but necessary supplies and equipment. It has assisted in assembling data on farm labor requirements and resources. It has assisted in the recruitment of volunteer farm workers and in setting up harvest camps for them. It has assisted farmers in locating needed but scarce fertilizers and pest control materials and has supplied authentic current information concerning them. It has supplied grower groups with current information concerning available surplus Federal property and equipment, and has sought to have the Federal Government make available to farmers that which is most needed by them.

The council includes seven farm leaders representing the various branches of agriculture as follows: Chairman Frank M. Shay, San Jose, deciduous fruits; Vice Chairman George H. Wilson, Clarksburg, field crops; Loren Bamert, Ione, livestock; Joe Hart, Modesto, dairying; W. L. Smith, Buttonwillow, cotton; A. J. McFadden, Santa Ana, citrus fruits; and Camille A. Garnier, Puente, truck crops. W. B. Parker was director from April 26, 1943, to July 5, 1944. R. L. Adams has served as director since August 1, 1944.

Farm Placement in California—1915-1944

California was the first State to appropriate funds for a public employment service. This occurred in 1869, when the State Legislature voted financial assistance to the California Labor Exchange in San Francisco for a period of two years. No further attempt was made to organize a State employment service until 1915, when the California Legislature authorized the Labor Commissioner to establish a system of public employment exchanges. The State service was gradually expanded from 1915 to 1932, when there were 10 offices in operation. These offices were located in San Francisco, Oakland, Sacramento, Stockton, Fresno, Bakersfield, San Jose, Los Angeles, and San Diego. The State offices of that time were not well equipped to serve the commercial and service trades, but were chiefly concerned with industrial and agricultural labor.

The U. S. Employment Service was organized in January, 1918, as a unit of the U. S. Department of Labor. This organization was a wartime measure intended to assist in the recruitment of unskilled labor which was needed in the prosecution of World War I. After the termination of the war, Federal appropriations were reduced to the point where many functions of the USES had to be abandoned, and only a skeleton organization was maintained from 1920 to 1933. The USES during this period functioned primarily as a clearing house for employment information, standards and statistics, and to a limited extent for the interstate clearance of labor. The Farm Labor Division consisted chiefly of an advisory service to existing State employment exchanges.

The Wagner-Peyser Act of 1933 abolished the existing Federal Employment Service and set up a new USES as a bureau in the Department of Labor. The purpose of the act was to coordinate all public employment offices throughout the Nation. Funds were made available by this act, to be matched with State funds, for strengthening existing State services and providing Federal public employment offices to those counties and communities where no State offices existed. The 10 offices of the California employment exchanges participated in this program. Personnel was increased and office facilities were greatly improved by the aid of Federal funds.

In 1933 the Government established 53 Federal employment offices in California to supplement the State service. These offices were known as the National Reemployment Service. Both Federal and State employment offices were used during the depression years to qualify and place labor in the various Federal and State work relief projects and to assist in the general reemployment program.

Under the terms of the Wagner-Peyser Act farm placement supervisors were stationed in the States by the USES to assist the State Employment Services in the National Reemployment Service in farm placement functions. California was allotted a Federal farm placement supervisor and an assistant, who served in that capacity from approximately 1933 to 1940.

The California Unemployment Reserves Act of 1935 created a new State Department of Employment. The Division of State Employment Agencies was transferred from the Department of Industrial Relations to the new department on July 1, 1936. The State Department of Employment was composed of the Division of State Employment Agencies and the Division of Unemployment Insurance.

States were required to enter into cooperative agreements with the USES to obtain Federal funds provided by the Wagner-Peyser Act of 1933. Agreements were intended to insure Federal standards in the establishment and maintenance of a National system of public employment offices, and States agreed to provide various specified services. The agreement required the States to operate farm placement services. For this purpose, it was agreed that California would utilize the services of the USES Farm Placement Supervisor as a member of its administrative staff.

The State Department of Employment took over the National Reemployment Service in California toward the end of 1937 in preparation for the payment of unemployment insurance benefits which became due January 1, 1938. This action brought the public employment agencies into one State department and under State administration. The State system was expanded to approximately 80 full time offices and an additional number of seasonal and itinerant offices. Farm Placement continued to be a function in all offices and particularly in the agricultural areas.

In 1940 the State Department of Employment broke away from Federal supervision of the farm placement program (USES), and appointed its own Farm Placement Supervisor within the department. This was followed by similar action in other Pacific Coast States. The Farm Placement Program through 1940 and 1941 was administered by the State under minimum standards set by the Federal Social Security Board.

On January 1, 1942, all State employment services were transferred by presidential order to the USES as a war measure. Administration of the employment program was left with the Social Security Board until midsummer of that year, when it was placed with the newly formed War Manpower Commission. USES thus became the operating arm of WMC.

Farm placement continued to be a function of the USES through 1942 and into the year 1943. In January, 1943, Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the War Manpower Commission requested the Secretary of Agriculture to assume the responsibility for supplying labor for war production on farms. This was intended to consolidate functions previously divided between the USES and the Department of Agriculture.

Public Law No. 45, Seventy-eighth Congress, was passed in April, 1943, providing, among other things, that funds shall be available for payment to the various States for expenditure by the agricultural extension services for the recruiting, placement, and training of workers for the production and harvesting of agricultural commodities. The California Agricultural Extension Service accepted the responsibilities of farm placement under the terms of the act, and took immediate steps to organize the program which now serves this State. Approximately 125 farm labor offices were opened in June and July of 1943 in all counties of agricultural importance and have continued to serve to the present time.

Public Law No. 229, Seventy-eighth Congress, extended the Farm Placement Program through 1944 in essentially the same form as 1943.

War Food Administration

On March 25, 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt announced the appointment of a War Food Administrator. This announcement was made under the authority of the First War Powers Act of 1941 and provided that, in respect to labor and manpower, those powers heretofore vested in the Secretary of Agriculture by orders of the Economic Stabilization Director or the Chairman of the War Manpower Commission are vested in the War Food Administrator.

The farm labor program within the War Food Administration was divided between the Agricultural Extension Service and the Office of Labor. The Agricultural Extension Service, by the terms of Public Law No. 45, was charged with the responsibility of the recruitment and placement of all domestic workers and with the certification of need for any supplemental foreign laborers.

The Office of Labor of the War Food Administration was designated as the organization which is responsible for the recruitment and transportation of all foreign workers and for the care of these workers while they are in the United States.

The Office of Labor is also responsible for negotiating all contracts for the employment of foreign workers and is the government agency which enforces these contracts. It follows that in California the Agricultural Extension Service is responsible for taking the orders for all Mexican nationals and for the placement of these workers with agricultural employers.

The Office of Labor, War Food Administration, is responsible for the recruitment and transportation of the workers and for enforcement of the contracts.

Approximately 4,000 Mexican nationals were used in this State in the late months of 1942. At the peak of the season in 1943, about 26,000 nationals were used, and 35,400 at the peak of the season in 1944.

There were approximately 24,000 Mexican nationals in California as of April 1, 1943. The War Food Administrator has set a tentative quota of 33,000 Mexican nationals for California in 1945. Requests for Mexican workers have increased each year until it is anticipated that orders will be filed for at least 72,000 nationals for work in September 1945.

A statistical report on the care of Mexican nationals on California farms is made a part of the Appendix.

Supply of Itinerant Workers

California agriculture has always been dependent upon great numbers of itinerant workers. Highly specialized crops grown in areas which are not adjacent to great population will continue to need these seasonal workers for the harvest period.

The free movement of itinerant seasonal workers has been made more difficult by gasoline and tire shortages, various types of rationing, resulting from the war. Relief from these shortages may be expected to directly affect the supply of itinerant farm workers.

Special consideration is given to agricultural workers by rationing boards of the Office of Price Administration but shortage and regulations continue to be a limitation to free movement of thousands of these important workers.

Increasing Importance of Farm Housing as Related to Farm Labor

The critical farm labor shortage caused by the war has been greatly relieved by the Mexican nationals program. The importation of Mexicans has likewise resulted in the construction of considerable farm labor housing for groups of single men all over the State. Areas which customarily have used family type labor will probably find it necessary in the postwar period to convert their housing facilities to accommodate single workers.

Areas which have customarily used single workers in the prewar era have likewise expanded group housing facilities which they will undoubtedly wish to convert to family housing after the war.

Employers have indicated quite generally that a much more satisfactory labor program can be built on a basis of a combination of single workers and family workers and that any program which is dependent entirely upon one source of labor only is unsatisfactory and subject to serious weakness or uncertainties.

California agriculture should continue to expand its on-farm housing facilities with the end of the war when materials become available for construction and repair. This family type housing may be supplied in part through the use of portable or knock-down houses now used for war production workers. It is to be hoped that these surplus houses may be diverted to agriculture rather than destroyed as of no further value.

Great numbers of industrial workers who have come into California to work in the shipyards, airplane factories and in other war industries and who may wish to remain in California after the war to engage in farm work, will have to be provided with necessary housing facilities if they are to be induced to remain.

State agencies should be considering simple plans and specifications for farm housing to assist farmers in the postwar housing program, utilizing insofar as possible the surpluses which may become available. These plans should cover the several types of housing necessary to accommodate farm labor and should call for simple construction.

Mexican Nationals

(See remarks under War Food Administration)

They must be paid the prevailing wage rates in the area.

They may not be used to displace domestic workers.

They must be worked under contracts between the United States Government and the employer, and under individual worker contracts with the United States Government.

The employer of Mexican nationals must provide free housing and boarding facilities.

The employer must guarantee at least 75 per cent employment for the term of the contract. The employer must provide free board for any days not employed.

Transportation from Mexico or for transfer between employers within the State is furnished by the Federal Government.

Wages must be paid at regular intervals. An amount equal to 10 per cent of the wages is withheld for deposit to the worker's account when he returns to Mexico. The 10 per cent deduction is turned over to the Office of Labor for transmission to Mexico for deposit with banks designated by the Mexican Government. The worker recovers the money when he returns to his home community.

Mexican workers have been generally very satisfactory and are in great demand. They are well adapted to stoop crops for which it is difficult to recruit and hold other types of laborers.

Farm Labor Associations

Numerous farm labor associations have been organized in California since the start of the war to employ Mexican nationals, prisoners of war, and other types of farm laborers.

Such organizations were necessary at the beginning of the foreign labor program for the reason that the government required minimum contract of employment for not less than 100 workers. Smaller employers consequently formed associations for their cooperative use of this labor.

Farm labor associations range in size from comparatively small groups which serve a limited area to larger groups which serve as many as nine or ten counties. Some associations have been formed as commodity groups, such as, the citrus growers, tomato growers, and the sugar beet growers. Other associations represent a wide diversity of agricultural production and are so organized as to use labor throughout the year.

Some associations have arranged to house and feed their foreign labor in camps which accommodate as many as several hundred workers. Other groups contract for the workers cooperatively but house and feed them on the individual farms. The California Farm Production Council provides extensive facilities for group housing on a rental basis for farm labor associations. This has been a very important factor in the success of the farm labor program in this State. A number of the farm labor associations would have found it impossible to take advantage of the farm labor program had it not been for the assistance of the California Farm Production Council.

Farm labor associations have been organized under various plans which vary from voluntary, informal groups, to the highly organized incorporated associations. They have contracted a relatively few number of workers in some instances and in other instances for as many as several thousand workers.

One of the larger farm labor associations which includes the production of a great diversity of crops is organized on the basis of county units. The chairman of each county unit is a member of the board of directors of the central association which administers and coordinates the program over a large area.

Farm labor associations have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars of their own money to build camps and provide other accommodations for farm workers. These associations have been very successful throughout the State and may be expected to be continued to a considerable extent after the war. Their permanent housing will undoubtedly be made available to domestic farm workers after the need for foreign workers has passed.

Farm labor associations have demonstrated the value of the cooperative use of farm labor and their activities have led to work programs which have furnished more continuity of employment than formerly existed. The work planning made necessary by the overall shortage and the foreign labor contracts will be permanently beneficial in the postwar period.

Farm Workers from the Philippine Islands

In view of the limitations of the Mexican labor program this year, California employers and the agencies interested in the farm labor program are inquiring into the possibilities of obtaining labor from the Philippine Islands. These workers, if available, would probably be brought in by the Government on a contract basis for a specified period.

It is to be hoped that the Government of the United States and that of the Philippine Commonwealth can approve of such a program and that workers may be available for the remaining months of the war, and as long thereafter as necessary.

Arrangements would also be necessary with the Army to provide the needed transportation facilities.

Foreign Labor Program

All foreign labor used on California farms up to the date of this report has been obtained from the Republic of Mexico. It is anticipated that some Jamaicans also will be available to farmers of this State during the later months of 1945. These colored workers are British subjects who work under contracts similar to those governing the use of Mexican nationals.

Prisoners of War

Prisoners of war were first used in California agriculture in the vicinity of Blythe, Riverside County, where 150 Italians were made available to pick long staple cotton in December 1943. An additional 500 Italian prisoners were provided by the army to pick citrus fruits near Cucamonga, San Bernardino County, in the early months of 1944, but were later withdrawn as the status of Italian prisoners changed with the progress of war.

After the invasion and liberation of Italy by the Allied forces, Italian prisoners were offered the option of becoming cobelligerents and volunteering for labor battalions to engage in work for the Army, or to remain as prisoners of war.

Many Italians volunteered for the labor battalions and were consequently withdrawn from farm labor programs under the direction of the Army. They worked in various military establishments.

About 400 Italian prisoners were also available for a short period for agricultural work in the vicinity of Tulelake, Siskiyou County, in the spring of 1944.

German prisoners have been made available to replace the Italians wherever they are needed and where working conditions are suitable and the necessary arrangements can be made.

About 6,500 Germans were used in the later harvests of 1944 to harvest a wide variety of California crops. Several hundred were used in the fall potato harvest in Tulelake and more than 3,000 Germans were used in the San Joaquin Valley in the late cotton harvest. The remaining 2,500 were engaged in miscellaneous vegetable harvests and the citrus industry.

Plans are being made to use about 15,000 German prisoners of war during the 1945 California agricultural season. This allocation has been made by the army against an estimated need for 26,000. However, to accommodate more than 15,000 prisoners, additional agricultural worker housing would have to be provided.

There are approximately 3,750 German prisoners of war working on California farms as of April 1, 1945. Fifteen additional branch camps for prisoners of war have been approved by the Army and will provide about 4,500 more prisoners for farm work in the spring and early summer.

Prisoners of war are made available by the Army for branch camps which will house a minimum of 250 men. Housing facilities for at least 250 men must be provided by the employer and a contract of employment must be entered into between the Army and the farmer, or farm association.

Prisoners can not be used under conditions which will displace available American workers, and prisoners are only available under a certification of need by the Agricultural Extension Service.

Prisoners of war can not be used to depress wages. All contractors are required to pay the Army for prisoner of war labor at prevailing wage rates for agricultural work.

Under the terms of the Geneva Convention, prisoners of war receive wages from the Army at the rate of 80 cents per day for satisfactory work. This wage can be increased to a maximum of $1.20 a day in the form of bonuses given for performance above the average standard. Wages are paid to the prisoners in the form of credits which can be used to purchase small articles or supplies from the camp post exchange. No wages are paid in cash.

Prisoners can be required to work by orders from the Army and are not necessarily used on a voluntary basis. They must work or be disciplined in accordance with the Geneva Convention. Commissioned officers are exempt from the compulsory work provisions.

Prisoners can only be used in squads averaging 20 men and must be kept under continual observation and military guard. They can not be paroled to individual employers to live and work on farms. They must be transported daily from the main camp or a branch camp to the work and be returned each night to the camps.

Prisoners of war can be worked the average work day in the community but not to exceed 12 hours daily, six days a week.

Farmers are required to provide transportation facilities for the daily work and are responsible for the supervision of the work.

Some of the transportation and housing expenses are reimbursed to the employers by the Army.

Quality of work performed has been universally excellent, many employers reporting that the work has been done more carefully and thoroughly than by any other type of labor. The quantity of work is below the average of free workers, probably because the lack of wage incentive and some resentment over the fact that they are forced to work under military orders.

Prisoner of war labor is usually paid for on piece work rates and their successful employment depends largely on this method of wage payment. This method of payment is probably the only way that prisoners can be used successfully in California agriculture.

It is assumed that prisoners of war will be available throughout the harvest year of 1945 although the Army can cancel all contracts on ten days written notice.

Prisoners of war in California are under the authority of the Ninth Service Command of the U. S. Army which Command has been extremely cooperative and interested in the success of the entire program.

More than 40 prisoners of war camps have been requested by California farm labor employers for the 1945 season. Twenty-eight such camps are in operation or will be soon. Several camps are for as many as 500 men, and one large camp in Southern California accommodates about 1,000 prisoners.

Inroads of the Draft on Farm Labor

Drafting of farm workers for the military forces occurred in larger numbers during the earlier years of the war than at present. However, recent draft requirements have resulted in the loss of certain key men; such as, milkers, farm foremen, and superintendents, which were particularly needed in the production program.

Recent draft activities have perhaps not affected California as adversely as they have some other States because of the relatively few farm labor deferments made in this State.

Farm Placement of Veterans

Farm labor offices of the Agricultural Extension Service are cooperating with the Selective Service System and other governmental agencies in obtaining farm jobs for returning veterans. Veterans inquiring at local draft boards are being referred to the Farm Placement offices for job information and referrals to agricultural employers.

Increased Use of Machines in Agricultural Harvests

Increase mechanization in certain types of harvest is very apparent. The sugar beet industry is becoming more and more mechanized with the development of devices which lift, top, and load sugar beets and which save untold numbers of workers formerly engaged in stoop labor.

The hop industry is likewise becoming increasingly mechanized, thus eliminating the need for great numbers of seasonal workers. It is estimated that as much as 90 per cent of the hop harvest in certain producing areas is now accomplished by mechanical picking. Cotton picking may also be handled by machines.

Mechanical tree shakers have greatly relieved the labor problem in certain types of tree and nut crops. Simple attachments made to the ordinary farm tractor are used for shaking the fruit or nuts, particularly prunes and walnuts.

Machines for handling hay have been greatly improved and include devices for automatic loading from the field.

Mechanical devices will probably be developed to a much greater extent in the postwar period to relieve the stoop labor problem which has always been serious even in normal times in California agriculture.

It is probable that many of the inventions necessitated by war may be adapted to many farm uses and increase the efficiency of farm labor many fold.

General Conclusions and Recommendations

The committee finds the evidence supports these conclusions:

1. The farmers and food processors of California have performed remarkably well, almost heroically, under the most difficult of handicaps in the strained conditions of the war years, many of the difficulties and handicaps being unnecessary and inexcusable. Our growers and processors are entitled to the highest credit. The share of California agriculture in the victory will be formidable, unsurpassed by any State.

2. Time has proved that California acted wisely in establishing its own "stand by" system (Food and Fiber Act-California Farm Production Council) for the recruiting of farm labor at a time when the future of Federal efforts along that line were uncertain and before the Agricultural Extension Service had been designated to administer the program in California. The Council is performing useful and needful work and is well liked by farmers.

3. The Legislature should begin prompt inquiries as to the future of farm labor procurement in California, should the present working relationship between the United States Department of Agriculture and the Agricultural Extension Service cease when the Japanese are conquered. The Extension Service has done a remarkably good job of recruiting farm labor. The Office of Labor of the War Food Administration has operated efficiently regarding importation of Mexican citizens. A special recommendation on this subject is made a part of the report.

4. No one knows how the impact of total peace or victory over Germany alone will affect agriculture and the farm labor situation in California. This is the $64 question.

5. In agriculture, transition from a wartime basis to a peacetime basis could force vast changes in the operating and financial status of farming and food processing. Such a change has many puzzling aspects.

6. The war has enabled many more farmers to see more clearly their responsibility toward their farm laborers, particularly regarding opportunities for housing. They have wisely invested large sums to augment or extend housing facilities for workers.

7. Portable or demountable housing erected by the government for the use of war workers should not be destroyed or moved overseas until the farmers and food processors of this State and Nation have had a reasonable opportunity to purchase, long-time lease, or otherwise acquire such housing for the use of the workers who will produce, harvest and preserve our crops in peacetime. Vast surpluses of military equipment, much of which can be used on farms, should be made available at first option for purchase by farmers at fair prices in open markets. Farmers should not be required to pay sky rocket profits to second-hand dealers or speculators for materials bought with the people's money for war.

8. After the war, sooner if possible, the Nation and the State should return to natural time. The present wartime daylight saving is a distinct handicap in farming operations. Nature didn't plan it that way. The testimony of farmers on this point is clear and decisive.

9. The annual importation of foreign workers, although successful and well-operated in recent years, is not the complete answer to the farm labor program in California. Surely in peacetime, we must eventually shape up agriculture so that only a very minimum of transient outside help will be necessary to be brought into the State each harvest season. As far as possible, farmers should strive to provide year-around work and year-around housing, planning their work in off seasons to make it go as far as possible. Good results along these sound cooperative lines have been obtained by our patriotic farmers during the war years. The cooperative use of Mexican Nationals has shown the way.

10. Farm machinery has been a bottleneck throughout the war period. It is directly related to the farm labor problem. Farmers have patched up their machines about as much as they can be patched. They have continued wondrous makeshifts and temporized, for they are ingenious. However, California's vast agricultural empire cannot be operated on run-down, worn out, beg or borrow farm machinery. The government, mindful of its wartime muddling, should make adequate farm machinery available at the very earliest moment, and at reasonable purchase prices. The remarks of President H. S. Truman on this subject are pertinent.

11. Farmers wish they knew what effect vast wartime food surpluses will have on their immediate peacetime farming operations. Is there going to be so much food and fiber bulging in the warehouses that new production will not be necessary? How far shall we go in feeding and clothing the people in the liberated or conquered countries? Will even larger crops be necessary and more farm workers employed?

12. Farmers wish they knew now what will be the level of farm wage rates after the war.

13. Farmers wish they knew what will happen to farm land prices, at present very high in most parts of California.

14. Farmers wish they knew what effect labor saving machinery is going to have on their operations and costs after the war and how far and how well wartime inventions, materials, and formulas (jeeps, quick-freezing, DDT) can be adapted to peacetime farming.

15. Farmers wish they knew now whether they can expect a brisk foreign trade demand for their products after the war. What is the future of sugar beet farming, for instance, and its attendant labor problems?

16. Farmers long for the cessation of government "directives" and long-distance "alphabetical manipulation" of their operations. They yearn for a minimum of "orders" affecting nearly everything they plan or need to do.

17. Nearly everything that affects agriculture affects farm labor, for good or ill. Successful agriculture cannot be separated from a sufficiency of agricultural labor. The extent and welfare of one depends upon the extent and welfare of the other.

18. The committee wishes to express to the President of the Republic of Mexico, His Excellency, Avila Comacho, and to the other officials of our Good Neighbor Republic, the thanks of the State of California and particularly its vast agricultural industry for a truly inspiring example of Good Neighborliness and United Nations Solidarity in sending thousands of workers to California to help harvest our "Food for Victory."

Special Recommendation

We, your committee, make the following special recommendation for the consideration of the Senate:

The Future of Farm Labor Recruiting in California

The Senate and California citizens should begin to consider the labor needs of agriculture in the postwar period. This consideration should probably be based on three general questions:

1. Will there be a need for a State farm placement program after the war?
2. If there is to be a farm placement program in the postwar period, should it be administered by a State agency, by a Federal agency, or by a State and Federal agency working in cooperation?
3. If there is to be a farm placement program in the postwar period, should it be integrated with a general over-all placement program or should it be maintained as a separate and distinct program?

Conclusions

Experience gained in the war years would indicate that the most effective farm placement program can be obtained from a separate and distinct farm placement service administered by State authority but financed from Federal funds. This plan, if adopted, could mean a continuation of the present satisfactory farm labor program into the postwar era under the direction of the Agricultural Extension Service.

However, it is probable that the University authorities may not wish to retain direction of the farm labor program and in that event other arrangements for its continuance would have to be made. The work of the Extension Service is primarily educational.

The administration of a farm labor program in California supported by Federal funds would continue to be dependent on the restrictions contained within the Federal legislation. While the legislation might designate the Agricultural Extension Service to administer the farm labor program, there would still be required the concurrence of The Board of Regents of the University of California in accepting the responsibility.

If Federal funds were not to be provided for the continuation of a farm placement program, the alternative would be a State appropriation for a program administered by some designated State agency.

It is a certainty that if the Federal Government should return to the unsatisfactory prewar system of recruiting industrial and farm labor simultaneously through the same offices and same personnel, the State of California might find it wise and proper to set up and finance an entirely independent farm placement service, free from all Federal policies. Experience has taught that lesson.

The study of this problem should be immediately undertaken so that the State may be prepared through well planned action to meet any emergency that might be faced in the difficult postwar period and to avoid the mistakes of the past.

If the farm placement service should be administered by the State of California, it might be directed by:

1. Agricultural Extension Service
2. State Department of Employment
3. Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission
4. State Department of Agriculture
5. Or an entirely new agency separately financed by special legislation.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF R. N. WILSON, DIRECTOR OF THE STATE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE, SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA

Opening the hearing, Chairman Hatfield stated: * * * "The committee will proceed with the witnesses who have been requested to appear to testify in the matter of agricultural labor shortage."

The first witness called was R. N. Wilson, Director of the Agricultural Department, California State Chamber of Commerce, for 18 years, who had prepared a history of the activities of the various Federal and State agencies in the matter of agricultural labor shortage.

The witness stated that since last August he was chairman of the State Committee, an Agricultural War Manpower Committee which had to do with these respective matters under consideration, and gave a prepared summary :

"The Farm Labor Problem in California

"The growth and development of the system of Public Employment Offices in California involves both State and Federal agencies, and developments on both levels must be followed in order to learn the background of the situation in 1943.

"Largely as a result of the serious unemployment which occurred in California during 1914, the State Legislature directed the Commissioner of Labor Statistics in the State Department of Industrial Relations to establish free employment offices in the four principal California cities, and in such others as circumstances warranted. Offices were opened in 1916 under the terms of this legislation.

"The United States Employment Service was established as a division in the U. S. Department of Labor by congressional action in 1917. Beginning in January, 1918, offices were rapidly established in most of the States until in 1919 more than 854 offices were operating in 40 States. The system was entirely supported by direct congressional appropriations.

"The California State Employment Service during World War I greatly enlarged its activities and entered into cooperative agreement with the U. S. Employment Service. After the war, however, Congress cut the appropriations of the Federal system to such an extent that only a skeleton organization was left, principally consisting of the Farm Placement Service and the Veterans' Placement Service. The California system continued to operate from 12-15 offices in the larger cities and maintain some contact with the Federal system.

"The Federal system was brought to life by the enactment of the Wagner-Peyser Act on January 6, 1933. This act appropriated funds for the reestablishment of the U. S. Employment Service in the Department of Labor, having made available funds on a matching basis to States which accepted the terms of the act and established or maintained public employment offices in accordance with its provisions. During the period from 1933-36 the Federal system was more commonly known as the National Reemployment Service. During the period 1933-35 more than 40 NRS offices were established in California in smaller cities and counties; the State Employment Service continued to operate offices in the larger cities.

"California accepted the terms of the Wagner-Peyser Act in 1935, but the Unemployment Insurance Act, adopted in the same year, transferred the State Employment Service from the Department of Industrial Relations to the newly created Department of Employment as of July 1, 1936. All of the local offices of the NRS were consolidated with the California State Employment Service at the same time.

"Beginning in 1938 the Social Security Board made outright grants to California for carrying on the public employment offices, and the total of these grants far exceeded the sums made available under both Federal and State Wagner-Peyser appropriations.

"The State Employment Service continued on this basis until 1942.

"In the meantime, the U. S. Employment Service was transferred from the Department of Labor to the Social Security Board by executive order of the President in 1940. On December 19, 1941, the President, by virtue of an executive order, transferred all the State Employment Service offices to the U. S. Employment Service, effective January 1, 1942, and called upon the Governors of all of the States to take appropriate action. Governor Olson transmitted this request to the California Employment Commission, which acted by resolution to transfer all property and records of the State system to the Federal service, and all of the employment positions in the Department of Employment were abolished as of January 1, 1942.

"On April 18, 1942, President Roosevelt created by executive order the War Manpower Commission. The Employment Service was left for the time being in the Social Security Board, but its director was also made Director of the Bureau of Employment in the War Manpower Commission. On September 17, 1942, the U. S. Employment Service was formally transferred to the War Manpower Commission by executive order of the President—where it now remains."

Question: " * * * since January, 1942, there have been no State agencies authorized by law to actually locate or place labor of any kind, agricultural or industrial?"

Witness: "That is right."

Question: "And since that date the recruiting and the placement of all labor has been a Federal function under the U. S. Employment Service?"

Witness: "That is right."

Question: "And the U. S. Employment Service has been under the War Manpower since * * *"

Witness: "April 18, 1942 * * * the date the War Manpower was established."

Further questions brought out that the Federal employment offices advertised in rural sections for employees for industrial sections, thereby draining manpower from agricultural sections.

Question: "Do you know of any method that we, as legislators, can approach to discontinue that policy?"

Witness: "Well, the officials have promised that they were going to do that. That they were not going to do that, I should say. I think that since some of these promises were made, however, there still has continued the practice in certain areas."

Question: "Do you find your Employment Service of the Federal Government assisting agriculture in urging that these workers stay in agriculture, if they are employed there, rather than leaving the agricultural districts to go into industry?"

Witness: "Well, I think both things are going on. They are trying to assist agriculture, but at the same time they have permitted these advertisements in rural areas, which would have an effect of pulling away men from agricultural employment."

Question: " * * * supposing agriculture itself, agriculturists would place their employees under Unemployment Insurance, which they are permitted to do under the present State law, do you think that would have a tendency to keep the regular agricultural employees better satisfied, or that is to stay on the ranch rather than go into industry?"

Witness: "I have a personal opinion about that and that is 'No.' I don't think it would make any difference.

Senator Crittenden asked what the witness thought was in regard to this turnover from the State having supervision of these employment agencies to the Federal Government, to which the witness stated he had some recommendations one of which touched that point.

Witness (continuing the history): "Next is the Land Use Planning Committees. Committees were originally formulated in the summer of 1939 under the authority of the United States Bureau of Agricultural Economics in cooperation with the Extension Service. Early in 1941 it seemed desirable to organize Agricultural Subcommittees in all principal agricultural counties. Appropriations were exhausted on June 30, 1942, and the county committees, to a considerable extent, merged with War Board Committees later. That is a very short statement about some rather important committees.

Questions developed the fact that these local agricultural committees in the various counties were voluntary organizations without any funds of any kind and those funds exhausted were the expenses of the top organization.

Witness (continuing the history): "On July 5, 1941—I have here, if you care for it, the directive—the Secretary of Agriculture issued a directive establishing USDA Defense Boards in each State and each County. The purpose of the Boards was to expedite and coordinate in the field administration of the activities carried on by the USDA in furtherance of National Defense.

On December 8, 1941, the name was changed to USDA War Board.

The boards are composed of representatives of the various agencies of the USDA, and the chairman in each instance is a representative of AAA.

The county committees in many instances merged with the Agricultural Subcommittees of the Land Use Planning Committees. After December 7, 1941, the name was changed to USDA War Boards, which name still remains in effect."

Questions brought out that the USDA War Board was strictly a U. S. Department of Agriculture organization, paid employees, and that the subcommittee on labor was a voluntary group of farmers and others working without funds, except for expenses of certain representatives of farmers who advised the labor subcommittees. The witness pointed out that State committee which had funds constituted one representative appointed by each of the Department of Agriculture agencies within the State; Forestry Service appointed one, Extension Service appointed one, Bureau of Agricultural Economics and the Farm Security one, etc.

Witness (continuing history): "Resettlement Administration. All right, the next is the Resettlement Administration. I have made this very brief and I will read it. I am sure you will have supplemental material.

"The Resettlement Administration was established by Executive Order of the President April 30, 1935. It was transferred and set up as the Farm Security Administration within the USDA by Executive Order of the President December 31, 1936. I am not able to find out the exact date of the establishment of the first camp; one report says 1936, and another indicates that the first camp was started late in 1935. There is presently a total of 95 camps; 41 of which are permanent, 49 are mobile and five are light construction. This means that they can really be considered permanent camps, although their construction differs from the permanent ones, and some of their facilities are movable. These light construction camps are all in the East. California has 13 permanent camps and six mobile ones. There may, at the moment, be fewer than six in use; the policy is to release them from storage as needed; six is the average number in use at all times."

Assemblyman Hastain: " * * * Do these war boards concern themselves with manpower or the labor situation, labor problems or do they cover other fields within the Agriculture Department?"

Witness: "Oh, yes, they do. They have."

The witness continued: "Official agencies dealing with farm labor in 1942."

"Many important changes took place during 1942 within governmental agencies. As before noted, on January 1, 1942, the USES took over the California State Employment Service. Following much controversy between agriculture and the USES, the so-called committee of 36 was appointed early in the summer as an advisory group to the USES. This committee met three times—but was not called into session after the beginning of the peak labor demands of late summer and fall.

"Following the National plan of employer-employee advisory committees, Mr. William Darsie of Walnut Grove, Chairman of the Committee of Thirty-six, was appointed as one of the employee representatives for the Western Region, and Mr. A. J. McFadden of Santa Ana represented agriculture for the employers' group in the Southern California area.

"The War Manpower Commission came into being on April 18, 1942. Officials of the agency in August set up our State, six area, and 38 county agricultural war manpower committees. Which, incidentally, were the only ones in the United States, a sort of a guinea-pig operation out here.

"I want to give this to you, Senator, the set-up of the respective agricultural war manpower committees.

"To go back, officials of this agency, war manpower, in August set up our State, six area, and 38 county agricultural war manpower committees. You have those before you.

"In September the USES became a part of the War Manpower Commission, with which it had already been cooperating closely.

"Commenting upon the above developments, the following opinions may be expressed. Mr. Darsie and Mr. McFadden rendered a very fine service to agriculture through their advice to the regional and area committees, of which they were a part. The Committee of Thirty-six rendered a temporary service by providing a safety valve for criticism of agriculture directed toward official agencies. However, the Committee of Thirty-six and an executive committee (which was never designated) should have continued to be active during the peak labor period. Because of this lack of contact, much of the original progress of the committee was lost. In other words, they created a fine agency there but didn't follow through.

"The Agricultural War Manpower Committees were the only ones of their kind throughout the Nation, and rendered an excellent service. The county committees met regularly each week on Monday or Tuesday during the season of peak labor demands. The area committee during the same period met every Wednesday to consider the recommendations of the county committees. The State committee or its executive committee met every Thursday to review recommendations of the area committees.

"Although these agricultural war manpower committees clarified many problems, their effectiveness was seriously hampered by two things:

(1) The committees were never given a definite outline as to their scope and authority although this was requested on several occasions. For this reason, some of the committees were dealing with wage and hour negotiations and other matters entirely outside of the original intent, and

(2) On the majority of the problems which the California Agricultural War Manpower Committee referred to the War Manpower Commission, only a perfunctory reply was received or no response at all. Although there may have been good and sufficient reasons for this attitude on the part of the War Manpower Commission, it seriously crippled the effectiveness and prestige of the agricultural war manpower committees.

"War Manpower Commission on a National level was composed of Mr. McNutt and nine Government officials: Secretary of War, Secretary of Navy, Secretary of Agriculture, Secretary of Labor, and so forth?

"Then on a National level there was assisting, or advising with Mr. McNutt, a War Manpower Committee, composed of four or five representatives of labor and four or five representatives of Industry, and one representative of Agriculture up until very recently when Mr. O'Neil, who represented the American Farm Bureau Federation, was given a colleague, Mr. Patton of the Farmers Union.

"In other words, until very recently the set-up was four or five of labor, four or five of industry and one of farming, and it is now two of agriculture. Then on a regional level, Mr. Hopkins, William K. Hopkins was made regional director which region embraced the three Pacific Coast States and two or three Mountain States."

Questions brought out that this involved five States, and a regional committee was appointed embracing all these States. That advisory committee again was composed of five representatives of labor and four of industry and one of agriculture, Mr. Darcey, who was one of five representatives of the employers. Two area committees were created, one south of the Tehachapi and the other San Francisco Bay Area.

Witness: "There was no agriculture representative in the case."

Question: "Then the balance of the State was just a bunch of orphans without any organization?"

Witness: "That is about right."

Question: "Then on top of that we superimposed another organization, of which I think you were the State Chairman of the State Committee?"

Witness: "That is right."

Questions revealed that then the State was divided into six districts using the same set-up as the State Chamber of Commerce and in each instance the chairman of that district set-up was the District Director of the State Chamber of Commerce in that particular district, and that designation came as a surprise to the witness "It apparently was a request to handle the thing because we had manpower available, because we threw those fellows into the service."

The witness acknowledged that the State Chamber of Commerce was drafted by Mr. Hopkins and it tried to do the job to the best of its ability, receiving no Government aid or compensation, having been done on a voluntary basis with monies supplied by the State Chamber of Commerce. Not even Government stationery was available.

Further discussion ensued concerning formation of committees. The witness elaborated: "We had the State and the area and the county war manpower agricultural committees and they, when they were organized, the county committees were told that wherever there was a strong agricultural war board committee, to take that over and to make the chairman the chairman of that. It so happened in this committee that it was a hang-over of the old labor Subcommittee of Land Use Planning, and they still had and have an excellent committee. So that was the committee that was taken over in this particular county and they have done a swell job all the way through, excellent. But then they were made an agricultural war manpower committee and have functioned ever since as such.

There were certain counties, and Ventura is one of them, where they wouldn't take anything and they organized their own Agricultural War Manpower Committee, and neither would they take a labor representative on their committee."

Discussion brought out that the Mr. Hopkins suggested a representative of Union labor be added to the Agricultural Labor Committee. Some rural counties refused to do this. The agricultural war manpower committees never found out how they related to the so-called area committees, or to whom they were responsible and what they could do.

Asked what ultimately happened to this set-up the witness replied: "Well, the thing that ultimately happened was the War Manpower Commission directive No. 17 that I have here. You probably have copies of that. It just recently transferred this whole thing to the Secretary of Agriculture. Of course, that wiped out this whole set-up, just completely eliminated that."

Chairman Hatfield: "In other words, this directive * * * take the recruiting and the placement of agricultural labor out of War Manpower and puts it under the Department of Agriculture?" . . . out of the U. S. E. S. There is a specific direction in there that it will cooperate closely with the U. S. E. S. in order that the total labor requirement for agricultural and other production will be served as efficiently as possible from a common labor pool. Is it your understanding that the effect of that is to take the recruiting and the placement of agricultural labor from U. S. E. S. and placing it in some new agency; is that your interpretation?"

Witness: " * * * I have talked to quite a number of the agencies under the Department of Agriculture, none of which know where lightning may strike, but it may be either one of the present agencies, which would be the Extension Service, the Farm Security Administration, or the War Board, or a new agency."

Question: "In other words, on the eleventh of February, 1943, as far as we know out here in California, we don't know who is going to handle the recruitment and placement of agricultural labor in the State of California?"

Witness: "Exactly. And it is very important we know pretty soon."

Question: "Might we solve the manpower shortage by abolishing about 90 per cent of the agencies and letting those fellows get out and go to work?"

Witness: "I couldn't quite answer that but I think it is worth pursuing. I don't know what the statistics are."

Asked which agency he contacted, Chairman Hatfield stated: "So far as the farmers out in the field are concerned today, we have got to wait until somebody back in Washington issues a new directive telling us what the last directive means. That is about right?"

Witness: "That is right. We need a clarification of it before we can do anything. In the meantime the county committees, the area committees and the State committees are all out. For the moment we are just floating."

Discussion in the testimony brought out that these Commissions had no power to attract labor to agricultural work, but were merely advisory.

The attitude of farmers up to 1942

Witness: "A brief review of some of the factors which have influenced the farmers' trends of thought and action may be helpful, and are noted as follows: (1) Publication of Grapes of Wrath by John Steinbeck was a gross distortion of the attitude and practices of California farmers in relation to labor; (2) the books Factories in the Field and Ill Fares the Land, written while on the taxpayers' pay roll by Carey McWilliams, left-wing Chief of the Division of Immigration and Housing, were even greater distortions of the facts; (3) the hearings of the so-called LaFollette Committee were so patently maneuvered in the interests of the opponents of farmers as to create wide distrust within agriculture—some of the testimony of governmental agencies supposedly created to assist agriculture were particularly revealing; and (4) important governmental agencies dealing vitally with agricultural problems were unsympathetic or hostile to farmers' interests and philosophy."

"State: In the matter of unemployment insurance, the California Employment Commission has made every effort to thwart agriculture's contention that State requirements should parallel those of the Federal Government. The Division of Immigration and Housing under Carey McWilliams continually made every effort to discredit our present agricultural economy before governors' conferences, committee hearings, etc."

"Wage boards appointed by the Governor to determine wage scales for cotton were so far out of line as to be ridiculous."

"The State Department of Employment, when it was an independent agency, accepted the program of the United States Department of Labor in regard to labor disputes and employment referrals during strikes."

"The Farm Security Administration has carried on its program of establishing camps without consulting farmers, and frequently has forced such camps upon communities where farmers were vigorously opposed to them. Also, some camps were accused of being headquarters for radical agitation."

"The United States Employment Service operated under the United States Department of Labor; was never sympathetic to farmers during labor crises; representatives of the United States Farm Placement Service at times were exceptions as regards this attitude."

"The matter which disturbed the farmers most and which caused the greatest ill will toward the USES was the policy regarding referral of workers during the labor disputes, which under the Wagner-Peyser Act, reads as follows:

"The State service shall require that each employment office under its supervision refrain from referring any person or persons to any position left vacant—that question has never been determined what that means—by reason of a labor dispute at any place of employment by a person belonging to a grade or class of workers participating in, or directly interested in such labor dispute at such place of employment. For the purpose of this rule, the term 'labor dispute' shall include any controversy concerning terms or conditions of employment concerning the association or representation of persons in negotiating, fixing, maintaining, changing or seeking to arrange terms or conditions of employment regardless of whether or not the disputants stand in the proximate relation of employer and employee."

"It isn't a matter whether they have any interest in the problem at all. Any person can come into a dispute and say, 'There is a labor dispute here,' and as a result of that, why, the Federal Government in its referrals must respect that thing according to the Wagner-Peyser Act."

The witness continued: * * * "There have been some very, very bad and flagrant disabuses of the whole thing by certain labor people. I had an occasion in the San Joaquin Valley to talk to a USES man who said that during a so-called labor strike where they had a man come in from Los Angeles who didn't know anything about cotton, admitted he had never seen a cotton field, but he declared that there was a labor dispute existing in certain areas there. There was a man in an automobile, seated across from his office—and this was an Employment Service man who told me about this—sat across from his office in an automobile and when people would come out of his office with referrals to certain ranches, he would approach this man and get the name to whom he was referred and then he would report back to this employment office that a labor dispute existed on that property. And in many instances there was not even any activity as to picking or otherwise on the property concerned. I just cite that."

"* * * That was about three years ago * * * We haven't heard so much lately because there hasn't been so much labor difficulties. I am trying to recite, as a background to this committee, these things that stick in the craw of the farmers and you just have to consider their psychology as a part of this whole problem."

The witness continued: "I have a little statement here on the definition of agricultural labor under Unemployment Insurance Laws."

The original Federal Social Security Act left the definition of what constitutes agricultural labor for purposes of exemption to the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the Treasury. The bureau adopted the rule which practically eliminated the exemption of employees of farm owners and tenants.

"When the California Unemployment Insurance Act was adopted in 1935, the definition was also left to the administration—at that time the California Unemployment Reserves Commission. This commission adopted a ruling which was far more liberal than that already adopted by the Bureau of Internal Revenue, so that in many cases California farmers were exempt under the California Act but were covered by the Federal Act.

"This situation created such difficulties that in February of 1937 the California Employment Commission changed its rule to make it identical with the existing Federal rule, thus ending any conflict as to liability and jurisdiction. This was done with the full consent and understanding of our California farmers.

"The administration of the so-called Federal rule created such difficulty that California agriculture, as well as the agriculture of other States, that in 1939, when the Federal Social Security Act was rewritten, there was written both into the Old Age Insurance and the Unemployment Insurance provisions of the Federal Social Security Act a complete definition of what constitutes agricultural labor for purposes of exemption. The legal definition was far more liberal than the previous Bureau of Internal Revenue ruling and relieved California agriculture to a very great extent.

"The Unemployment Reserves Commission—by 1939 called the California Employment Commission—was called upon to reconsider the definition which it had adopted by rule in 1937 and was requested to follow the new provisions of Federal law. However, the commission refused to adopt the Federal definition and amended its rule effecting May 1, 1940, to make it even more restrictive than had been the previous rule.

"The discriminatory situation thus created was brought to the attention of the California Legislature at the Special Session of December, 1940. At that time a resolution was introduced indicating it would be the intention of the Legislature that the California definition should follow the Federal definition. This resolution passed the Assembly but was later re-referred to the committee and was not finally adopted. During the regular session of 1941 bills were introduced to write into our California law the Federal definition. One of these measures, Senate Bill No. 876, by Senator Gordon, passed the Senate but died in committee in the Assembly. Several bills have been introduced in the present session which would write into our law the Federal definition.

"That is just another one of the gripes of California farmers because they can't understand why the California definition is not parallel to the Federal definition."

The witness reported on:

Importation of Mexican labor

"A delegation from California proceeded to Washington in to perfect an arrangement to bring Mexicans into the United States. Although some preliminary work had already been done, and although the California representatives were joined by others from Arizona and Texas, it was found that many barriers had to be removed in the official attitude of the American and Mexican governments. These reflected opinions of groups in the United States interested in protecting and advancing the social and labor gains acquired in recent years. Final arrangements were made for bringing 3,000 Mexicans into the United States for work in the sugar beets, and a limited number to harvest the 2,000 acres of long staple cotton in the Palo Verde Valley. The Farm Security Administration sent 43 men to Mexico to handle the recruiting, which was done in Mexico City, and resulted in the selection of a considerable number of workers who had had no agricultural experience. Also, the requirements for importation were so rigid that they could be met only by well organized groups, and even with these the labor cost was very high.

"As the season progressed more Mexicans were made available with less rigorous requirements. However, with the need for Mexicans continually mounting, Mr. C. C. Teague called a meeting of representatives of farm organizations on November 6, 1942, to further analyze the situation. As a result, another delegation proceeded to Washington early in 1943, and it is believed that as a result of recent conferences the requirements for importation of Mexicans will be further relaxed and will permit the average farmer under certain circumstances to employ these Mexicans.

"The Farm Security Administration points out that at the present time, due to conditions existing on the Mexican railways, the maximum number of Mexicans which can be imported over those railroads is 500 per week. Inasmuch as the delegation recently in Washington advocated the importation of 60,000 Mexicans for 1943, it is evident that immediate attention should be given toward greatly increasing the facilities for importing Mexicans by rail or bus, or both."

Question: "Before you pass on that Mexican situation, I would like to show you here a form of housing standards for FSA imported workers in California. The form is entitled United States Department of Agriculture, Farm Security Administration Cooperative Employment Agreement.

Witness: "I think that is true but Mr. McFadden has a later form. I am sure that this is the original that was used."

Asked if it would be possible to utilize senior citizens now drawing aged aid and not able to work a full day if the Federal Government released their restrictions from going out and getting work.

The witness felt that they could be used in certain occupations.

Outlook for 1943

The witness continued: "The labor outlook for 1943 is extremely serious. Production goals set by the Secretary of Agriculture will require considerable more labor than in 1942. Recent requests under Selective Service will be of great assistance in retaining workers on the farm, but will not repair the depletions of the past year. The same might be said of the recent freezing order.

"Little can be expected from the farmer influx of migrants, since many of the reduced stream are finding their places in War industries.

"Considerable assistance is expected for greater importation of Mexicans; also, volunteer labor is expected to be available in larger quantities and be better trained than in 1942. And there is some indication that a few farm workers who have been employed in defense industries are returning to agriculture.

"Claims are being made that a large number of farm workers can be recruited from other areas of the United States. In view of past experience, too much should not be expected.

"On February 5, Major John O. Walker, chief of the Food Production Administration's labor division, outlined a three-point program for recruiting 3,500,000 workers for farm labor, as follows:

1. The movement of about 50,000 farm families from over-populated rural areas to more intensive farming regions where they can be given year-round employment, especially on dairy farms.

2. A campaign to sign up all available workers in town and cities for work on farms during the rush season. That campaign, being conducted by the Agricultural Department and State Extension Service, is expected to be completed by April.

3. Mobilization of an army of 270,000 migratory workers to be shifted at Government expense to areas where local labor is not sufficient to meet these needs.

"I think that those statements need to be taken with a great deal of salt, shall we say, and I would want to know quite a little more about how they are going to do it."

Asked where this suggestion came from the witness stated "the press," and that Major Walker until recently, was with the Farm Security which brought out that the suggestion emanated from the Farm Security.

The witness recommended: "I. To assist the proper administrative agencies with detailed instructions as to authority, and to set up immediately functioning county, area and State committees as follows and I say "with detailed instructions as to authority" and I mean that. I think that is the most important thing we need and the most important thing we haven't had.

(a) County committees organized be with substantially the same representation as the Agricultural War Manpower Committee which functioned in 1942, but with larger representation of actual farmers. The county committees should meet once a week during peak labor needs.

"I think the county committee did a swell job during this last year.

(b) Because of the great size of the State, and the fact that there are certain logical groupings of problems, area committees should be formed as in 1942, but not necessarily corresponding to the areas represented by such committees during the past year. Such area committees should meet once a week or often enough to review the recommendations of the county committees.

(c) The State committee is desirable to review the recommendations of the area committees, and keep in intimate touch with Federal, State and other agencies vital to the problem. Either the entire committee or an executive committee should meet once a week during peak labor needs, and often enough at other times to properly consider recommendations from area committees. At least one representative of the administrative agency should be a member of the committee, and should be delegated to immediately follow through on problems within the province of that agency.

"I think that is quite important. That is just your set-up of State, area, and county committees, as I see them.

II. An advisory committee similar to the Committee of Thirty-six appointed in 1942 should be set up with a strong predominance of producer representatives. The committee or its executive committee should meet frequently during peak labor needs, and should maintain close touch with the proper agencies dealing with the problem, as well as with county, area and State committees.

III. Through above-mentioned committees immediately plan for definite farm labor needs, housing, sanitation and transportation for workers; supervision for volunteer labor and adjustment of school and business vacations to correspond with farm labor needs.

"That fits in with some of your bills, I believe, Mr. Chairman.

IV. In order to meet the unique needs of California farmers and in order to keep California's problems from being lost sight of in regional or national efforts, some competent committee or agency should be maintained with this specific duty.

"I don't know whether we should try to recreate a California Employment Service or whether the so-called Committee of Thirty-six should be more effective, or what it should be, but I do sincerely feel we have lost a little something of California's unique interest in this whole problem by its taking over of our whole California set-up."

Discussing whether the local board of supervisors should be responsible if the creation of some activity responsible to the Department of Agriculture, the witness stated: "It is only a personal opinion but it seems to me in the first place that I think Agriculture has complete confidence in our State Department of Agriculture and; secondly, I think the point I expressed before is that we have lost something in California in the taking over by the Federal agencies. We have lost something of California's unique interest in this problem, and perhaps in the State Department of Agriculture with one or more representatives we could follow the ball a little bit more concretely in our own unique problems in California."

The testimony pointed out the elements of uniqueness of California agriculture were: Similarity to industry rather than the little farm home units of the East; seasonality, it's need for large numbers of harvest help and California's higher wage scales and willingness to pay.

Further recommendations by the witness:

"V. Revise State laws which permit abuse of unemployment insurance resulting in loss of labor.

VI. Revise State laws to permit regulation of sale of liquor, when such sales result in reducing the labor supply.

"That is a rather general statement, but I think you will all understand the problem we have.

VII. Revise State laws which prevent full use of women or minors in agriculture, with due regard to health and educational standards.

VIII. Amend State law to provide that statutes relating to unemployment insurance parallel the Federal definition in order that inequities and confusion be eliminated.

IX. Provide for postwar planning through the College of Agriculture, or some competent agency. I hope it will be a competent one since the pattern of California is subject to material changes following the war.

"I will say there is a commission already in the United States for one of the governments under German rule, that is already searching for 10,000 purebred dairy animals. That is one country and there are going to be others that are going to be looking for purebred stock and we are going to have a different pattern in California after the war.

"One phase of such planning should include anticipating adequate housing for farm workers by transfer of emergency housing now constructed for guayule workers and employees on other emergency projects. That is going to be a real problem and there are going to be lots of housing available to agriculture if we plan in advance to have it in the right place.

X. Simplify regulations relating to the importation of Mexican labor. Recruit such labor in agricultural areas, and devise means of breaking the transportation bottleneck which impedes efforts to bring in adequate supply of Mexicans."

The witness in answer to questions related considerable experience, most of it good, with children working in agriculture, and that some of the bad experiences were due to lack of supervision. He thought it advisable to arrange to have the coach or agricultural teacher of a school to act as supervisor of such groups and that the school be responsible when they move out into agricultural areas, and that the farmer take care of the wages. The parents would not be so reluctant to permit children going out if supervision were furnished.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF J. E. DUEUL, DIRECTOR UTILITIES DEPARTMENT, CALIFORNIA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

The second witness called was J. E. Dueul, Director of the Utilities Department of the California Farm Bureau Federation. Mr. Dueul presented three documents marked A, B, and C for the record.

Mr. Dueul suggested various witnesses in the agricultural field who would have testimony of value.

Mr. Dueul stated the "Producers and processors of farm products are more interested in the work of this committee than any one * * * the Federal agencies have failed so far and their most recent proposal does not give the producer any assurance that it will be successful. He suggested further witnesses.

Mr. Dueul stated that early in January Mr. Wiser, President of the Farm Bureau, made a statement of the California Farm Labor situation, which he presented as an Exhibit E.

Chairman Hatfield remarked he felt the report so important he wanted each member of this committee to have a copy to which Mr. Dueul complied.

Mr. Dueul mentioned various persons able to speak on the processing end and another group able to speak on volunteer labor.

On farm labor, Mr. Dueul suggested Prof. R. L. Adams of the University of California, who prepared two reports in 1942 and one in 1943, marked as Exhibits F, G, and H.

Mr. Dueul emphasized his approval of Senate Bills 536, 610, 1056, and Assembly Bill 1798 and deemed them "absolutely necessary." He continued: "There is nothing to indicate that the Federal Government will do anything better in the near future than it has in the past, so unless the State Legislature takes the job over and puts a sensible plan into operation, I am fearful of the losses in food and fiber that will occur this year."

He continued: "Another problem is the matter of pirating of farm labor by the USES, taking it from the farm community. The men that farmers need to work, blacksmiths, welders, people that are just as essential to farming as to any other industry, are being taken."

Mr. Dueul read a letter regarding opportunities of work from the Army Air Force. This letter was sent to 32,000 people in Southern California, including farmers.

Mr. Dueul's testimony claimed insufficient price to meet cost of production, machinery rationing program hindrance to production program, subsidies not wanted by the farmers, but a fair price and the opportunity to work on a fair margin of existence; and gas rationing inconsiderately handled—taking up much of the farmers' time, which could be put to use on the farm.

TESTIMONY OF C. W. ROBINSON, FARMER, ORANGE GROWER, RIVIERA, CALIFORNIA

C. W. Robinson of Riviera, California, stated he was chairman of the Labor Committee in Los Angeles County and that this committee was still operating, never had disbanded, and they didn't care what committee they were called by the Federal agencies. He related his committee had just met last Monday and the labor situation for next year appeared darker than the past year. He stated principal assistance of the USES and the FSA was in recruiting a number of high school boys who had proved of value. He agreed with the suggestion that the State Legislature take some action authorizing the establishment of some local, State or county agencies as an improvement to the present situation.

TESTIMONY OF H. A. WALSH, PALOS VERDE VALLEY FARMER

Mr. Walsh stated he was a member of the Riverside County Farm Bureau, a member of the county conservation committee, and also a member of the County USDA War Board of Riverside County. He related his groups had difficulties in the labor situation and that two years ago there were 600 dairy cows in the valley and that today there were none with the exception of a few family cows, all this due to the labor situation. He continued that four government projects in the vicinity drew practically all labor from the farms to these projects. Mr. Walsh related difficulty in securing farm machinery due to the rationing allotments. The farmers were discouraged and ready to quit to go into these Government projects also.

Asked his experience with the U. S. Employment Service, he stated: "It appears (they) furnished men for both industry and agriculture. One outfit paid $1.50 an hour and the other paid 50 cents to 60 cents. Who do you think would get the men?"

The witness cited long distances and numerous trips to the rationing board for gasoline and then farmers were not allotted the amount needed.

He stated he was 200 miles from a rationing board. "We have a local rationing board, but, of course, they are subject to the other office in the county seat. We are 175 miles from Riverside and the farmers come in there and they tell them they can't get emergency gas when they first got their allotment from Detroit. They got about one-fourth enough to do them to get them anywhere. Then they had to make a request for supplemental gas and they would have to go to Riverside. Sometimes they would have to go down a half a dozen times and wait a week or two weeks before they could get a return from Riverside. By that time they would be getting pretty mad."

Questioned how much time it took, the witness stated: "Oh, I wouldn't say, but it took a lot of time and they burned up a lot of gas * * * sometimes all day to make the round trip."

TESTIMONY OF C. P. BLATZ, PACKING HOUSE MANAGER, LOS ANGELES COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

Mr. C. P. Blatz stated he was a packing house manager in Los Angeles County, a lemon and grapefruit grower in San Bernardino County, and a member of the Farm Labor Committee of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau.

Mr. Blatz stated he wanted something done to check the employment service offices' activities in soliciting employees for defense work other than farming, and that he favored decentralizing of labor solicitation and agreed that establishment of some activity in the State Department of Agriculture to handle it would be an improvement.

Asked if the price ceiling for packing of citrus fruits was sufficient, he replied: "No. You can not obtain the labor." The nearby defense plants paying a bigger wage and the ceiling on packing wage naturally cause labor to move into defense plants. The ceiling price on the product is set so low, "you can't compete with industry."

The testimony established that women trained by the citrus industry for the packing plants were drawn to the airplane industry by the higher wages.

TESTIMONY OF LOUIS F. DE MARTINI, VEGETABLE GROWER, COMPTON, CALIFORNIA

Louis F. De Martini stated he was a vegetable grower in Compton, belonged to the Board of Directors of the Southern California Produce Growers Association, was a member of the Los Angeles County Labor Board, and represented the Southern California Produce Growers on the Labor Committee. His farming operations amounted to 66 crop acres.

He related the need for experienced help on vegetable farms due to hand picking, and grading while picking, and that weeding also required experience.

The witness suggested the committee do something to require such vegetables as carrots, beets, turnips to be topped, thus eliminating labor of bunching. He added that the Safeway Stores buy their produce by the pound topped, and that the Army bought nothing but topped goods.

Asked for suggestions the committee could follow, he stated there were too many committees trying to do the same job, that his experience with the U. S. Employment Service was bad in that they seemed to send their people to the war plants rather than to the farms. He continued he had farmed since he was 7 years old and that he had too much money invested or he would have gone to work in a defense plant long ago. He felt those fixing prices were not acquainted with the problems surrounding the commodity. He recommended fewer committees and someone locally situated and locally responsible.

Senator Crittenden at this point stated it would seem desirable to have a Federal agency man appear before this committee to explain the price set-up.

The witness pointed out that there was less produce being grown in this county than a year ago and that there were more people there than heretofore. He related he had trained boys (15 years of age) to bunch vegetables at the suggestion of the USES, but that when their vacations came they were going to the war plants which started them out at 85 cents an hour. He stated the county growers had some Mexican help from those living in little towns in the county but suggested that if housing could be arranged Mexican labor could be imported.

TESTIMONY OF GEORGE VAN MOUWERICK, DAIRYMAN,
REDLANDS, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Mouwerick stated he was in the dairy business in Redlands and milked about 200 cows and raised young stock, and that his problem was securing milkers and clean-up men. He stated he paid $160 a month for milkers, giving them once a week off, and that this was an increase of from $40 to $50.

Asked what increase in the price of butterfat or milk he had received, he replied about 15 per cent and that the labor increase was 40 per cent, with a 50 per cent increase in the cost of hay and a related increase in cost of concentrates. He said he was now operating at a loss.

In answer to questions concerning dairy help, he related that at one dairy in San Jacinto milking 42 cows, in 12 months' time six men quit; the Blue Mountain Dairy of Colton, had 40 cows and six men quit, Richmond Dairy in Arlington had 65 cows and six men quit, in Fontana a dairy there had three men quit, all going into defense work; however, some had returned in order to stay out of the Army. A new problem had arisen of fellows offering themselves as milkers in order to be deferred. He added that this turnover in milkers had an effect on the cow withholding milk, butterfat, and that there was a general decrease in butterfat production and gallonage of milk. He cited the McDaniel Dairy of San Bernardino milking 90 cows, having a big turnover of labor, lost in production from 980 pounds per month to 753 pounds, a decrease of 227 pounds per month, over 20 per cent.

He added that poor milkers eventually make culls out of the cows. He agreed that operating on a high cost of production required the maximum production and butter production was obtained from hand milking over machine milking.

TESTIMONY OF J. P. BUTLER, VEGETABLE AND FRUIT FARMER,
LOS ANGELES COUNTY

Mr. Butler stated he and two brothers operated about 1,000 acres in Los Angeles County, raising rutabagas, oranges, tomatoes, potatoes, lemons, grapefruit, cantaloups, carrots, onions, etc. He said he was recently appointed chairman of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau Labor Committee.

It was his opinion that the Federal agencies had failed in securing farm labor and felt a local committee would be more workable. He stated he and his brothers spent a great deal of time "breaking through one kind of red tape and another," and told of two tractors he had ordered and bought and was told he had three hours to get them out of the Los Angeles warehouse before being frozen. He ran one on the street on hard tires and one was still frozen. Another point he mentioned was that when he felt justified in paying a wage competitive with industry, he had done fairly well in getting his crop harvested. He stated he had at the moment 100 lemon pickers, paying them 20 cents a box and they were making from $6 to $12 a day. He said, "But we are going on the assumption that we sold a few boxes of lemons in the last few months which would allow us to pay that," and added he didn't know how long he could continue. He felt that if the new price ceiling policy starting on farm commodities, is a criterion, "we can expect the worst."

Mr. Butler stated that while it is rather embarrassing for anyone to say we should take men from airplane plants or the armed forces, some cooperation should be sought and that the farmers had no agency with authority or money to put ads in papers as did industry in rural papers as well which pointed out their advantages. He believed if the truth could be publicized, people would find many and perhaps greater advantages in farm work and its wages against that in industry. He told of a new powder factory at Saugus which took practically all of the local help and it got to a point where he had to have some help so decided to get some back regardless of cost "because we were taking normal income tax money to do it with," and he thought he would be able to keep them as they were naturally farmer-minded and liked their work on the farm, that they found living costs cheaper working as farm labor than in the defense industry.

TESTIMONY OF A. J. McFADDEN, CITRUS AND PERSIMMON GROWER, SANTA ANA, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Arthur J. McFadden said he lived in Santa Ana and raised oranges, lemons, and persimmons in Orange County for 30 years, and was a member of the Southern California Area War Manpower Commission. "Trying to represent agriculture and in defense of myself I will say it wasn't my fault. They drafted me and put me there."

He told of the drift of farm labor to the airplane and shipbuilding plants and the draft boards taking their normal amount from the farms and with the rapid expansion of war industries leaving little labor in the country districts. He said the gasoline shortage would prevent migrations from the Dust Bowl as heretofore and that Mexican labor would be a farm labor shortage solution. He told of U. S. Senator Downey's hearings in Los Angeles and in Northern California which brought out the great need for more labor and that Downey had suggested "a few of us had better come back to Washington and see what we could do as to getting some Mexicans in." A meeting was held two months ago in San Francisco with representatives from all over the State, 60 farmers (Farm Bureau, Farmers Union, State Chamber of Commerce, Associated Farmers, and others).

Mr. McFadden continued: "Four of us went back (to Washington), (C. C. Teague; Fran Wilcox, Assistant Manager, California Fruit Growers Exchange; Chester Moore, Executive Secretary, Western Growers Protective Association; and A. J. McFadden). We had three interviews with Secretary Wickard and one with Chairman McNutt of the WMC." He said they told the Secretary of Agriculture the contract under which Mexicans were brought in ($3.500) was impossible of application for general use in California because the $50,000 bond required cut off the average farmer entirely and the requirement of taking 20-25 Mexicans. The farmer not only didn't have the money but the necessary red tape scared him to death before he started, also the average farmer would need that many people. This precluded those people who needed the help most.

Mr. McFadden continued that other provisions in the contract were unsatisfactory and a contract was submitted without the bond and without the limitation as to numbers, but suggested terminal camps to which Mexicans could be brought to cover the State, one to be in Imperial County, two in the citrus district in Southern California, one in Santa Maria Valley, one in Salinas Valley, one in Fresno, one in Stockton, and one in Marysville. Major Walker, Labor Coordinator, Food Production Division, U. S. Department of Agriculture, agreed to most of the provisions of this contract.

The witness continued: "I couldn't see any reason why that contract couldn't have been agreed on inside of two or three days, but we stayed there two weeks and while we agreed at the second interview on all the principal points, he stated he would have to talk it over with the people under him, and Mr. Wilcox stayed two weeks more and is now back in California and Major Walker told him after 10 or 15 more conversations it would probably take three weeks more after he left before it was finally settled."

A copy of the contract was submitted for exhibit.

The witness continued that this committee of four which went to Washington was convinced California would get 50,000 or 60,000 Mexican laborers by next fall, which probably was insufficient but they felt would get them by. It was understood the Farm Security Administration would bring them in and house them. The number coming was to be certified by the WMC under Mr. McNutt and the committee had the assurance from both Mr. McNutt and the Secretary of Agriculture there would be no bottlenecks in their offices, that it would move right straight along.

"When we got back to California," continued the witness, "the first thing we saw in the papers was a directive (No. 17) from Mr. McNutt transferring the entire thing to the Department of Agriculture."

"Now, I have been investigating ever since I got back to California to see where we were under this new directive and I haven't been able to find anybody in any organization that knows, and I am fearful that this confusion may last so long that it may seriously retard the flow of Mexicans into the State."

Asked the wage to be paid these Mexicans, the witness stated the prevailing wage, the same as Americans, and $1.40 a day board was to be charged the Mexicans. If the employer failed to give at least three-fourths of the work time contracted for, he would have to pay $3 a day up to three-fourths of the days.

Questioned about what Florida requested, the witness stated that Florida growers were asking for the privilege of importing Negroes from the Bahamas. He stated the War Manpower Committee said to the Florida people: "You people are right close to the eastern consuming markets, and you are offering to pay these people from the West Indies $2 a day when they are working, and the California people are 3,000 miles away from the market and they are offering to pay the going wage of $3 a day when they don't work if it is the employer's fault they are not working. We are for that, but we are not for your proposition."

The witness said that 1,500 to 2,000 Mexicans were brought from Mexico City as it was the easiest place to get them for the immediate need. The Mexican Government gave permission to obtain agricultural workers in agricultural states outside of Mexico City and if screening was necessary, our representatives were welcome, in fact, they preferred it to hauling them up and back. About 20 per cent went back.

Mr. McFadden claimed the Mexicans were useful in the citrus groves and lettuce fields, but they wouldn't be much service in the dairy (milking) industry. He added that the citrus organizations were going ahead with housing for about 1,200. He thought the housing situation was a weak point in California's farm labor problem and that some provision should be made toward improving it. He thought the bill introduced in the Legislature to permit using county fair buildings and the various facilities existing for housing for county pools of labor had considerable merit.

Asked if he had anything additional to say, the witness stated he was much concerned with the apparent confusion existing among the various Federal agencies and hoped for clarification of jurisdiction. He favored local authority.

TESTIMONY OF W. J. CECIL, DIRECTOR, CALIFORNIA STATE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE, SACRAMENTO

Mr. Cecil, Director of Agriculture of the State of California, was requested to give the historical background of the different State and Federal agencies having to deal with the farm labor situation. Mr. Cecil presented a 12-page mimeographed statement which was marked No. 12.

Mr. Cecil stated he discussed with Chairman Hatfield on January 31, 1943, the work assigned this Fact-Finding Committee as it related to the employment of agricultural labor and his (Cecil's) elaboration upon the "all-too numerous organizational structures and agencies which attempted to cope with the farm labor problem during 1941 and 1942."

Senator Hatfield's request for a historical summary was being presented by Mr. Cecil with three objectives:

1. To give this committee the benefit of that history;
2. To illustrate reasons for confusion resulting from re-organization of the agencies and draw additional understanding of the partial failure of them to perform effectively;
3. To illustrate forms of organization which have not been adequate in the premises so that we do not repeat the same or similar errors in organizing for 1943.

The first part of the document, Mr. Cecil felt had already been inducted in previous testimony, so he skipped to Point 7. "I first attempted to approach this in terms of where the duties were from Washington on down, and I got so confused," stated Mr. Cecil, "and had no common identities to identify. I turned it around and looked at it for a two-year period in terms of the one thing which has been roughly common in this picture, which has been these long suffering county committees * * * they have had lots of bosses * * * to whom they supposedly owed allegiance, but they have been a relatively constant factor. So in the first nine pages of my paper, I have traced these poor county committees through a series of organizations * * * and revampings."

Mr. Cecil reported that in the short space of 23 months (Feb. 7, 1941-Jan. 2, 1943) the county groups were confronted by the following:

- a. State Land Use Planning Committee, February 7, 1941;
- b. Sub-Committee on Social Problems, March 7, 1941;
- c. California State Agricultural Planning Committee, January 9, 1942;
- d. Sub-Committee on Farm Labor, January 9, 1942;
- e. State Farm Labor Committee, January, 1942;
- f. State USDA War Board, July 1, 1942;
- g. State Agricultural Advisory Committee, August 7, 1942;
- h. War Manpower Commission, August 24, 1942;
- i. Farm Security Administration, August, 1942;
- j. California War Manpower Committee, August 31, 1942;
- k. Six Area Agricultural Manpower Committees, August 31, 1942.

"To further confuse the matter," continued Mr. Cecil, "two more foster parents presented themselves in January of 1943."

- a. January 21, 1943, War Manpower Commission Regional Director Hopkins organized a new California State Farm Labor Committee, with the second meeting scheduled for January 29;
- b. About January 26, War Manpower Commission Director McNutt issued a directive transferring all phases of farm labor recruiting to Secretary of Agriculture Wickard. Thus the USDA State War Board is the thirteenth parent which the county groups had in 24 months.

Mr. Cecil wondered, with all these changes, how these county groups were able to do as much as they did. He continued explaining his report and the still-confusing overlapping authority between the agencies, and added that as yet "we have no occasion to rejoice over the ending of all organizational difficulties, and the present and thirteenth parent * * * of the county committees looks no stronger or no weaker than the first."

He continued: "California, the United States, and the United Nations all have a tremendous stake in the success or failure of California agriculture. In 1942 our crops, livestock, and livestock products had an approximate farm value of $1,166,411,000 or 34 per cent greater than the comparable figure for 1941. The farmers in California, if you look at it in terms of value of crops, did an appreciably far better job in 1942 than they did in 1941.

"The dollar sign is fallacious because in certain groups of commodities in tonnage we actually produced less in 1942 than we did in 1941 * * * prices (fruit and nut crops) were so high that the dollar value was 30 per cent higher * * * we produced only 96 per cent as much * * * in field crops * * * our 1942 volume was 12 per cent higher than 1941 value * * * livestock likewise up 30 per cent."

Mr. Cecil continued: "California farmers have been called upon by the Federal Government to equal or exceed their 1942 record production in 1943. Much of the credit for our tremendous 1942 production is due to unusually fine weather and to the great efforts made by our farmers, not to the operations of Federal, State or county governments."

Oftentimes, it seemed that the Federal Government was impeding farmers' efforts, considering priorities. Selective Service, price ceilings, rationing of tires and trucks, shortages of transportation, equipment, spare parts, packaging, fertilizers, insecticides, and labor, and the removal of the Japanese, and the repeated delays, indecision, and reorganization."

Mr. Cecil as director offered the services of the State Department of Agriculture in California, or the county agricultural commissioners in assisting this fact-finding committee to solve the labor problem. He doubted the labor problem in California could be completely solved in view of the obstacles at hand. He predicted he would be surprised if the 1943 production would be in excess of 85 per cent of 1942. He said: "We have been asked for an increase and I look for a 15 per cent over-all decrease."

Mr. Cecil presented a report from the Federal-State Crop Reporting Service dated January 20th, entitled: "The Estimated Crop Losses in California due to the Farm Labor Shortages in 1942."

He enlarged on this release, stating olives, walnuts, and cotton had not yet been included but that 30 per cent of the cotton crop will be a total loss.

The report showed major commodities, excluding olives, walnuts, and cotton, in which losses were involved as being $6,110,000, because of labor shortages.

Mr. Cecil presented releases to the committee as further exhibits.

"In Part B of the mimeograph report," Mr. Cecil continued, "* * * I tried to * * * explain what I thought the coming set-up would be, National, State, and county, and that is a crude attempt to draw a picture of it."

Mr. Cecil was pessimistic about

1. Sufficient Mexican labor coming in; and
2. Felt the USDA War Board a closed corporation and, therefore, undesirable. He favored the farmer committee and that the "USDA War Board, State and county, be expanded to include practical private operators, preferably chosen by their own groups." He suggested:
3. Segregation of the Farm Placement side of the USES;
4. That a definite head be established over the various agencies;
5. That Mexican nationals be made available in quantity;
6. That the marginal area workers work for someone who has soil to produce;
- 7-8. That a definite program for volunteer labor be established;
9. That Washington understand California's early planting and harvest schedules;
10. Further housing provision for farm labor;
11. That transportation be coordinated;
12. That a longer work-week for farm workers be established;
13. That Washington take a more sympathetic and helpful attitude toward food production;
14. That price ceilings be in line with cost of production;
15. That a clear-cut definition be given as to the essentiality of crops;
16. That State laws be adjusted to avoid hampering production on farms;
17. That farm labor be frozen; and
18. That Washington's attitude of prolabor change to a middle-of-the-road policy with respect to labor permitting others to be recognized.

Assemblyman Bashore asked Mr. Cecil: "Do you have any more attention paid to you when you go to Washington than what, apparently, the California delegation to Congress has paid to them?" Mr. Cecil replied: "Practically no attention is paid to me. In other words, they are not paying attention to anybody * * * both producer and distributor alike (in seeking OPA milk price) are considered (by Washington officials) to be grasping people * * * reception is bad (there) * * * (with) so many people going to Washington * * * they have got rather elephantine skin * * * I can't entirely blame them. When you give them an honest story they don't seem to be able to appreciate its honesty."

Asked if someone sent from Washington here to have a look would help, Mr. Cecil replied: "* * * so far as we have experienced when a man comes out here to see and listen, it is normally what you and I would describe as an office boy who doesn't count when he gets back to the other end."

Asked to discuss lend-lease, Mr. Cecil stated he was not too familiar with it but that the Pacific Coast purchasing office in San Francisco was one of the most active in the group.

In discussing the proper head to assist in farm production and securing of proper labor, Mr. Cecil said that Washington representatives are midwesterners and easterners and some representation from the West should be included that could give consideration to California's unique requirements. He deplored the present situation of separate interests; such as, growers, processors, shippers, and others running in to him or to Mr. Wickard and telling different stories, as being a nuisance, and again suggested "an unofficial ambassador of California agriculture in Washington."

Discussion of the outlook for livestock brought out that Mr. Cecil thought it would be as good as 1942 except for pen-fed beef and lamb which were expected to be down due to the possible reduction of sugar-beet planting, but that California was primarily concerned with milk at present and the hay situation, that two more months of hay feeding was necessary with hay costing $38 to $39 a ton when it could be found.

Discussion of guayule in California showed that it was a No. 1 priority crop, grown by and for the Government; that nobody could compete with it for labor or materials; that for five or more years the best farm land would be taken; that 90,000 acres are taken up in California for 1943; that plantings are made by machinery; and that some Mexicans brought in for sugarbeet work were taken for the guayule production

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF T. M. FINNEY, COUNTY MANAGER OF THE USES, AND IMPERIAL COUNTY REPRESENTATIVE OF THE WAR MANPOWER COMMISSION

Mr. T. M. Finney stated he was formerly seven years with the State Employment Service and answered a number of questions concerning the local set-up of the various Federal agencies and others concerned with recruiting of farm labor.

The witness stated there was a shortage of 1,000 agricultural laborers, most of them needed in the carrot tying. He said: "We have orders for 750 carrot tiers. We are unable to find them," and added that the shortage of cars to ship also held them up. He said they had 1,200 Mexican nationals taking care of the lettuce and that they "have really been of vast assistance in solving the labor problem." He said the 1,200 were brought here by the Imperial Valley Farmers Association through the FSA, that most came from Mexico City, some had agricultural experience, and that only about 50 were sent back as unfit for agricultural work.

In the Fresno area, he said, there was a shortage of 200 men for various types of mechanical experience, which caused a delay of a month or six weeks in harvesting milo and flax. The cotton situation, the witness continued, in the Bard area was in bad shape, pickers were needed and none were available. One man needed 50 and had 3; however, the freeze on peas directed some 75 families to the cotton area so that only about 200 acres was lost.

The witness told of private contractors of labor coming in from other sections of the country and bringing in their own people with them. When these contractors ran out of work for them they referred to the USES.

Asked if he had placed any advertisements in any of the local papers of Imperial Valley for jobs in the industrial sections of Southern California, the witness replied: "We placed an advertisement not very long ago for women to work in a parachute organization in San Diego. This advertisement was placed through us. They requested us (USES) to do that." He informed the committee that these advertisements were paid by the prospective employer and that the USES had no money for that purpose.

The witness stated the USES had not advertised in the Imperial Valley papers for the aircraft organization because of the comparatively few people in the area. Aircraft instruction was started in the Imperial Valley high school and it graduated about 154 young men and three women; out of these 45 had been migratory fruit and vegetable workers, and around 50 per cent of the 154 had agricultural experience.

Asked if the imported workers were satisfied with conditions in the Valley, the witness said the majority of them were very well satisfied because they were able to earn about an average of two pesos a day in Mexico and their average here is 20 pesos a day. He told of one Mexican having earned $32 in one week and the Mexican said "that was more money than the Mayor of my town earned" and that he was going back and show that Mayor something. The witness said they were good workers and he felt they had saved the farmers here thousands of dollars. The witness stated that the workers seemed satisfied with their housing conditions. Complaints were evidenced that they didn't get the kind of food they had been used to in Mexico. "There weren't any tortillas and a sufficient number of beans," said the witness, "but that was soon adjusted by the Farmers Association and lately I have heard no complaint on the food." He added that most board themselves, prepare their own meals or buy them in Mexican restaurants.

The witness explained the method of obtaining Mexicans. "We (USES) first had to certify as to the need of these Mexican nationals." He continued: "I certified to the Sacramento office, the head office at that time, that there was a need for 1,800 laborers. Then this order was cleared throughout the United States, every State in the Union by telegram had to say that they could not furnish this labor. When that was done then the Sacramento office certified to our Washington office, headquarters office, that these men were needed, were unavailable and after that certification it was turned over to the Farm Security Administration * * * (who) sent then to Mexico and also hired men there who interviewed these Mexicans, accepted them, had them examined, loaded on the trains and sent to Imperial Valley."

Concerning the many Mexicans at the border anxious to come into the United States to work, the witness said he investigated and learned that there was a radio announcement from a Mexican station that the United States was in desperate need of agricultural labor and all you had to do was to go to the border, and you would be permitted to go across and work. He found 500 to 600 had come in to Mexicali from the interior of Mexico and attempted to get across. The witness said his office could do nothing because they did not have a passport or permission to enter the United States.

The witness stated the labor shortage for 1943 would be greater due to an increase in flax and sugar-beet acreages.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF W. H. GRAHAM, FARMER AND CHAIRMAN, UTILITY COMMITTEE, IMPERIAL VALLEY FARM BUREAU, IMPERIAL VALLEY

Mr. W. H. Graham stated he was a farmer operating 160 acres in Imperial Valley and Chairman of the Imperial Valley Farm Bureau Utility Committee. He related the farm labor shortage with regard to tractor drivers and irrigators. He related having operated more than 500 acres last year, but that five men quit in less than 10 days to go into defense work and for "23 days I didn't do anything. I didn't take off my shoes or take a bath, for 23 days and nights I was on my feet irrigating the land they left." He related the attitude of the local draft boards not wishing to defer their agricultural workers, that a few deferments had been applied for but with the appeals to Washington, no outcome had been received.

Asked what he thought of the President's statement to use armed forces to work in agriculture, the witness said he felt the soldiers would feel an injustice to seeing men paid regular wages for the same work and knowing other men having quit the agricultural work to work in defense plants now drawing time and a half after 40 hours a week.

Asked how much he paid for irrigating, he said $110 a month and 50 cents an hour for time on the tractor and one month he made almost $300. No board was furnished but a house and sufficient room for a cow, hogs, and chickens was furnished.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF ARGYLE McLACHLAN, MANAGER, SOUTHWEST FLAXSEED ASSOCIATION AND RANCHER, CALEXICO, CALIFORNIA

Mr. McLachlan stated he operated a ranch and was manager of the Southwest Flaxseed Association. He was asked if he had experienced any difficulty in flax industry and if he would expect a labor difficulty this coming season.

Mr. McLachlan said he anticipated shortages in skilled labor, tractor drivers and combine operators. He said last year there were 100,000 acres of flax, 15,000 over the previous year. This year, due to the Government's request for increase, he estimated a possible 60 per cent increase. The Government had been approached last November for priorities on machines and the quota was increased to 50 machines, but 125 had been asked. He related of every means devised to relieve the labor situation, some machinery having been installed to use fewer men. He added that the people in the valley felt very sensible about the situation and that they were trying in spite of shortage of machinery and help to go on and would manage to harvest the crop some way. He said the flax people went ahead and increased the planting 60 per cent requested by the Government without knowing whether they would get the necessary machinery.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF B. A. HARRIGAN, IMPERIAL COUNTY AGRICULTURAL COMMISSIONER, EL CENTRO, CALIFORNIA

Mr. B. A. Harrigan stated he was the Imperial County Agricultural Commissioner living at El Centro and was also a farmer.

He was questioned about this area having a Land Use Planning activity about two years. He said it was a committee organized under the Triple A for the purpose of utilizing to the maximum farm lands. This committee had a subcommittee on agricultural labor made up of Farm Bureau members. At this point Mr. Walker continued the testimony.

Mr. Harrigan was recalled later in the testimony and told of the Secretary of Agriculture's decision as to nonessential and essential crops. Imperial County being a large grower of lettuce and canteloupes was vitally interested. Much lettuce was sold to the Army and Imperial County was interested in having lettuce termed as an essential crop.

Mexican labor could not be used on a nonessential crop and any crop planted after November 12th was "nonessential."

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF CLARENCE WALKER, FARM BUREAU MEMBER, IMPERIAL COUNTY

Mr. Walker, Secretary of the Farmer's Association, organized to deal with the Farm Security Administration on the importation of Mexicans, made a contract with it because the FSA would not deal with an individual. The association in turn made contracts directly with the farmer for labor. The witness filed Bulletin 62 explaining the agreement between the United States and Mexico.

The witness continued that the FSA maintained a migrant camp at Brawley, one at Calipatria, and another at Holtville. A few of the farmers also house the Mexicans and all facilities were approved by the FSA. The fairgrounds were rented and the place acted as a clearing center from which the Mexicans were farmed out. The association paid for the necessary changes at the fairgrounds as approved by and to be maintained by the FSA, and the set-up worked very nicely until another individual was sent in to replace the one in charge.

Under the contract, the Mexicans were to be imported for war essential crops, designated by the Secretary of Agriculture. Then in order to keep them busy the association insisted that the contract be broadened to permit them to take care of other crops to keep them busy 75 per cent of the time. This was done. This covers the reason for the letter marked Exhibit 24. The contract was also changed from calling for stoop labor to including them to prepare certain lands for crops such as flax and alfalfa. The Mexicans could also be used on other crops provided they had already been planted.

Difficulties arose when the new head (Craig) wanted to raise the wage scale from 50 cents to 60 cents which had already been established and agreed to by a committee appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture. The contract called for labor for three-fourths of the contract period, then the farmers' association shall pay $3 a day subsistence. Then Lawrence Hewes, Jr., Regional Director, for the 11 Western States of the FSA took the position that the contract should be interpreted at the end of each week and if any man for any reason is laid off three or four days on account of bad weather, he wanted the association to pay the laborer $3 a day. The association disliked the changes in supervision causing changes in interpretation of the contract in that the restrictions and necessary requirements to comply with the contract were burdensome as it was. The witness stated: "Now, if you have someone interpreting that contract every 30 days it was different than what it was 30 days ago, everything is in a tailspin and the whole thing is in an uproar. That seems to be the situation here. * * * We shouldn't have all this red tape." He continued that it was necessary for 15 or 16 big growers to put up $100,000 bond for these men and that a small farmer was unable to do this. The witness felt under the war emergency the arrangement should be more elastic and some of the red tape should be eliminated.

The witness related that, "the first lot of Mexicans were 'green labor' and were contracted for three months while the association's contract was for six months and about 200 were returned after considerable money was spent educating them as to how the work should be done." He stated the cost of importing Mexican laborers was expensive, that it cost the Government approximately $200 per man. He believed the contract should be simple to make the recruitment of agricultural laborers more available. On the whole, he said, the Mexican laborers were satisfactory except for the 50 or so out of the 1,250 group imported which were returned, and he felt that Mexican labor was the solution to the agricultural labor situation in Imperial Valley. He claimed that among these Mexicans there were some who were good milkers and he thought if some carefully selected were sent to school for 60 days, they would become good tractor drivers.

The witness stated the association would be very reluctant to take any further Mexicans under the present contract because of the lack of confidence in supervision by the FSA. He said Hewes was a "fine fellow," but when they asked to have Craig removed, the next one that came along was more unsatisfactory and they felt further complaining would lead to a bad reputation with Hewes.

SUMMARY OF BERT R. PURDY, FARM IMPLEMENT BUSINESS,
EL CENTRO, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Bert R. Purdy stated his business was operation of the Edgar Implement Store at El Centro. He related similar difficulties as other implement dealers in the valley, in trying to secure the needed farm help for harvesting purposes. While the allocations for combines had been increased to 50, the WPB had not as yet made any material available for their manufacture.

Asked about hay balers, the witness said that some were to get into production about March 15, but that is about six weeks late for this area. He said the area had about 15 hay balers but needed 40 or 45. The tractor and implement companies being somewhat of a clearing house for tractor men, know of various jobs to be done through farmers' contacts with them, thus the companies are somewhat informed as to the needs of the area. The witness continued that the supply of tractor men was very short and that there were only half enough harvest thresher operators. Repair men for farm machinery were in high demand and practically unobtainable, and repair parts were becoming critically scarce.

TESTIMONY OF L. E. SINCLAIR, RANCHER, FLAX, GRAIN AND VEGETABLES, CALIPATRIA, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Sinclair testified he had 1,500 acres of vegetables, 3,000 acres of flax, and 1,500 acres of grain. He related of the Missouri draft board claiming his millman who helped him build the $20,000 flax mill and with him two years and paying him $2 an hour and board: of sending reclassification papers and telegrams to this board and of their not answering, but proceeding with induction. The witness stated he even had the California draft board phone the Missouri board which finally agreed to investigate. He said he depended on this man to not only run the mill for his own flax but also to take care of many of his neighbors. He said his local board agreed such an important man should never have been classified in 1A. He said his needs for men ran from 30 to 400, depending on the season, and his peak season was in March. He said he grew 1,000 acres of peas, but anticipating labor shortage and with the recent freeze, he disked 400 acres of peas so he would not need the peak of labor this year. He said he could not obtain sufficient irrigators for planting. He claimed skilled help was needed, that the inexperienced or women and children could not handle the large tractors and other work on this type of farming. He was opposed to the President's suggestion using soldiers for farm labor. He claimed that volunteer-school student labor was incompatible with large scale farming. He said when you pay more than $1.50 a day you can't afford to use horses or mules, you had to use machinery.

Asked if he had anything further to say, the witness said: "If I can just help to instill something into your committee to do some good from the standpoint of helping us to hold what little bit of experienced labor we have, I will be very happy * * * Is there any help to be gotten to get any of our labor back that they have already drafted?"

Asked about his experience with Mexican laborers, the witness said they were very satisfactory, he had no trouble with them, they hated to leave him and the next men who got them also said they were fine.

TESTIMONY OF M. E. RYAN, MANAGER, IMPERIAL HAY GROWERS ASSOCIATION, WESTMORELAND, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Ryan stated the membership represented some 60,000 acres of alfalfa hay for marketing. He said his experience with alfalfa harvesting last summer was "pitiful." "The labor available was limited and the quality * * * poor * * * rates demanded by the labor were so excessive that a man in three or four days' work could make what he would commonly make under normal circumstances in a week." He said rates paid were 8 cents a bale, picking in the field and piling roadside, "although in extreme circumstances as high as 15 cents was asked and paid." Bales weigh from 120-125 pounds, temperatures in the valley range from 100-120° F., making the work back-breaking labor, to which not all types of laborers are able to stand up. Generally Negro labor is used. A discussion took up various operations in baling and related work and the various men needed. The witness believed that the skilled labor needed will be greatly aggravated over that of last year.

He stated the type of men needed to withstand the high temperatures and the heavy baling work would not be here. The wages paid them permitted them to lay off three days a week and still make more than they ordinarily did and on those off days "most of them got soured."

Asked what could be done, if the Legislature could do something to relieve that situation, to regulate saloons or the sale of liquors in the farming communities to ameliorate that condition, the witness said, "Perhaps some regulation of the opening and closing hours of the saloons, particularly over the weekends, would tend to alleviate the condition * * * the curtailing of off-sale liquor."

The witness continued: "Another thing I wanted to point out to your committee, not on the labor situation, particularly, but more on your material situation, is this; that you have a multiplicity of bureaus to encounter whenever you go to get anything done, to get a piece of equipment, to get an allocation of steel or anything like that. In our business we are fortunate enough to be put in the classification of a steel warehouse. We then deal directly with the prime supplier or manufacturer of that commodity, and we go through one agency, I have forgotten which one, to get an allocation and having gotten that allocation nothing can be done by our supplier except on word from the War Production Board that he is permitted to manufacture a certain amount of steel to supply our quota. Now, our quota is very satisfactory, but a quota is no assurance of the supplies being received. The particular supplier with whom we do business happens to be located on the Eastern Seaboard. There is nothing to prevent, as a matter of fact it has been done already, the War Production Board has stated to this supplier to discontinue his manufacture of this item because of his availability to Eastern Seaboard and manufacture some other supplies. I can see why that should be done in case of a war, yes, get the stuff to the Army as fast as they can get it, but there is no counter provision in there to see that the domestic production is maintained. After all, what good is winning the war if you are going to starve."

The witness continued: "Another thing is this: That you have half a dozen agencies making pronouncements on the same thing, which pronouncements are often contradictory. The Federal Department of Agriculture sets up product on goals for the farmers through here and advertising them in their Triple A committees * * * We need that excess production. We are supposed to be getting it. Fine, but at the same time there is so much uncertainty existing in the minds of the farmers who have to do this that they do as Mr. Graham did here today, his men have disappeared and no provision has been made with the draft board to defer the men so he can produce. The program is not integrated."

Asked about the production of alfalfa, he said there would be a decrease of about 20,000 acres, due to uncertainty of production, bad experience with labor last year, and the recent price controls established. A number of alfalfa fields only two years old were ploughed up because of fear of coming labor shortages and manipulation of prices. Flax was being put in because it took less labor to handle than. He mentioned milk production on the down trend; and that he knew of several dairies having gone out of business, the cows sent to the slaughterhouse, because of lack of labor, and the price squeeze.

Discussion was turned to the ceiling price on hay, costs of production, hauling, etc., making the ceiling 87 to 810 below the previous prices, and long distance hauling not taken into consideration on ceiling price; all of which, the witness said, would drive the growers to turn to flax which had a base price, assuring the producers a good return.

The witness continued: "And conversely it is going to deny to Los Angeles, one of the biggest metropolitan areas in the United States, and San Diego, another boom town, it is going to still further aggravate the meat and dairy shortage. I have 15 orders on my desk awaiting delivery in Los Angeles for men who are out of hay. I have seven orders on my desk waiting delivery in San Diego for men who are out of hay and are borrowing from their neighbors, and we just got under the price ceiling here recently. There is no interest in shipping into those areas if we can do better locally without worrying about all the charges and whether we are violating all the OPA requirements."

TESTIMONY OF CHARLES BRAMKAMP, MANAGER, GOLDEN STATE MILK COMPANY, EL CENTRO, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Charles Bramkamp said he was with the Golden State Company since October, 1929. He said that the cow population in Imperial County was around 25,000 head in January-February, 1942, and that there were less now, due to the price for milk and the labor problem, some dairymen having given up about 30 dairies closed in last 12 months. The price of milk products was discussed. He cited the OPA ruling whereby a new customer starting to relieve the shortage, had to take a lower price than an old customer already existing, the difference being 17 cents a pound butterfat. He said he was trying to get it clarified with the OPA at the present time, but pointed out this situation as another example of bureaucratic red tape and what the farmers had to struggle under.

TESTIMONY OF ROY M. BELLWOOD, MANAGER, IMPERIAL GRAIN GROWERS, BRAWLEY, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Roy M. Bellwood was asked if he had anything to add to the testimony already given by others. He said his problems were very much the same. He said his Association decreased the wheat and barley acreage about 6,000 acres, 15 per cent. He told of difficulty in obtaining bags and of transportation problems being revised in hopes of meeting the coming situation.

TESTIMONY OF GEORGE WINRIGHT, FARM ADVISER, EL CENTRO, CALIFORNIA

Mr. George Winright said he had been in Imperial County 14 years. He answered questions about the Land Use Planning Committee set up. He said they had four meetings annually and a subcommittee on agricultural labor was established, made up of farmers. This committee carried on until this fall. When the USDA War Board established on a county level, this committee became the sub-committee of the WLB. The discussion continued through the various changes under new heads.

Chairman Wiser stated the meeting was called at the suggestion of the Governor of California for the purpose of discussing the labor problem to develop State legislation to coordinate the recruiting, transportation, housing, and placement of farm labor, since it became evident that some new agency should take care of the labor needs due to the many changes in the governmental agencies causing lack of continuity and uniformity in approaching the problem.

A report of the preliminary conference held in San Francisco, February 26, 1943, was given outlining suggestions for legislation setting up a farm labor placement agency. Three farm labor bills already introduced in the Legislature were reviewed. It was the belief of the group that, "It is California's first responsibility to do everything within her power to help herself, thus relieving, insofar as possible, the pressure upon an overworked Federal Government."

Witnesses reported dissatisfaction with the operation by the Farm Security Administration in the importation of Mexican nationals. Farmers were urged to go ahead on their own and not hold up plans due to delay in Government organization. Simplicity of operation of a labor program was urged by the witnesses: recognition by Washington officials of the differences in California agriculture compared with that of other States, and the need for retaining the skilled agricultural labor. They also suggested greater effort in coordinating volunteer labor, housing for agricultural workers, discontinuance of pirating workers, and that a head should be appointed to definitely have power to act and act immediately.

The afternoon session took up the prepared chart and bill in an effort to correlate the activities of the many agencies dealing with the farm labor problem and to assist in moving forward on it. The aim was to provide one central place to which farmers could look for farm help.

The proposed bill, entitled "Agricultural Labor Emergency Act," was read. It provided for a State Farm Labor Coordinator appointed by the Governor, and set up provisions to establish regions, as well as to appoint local supervisors, advisory committees for participation of farmers and others familiar with agricultural labor needs, to make rules and regulations, to consider cooperation between the State and Federal agencies, to enter into agreements, and to employ the necessary help toward making available agricultural workers. The bill also provided for funds to carry out the act.

Changes suggested at this meeting were to reduce the broad powers the bill gave to the Governor, and to include in the definition of "agricultural labor" the processing side also, and that assistance be given in securing necessary farm machinery.

Considerable discussion was given to the various problems pertaining to agricultural labor, production of food, and harvesting, and also to the problems involved in setting up an agency to recruit farm labor.

At the suggestion of Senator Hatfield, it was decided to discuss the bill with the Legislative Counsel and to have another meeting of the group before it was to be introduced into the Legislature.

Summarized Testimony of the Hearing Held on February 17, 1944, El Centro, California

Present: Senator Bradford S. Crittenden, Senator George I. Hatfield, Assemblyman Harvey E. Hastain, Assemblyman Lloyd Lowrey, Assemblyman Lee T. Bashore.

The first meeting of 1944 of this fact-finding committee was held in the Imperial Valley to ascertain the agricultural and labor problems in this area.

Mr. W. R. Batley, District Manager in Imperial County since 1926 for the Western Fruit Growers, a vegetable, citrus and deciduous fruit growing and shipping concern with headquarters in Los Angeles, was the first witness called to testify.

Summarized Testimony of W. R. Batley, District Manager, Western Fruit Growers, Imperial County

Mr. Batley stated this concern grew and shipped lettuce, cabbage, carrots, melons, endive, and other vegetable crops and from 1926 to the present time had a minimum of 2,000 and a maximum of 5,000 acres of these crops. This year it has 1,000 acres of vegetables and 1,000 acres of melons.

He claimed an over-production of lettuce and cabbage which his concern was now shipping. He stated that due to the sending out of this country 10,000,000 people consumption of produce is also lowered. He quoted Robert Taylor, head of the Cooperative Fruit and Vegetable Association of Washington, D. C., that "seed sales to victory gardeners was running about 30 per cent ahead of a year ago * * * victory gardens are increasingly important in our wartime food program, * * * in 1942, 15,000,000 victory gardens were planted * * * In 1943, 18,000,000 gardens are asked and there were 20,000,000 * * * produced 8,000,000 tons of food, nearly 40 per cent of all vegetables grown for fresh consumption in the United States * * * some 4,000,000,000 jars of food were canned last year. This great achievement in home food production and preservation did not in the least interfere with the output of commercial growers and canners * * * This year's victory garden goal is 20,000,000 gardens and 10,000,000 tons of food."

Another report Mr. Batley quoted announced a requested increase in vegetable production of 10 per cent above 1943 with special emphasis on those vegetables providing Vitamins A and C.

Mr. Batley quoted another report showing "cabbage accounts for a large part of the increase in production over 1943," and he continued with quotations of other increases in acreage of various vegetables. From another report, he told of the Office of Distribution of WFA sending out a telegram to the various trade associations of food industry and retail, wholesale and terminal market sales outlets as follows: "Administrator Marvin Jones has approved the designation of cabbage as a Victory Food Selection period February 24th through March 4th. During that time cabbage may be featured as Victory Food Selection nationally."

The witness continued that "latest crop estimates indicate that the largest winter crop of green cabbage ever raised in the United States is now going to market. It was estimated to be 85 per cent larger than last year's and 52 per cent larger than the record harvested production of 1942 when more than 97,000 tons remained unharvested because of poor market conditions."

The witness cited other estimates and reports concerning cabbage and beets, also lettuce, to show that over-production was not only apparent in Imperial Valley but nationally. He referred to Los Angeles Times article of February 15, 1943, headed "Cabbages Glut Local Market." He told of Southern California's publicity campaign to popularize various cabbage dishes as a means of moving the surplus and saving the prospective loss to growers. He related similar surplus of potatoes due to a breakdown of the vegetable dehydration program because of refusal of servicemen to eat dehydrated vegetables.

Discussion was given to dehydration of various vegetables and amounts needed.

The witness stated his sales on everything he was shipping to the Army were about 50 per cent less than a year ago. He presented a report on carrot figures.

The price received for the commodity, stated the witness, was what caused over-production. His testimony revealed insufficient lettuce on the Southern California retail markets, yet a low price to the grower, indicating the system of marketing and distribution should be corrected.

Asked how his concern disposed of its produce, the witness said it was sent to the Los Angeles Terminal markets, about 50 per cent being sold on f.o.b. shipping point.

Questioned as to these jobbers manipulating the market by refusing to buy, thus depressing the price, the grower becoming desperate, and then the jobbers buying and marking up the price, the witness said that while he could not swear that was the truth, circumstances did point in many directions that certain manipulation had been accomplished in the marketing of various vegetables.

Considerable discussion was given to the price to the grower, cost of handling, the commission, and ultimate retail price which showed quite a margin, and it was thought that lettuce for instance should sell for around 3½ cents to 4 cents with a legitimate profit for everyone along the line instead of at 8 cents.

The witness acknowledged that prices had not been lowered as soon as they should have been in times of surplus, and from the testimony concerning costs, it became apparent that the Imperial Valley growers were confronted with a decline in the market whether it was due to over-production, lack of marketing facilities, ability to move produce in adverse weather, or other factors.

The witness related that "The market in the late thirties blew up * * * and we plowed up a third of our remaining crops to create a scarcity in order to improve our market conditions * * * but in most cases it didn't do us any appreciable good." He believed control of surplus was at time of planting. He cited conflicting directives: Washington requesting a 10 per cent increase over 1943 in vegetable production and the available shock would be only 80 or 85 per cent of that available in 1942.

The witness told about attending the January 5th and 6th War Board meeting at Berkeley where Chairman Davidson presented a picture of scarcity of materials in connection with vegetable production. His interest he stated was in Directive L 232 concerning where he was going to be able to get more shock to ship the cantaloupe crop from the valley to the market. He said he felt his time was wasted in going to the meeting in that "They absolutely had nothing constructive."

He continued that the Governor had informed this committee that the funds of the Farm Production Council would be exhausted about June 30th and that he (Governor) intended to call for additional appropriations for the continuation of the work of the Farm Production Council. It was deemed advisable to have this Committee ascertain whether or not the farmers are satisfied, if they want the work of this Council continued, if they favored appropriation of additional funds, if they felt additional activities should be included, and related sentiments.

William B. Parker	Director, California Farm Production Council	Berkeley, California

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF ROBERT BEARDSLEY, PRESIDENT, VENTURA COUNTY FARM BUREAU, AND FARMER, VENTURA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Robert Beardsley stated his organization appreciated all the work done by the California Farm Production Council and felt that it had given much assistance in the harvesting of the crop in this county last year. He cited instances of the immediate needs, quick action in securing camp equipment, and young women to help in harvesting the apricot crop without any loss, and that the group stayed on to assist in planting of tomato plants. He estimated the short 1943 crop harvested to have been 60 per cent of last year's, but was worried over the additional assistance needed for 1944 if the crop was normal. He said there was some loss in harvesting the 1942 crop due to lack of help, but got through 1943 all right. Other assistance given by the Farm Production Council was the construction of a camp for 325 Mexican nationals furnished for harvesting walnuts and lima beans. All voluntary help was used to save the walnut crop, for "if it had not been for the additional Mexican nationals we would never have gotten the crop in," stated the witness. He related quite a loss in the 1942 walnut crop due to quality because the crop wasn't picked off the ground when it should have been which was because of lack of labor. He added, "We can truthfully say there was no loss of food crops in Ventura County due to the lack of labor last year," and attributed this to the Farm Production Council assistance which saved many thousands of dollars worth of edible foods. He said, "We are hopeful the California Farm Production Council will continue to operate."

Asked the farmers' opinion regarding daylight saving, the witness replied, "they would like to see it go back to standard time, particularly during the winter season." Reasons, he said, that animals live according to sun-up and sun-down rules, feeding and milking were done certain hours; there was no saving of electricity and power, and it was confusing to the farmer in conforming to it.

The witness said from 2,500 to 3,000 migratory workers are needed in Ventura County every year during harvest seasons which start in August and run through to November. He said the Extension Service Farm Labor offices set up in various districts in this county were of valuable assistance and avoided farm losses last year. In this way labor was kept moving from one finished job to start another without loss of time. He said Ventura County had very good success with the Mexican national labor. One criticism he offered was the desire for more jurisdiction over keeping them from moving or shifting to other agricultural work to take advantage for three or four days of a little more money. He said his group were very desirous of having the Mexican nationals' assistance continued; and he felt "without them the farmers of California would not have been able to harvest essential war food stuffs in 1943."

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF LEONARD M. KEARNS, CHIEF, FOOD PRICE SECTION, OPA, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

The committee sought information on alfalfa seed prices and called Leonard M. Kearns of the Los Angeles OPA office to explain them. He explained that the (9, 23/43) No. 471 regulation was prepared after consultation with the Agricultural Department and the War Food Administration, Lend Lease, and the industries and advisory committee appointed to assist the OPA in writing them. He stated the western representative was Mr. Schoenfeld of the Germain Seed and Plant Co. of Los Angeles. Discussion followed concerning growing areas of alfalfa seed, the 28 cents a pound price set as of July 15th, $1 a hundred pounds for cleaning, $3 processing charge, etc. "The Secretary of Labor has the responsibility to tell the OPA the parity price," the witness explained, "and parity includes the farmer's entire cost to produce."

The chairman asked for an explanation of the conditions in Imperial Valley where alfalfa seed was bought anywhere from 50 cents to $1 above the grower's price and then, as a result of the OPA regulation, they were paying about $7 or $8 more a hundred pounds, and the witness quoted a statement of considerations designing "the regulation to take care of the historical margins at all levels of distribution," and added that from the number of complaints his office had had, he was of the opinion these mark-ups were too high for distributors in this area.

Prices in the various areas in California were discussed. Testimony developed that under the price control, the grower, even though paying for processing and the various items before ready for sale, could not retail his product if he wished, that the only way he could sell it in the market at the market price would be to open up a wholesale headquarters and a retail store.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF JOSEPH BRADFIELD, REPRESENTATIVE OF THE OPA

Mr. Joseph Bradfield continued a discussion on price regulations after the testimony of Leonard M. Kearns, Chief, Food Price Section of the OPA, Los Angeles. He stated when regulations were drafted, an advisory committee meets with industry and the findings are turned over to economists from universities for analysis which is made into a brief. He said much of the information this committee sought on price bases would be in such briefs. When the chairman asked for a copy of the brief, the witness said they were filed in Washington.

Asked where the farmer entered into the deal, the witness replied, "The farmers' representative is the U. S. Department of Agriculture."

The chairman asked: "In other words, the farmer is not represented?"

The witness replied: "I think he is, through the Department of Agriculture."

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF TIM CLEUGH, VEGETABLE GROWER, NORWALK, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Tim Cleugh stated he farmed about 160 acres growing principally rhubarb, cabbage, cauliflower, and turnips.

Asked what information he could give about the Farm Production Council operations he related it originally handled the Mexican Nationals' deal now handled by the WFA. There was now a camp at Artesia formerly an abandoned Army camp barracks brought from North Long Beach, the cost of which was donated by farmers. He said there were not enough men to take care of the farmers' needs, 160 being the most to be had at one time. He said he had seven and as high as 10 and found the majority very good workers and a help to him. He said he desired to see the activities of the Farm Production Council continued, and that the Legislature should appropriate additional funds for the continuance of its operation. Had this area not had the assistance of this organization, "it would have hurt the packing considerably. He said they had some men from Oklahoma and Arkansas but if it hadn't been for the Mexicans they would have lost quite a bit of the crop."

The main reason he had no crop loss in 1942 was that poor growing weather caused a subnormal crop. He said he got his Mexicans through the Extension Service but contacted directly with the camp through Mr. Thornton. The transportation of the Mexicans to the farms from the camp was supplied by the farmers. He agreed there was a harmonious relationship between the Food and Fibre Council and the Extension Service as it now functioned.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF PAUL THORNTON, FARMER, 1637 E. WHITTIER BLVD., WHITTIER, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Paul Thornton said he was a farmer all his life and he had opened up the Agricultural Extension Office in Bellflower July 1st of this year and was operating the office and supplied farmers with labor. He said there had been a "great shortage of labor and because the Farm Production Council was able to step into the picture and provide housing in Artesia and cooperate in bringing in men, we were able to bring in at the peak time I think about 160 men in the camp. And because we had a camp we were able to furnish the McNally Ranch with about 120 Mexican Nationals to save the olive crop. There was no great loss in our district for lack of labor, but there would have been if we hadn't had the Mexicans."

The witness added that there was beyond doubt a definite need to continue the activities of the Farm Production Council and that the farmers of his district would whole-heartedly endorse it. He said that farmers in this area are situated near the Vultee and Douglas Aircraft plants and other concerns of that nature and the farms had to compete with them for local labor which they couldn't do. He said they had "splendid cooperation" from the Farm Production Council. He related the council's bringing in barracks buildings, mess halls, kitchens, toilets, and supplied each man with a bed or cot, and operated the camp, furnished a manager and advised the nationals. The council charged for it but they gave the necessary supervision. The farmers were well pleased, and he agreed that it could be successful in peice time as well to assist in furnishing farm labor where we have the migratory labor problem.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF E. C. KIMBALL, CITRUS GROWER, VENTURA, CALIFORNIA

Mr. E. C. Kimball said he farmed 196 acres growing walnuts, lemons, oranges, and avocados and that he was chairman of the Ventura Farm Labor Committee.

He stated from his observation and experience, "the farmers are very appreciative of the foresight and wisdom that the Legislature evidenced in enacting the Food and Fibre Act under which the California Farm Production Council was established. They were also appreciative of the accomplishment in coordinating the State and Federal agencies dealing with the same problem. He said it has been a stabilizing influence in the agricultural labor situation and helpful to small operators with seasonal peak demands for labor and not able to provide housing, etc."

The witness further stated that the people in his area were very much in favor of a continuation of the activities of this council and would favor additional appropriations by the Legislature.

He said the citrus people were somewhat concerned about the shook situation, but so far had had what they needed.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF HENRY HEPNER, MANAGER, COVINA ORANGE GROWERS ASSOCIATION, COVINA, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Henry Hepner said he was President of the San Gabriel Valley Labor Association comprising nine packing houses, formed for hiring agricultural labor, particularly Mexican nationals. He said the California Farm Production Council established a mobile camp at Puente last fall for the walnut and vegetable growers in the Puente and Covina areas. After the walnut growers got through with the camp the citrus group started to rent the camp from the State.

He said their relations with the Farm Production Bureau had been very good, saved them a lot of money because they furnished the housing and war materials they would otherwise not have been able to get.

He said last year the council provided supervision of men who supervised the school boys doing agricultural work which was successful as could be with school boys, but they early saw they would have to have the Mexicans as they could not entirely depend on voluntary and school labor.

The witness said very definitely it was the sentiment of his association and other citrus packing houses as well "that the Farm Production Council is very vital and necessary. It furnishes labor to vegetable growers that help the whole pool of labor."

Asked how much acreage his association covered, he estimated 8,150 acres of citrus in the San Gabriel Valley. While his association did not handle vegetables, he said the Puente area comprised of at least 5,000 or 6,000 acres. His association had entered into an agreement with the La Puente Valley Walnut Growers Association to cooperate with them in the use of the Mexican nationals at the close of our harvest season.

The witness said they were worried about the shook situation, that they had been using old boxes more than ever before to help the situation. They had a stricter proration of cars of shook than before. Previously they could order all the shook they wanted and the supply companies would get it for them, but now they had to take a car when they could get it. They had to use less paper wraps (80 per cent of last year's usage) on the oranges and they were worried about that because navel oranges do not ship well without wraps, getting scored, turning brown, arriving in a very unattractive appearance.

With regard to daylight saving, the witness said the farmers were not very enthusiastic about it, that the dew on the trees prevented them from going to work according to daylight time and at the end of the day stores were closed which put the packing houses at a disadvantage also. Many of their packers were mothers, housewives who wanted to get home to shop.

The witness said their Mexican help was obtained through the extension service and was working very satisfactorily. He said in 1942 when they were losing their crops through lack of agricultural labor, they had been using voluntary labor, Free French groups, casual labor, schoolboys, service club people, but they didn't have enough and "When the Extension Service took over the Farm Labor Placement program and the Farm Production Council commenced to operate and then the Selective Service Board give us a little more consideration on deferments, our situation improved." It appeared, he said, that the labor program would have to be increased due to boys between 18 and 25 to be drafted.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF J. P. BUTLER, RANCHER, 10500 SANTA
SUSANNA BLVD., CHATSWORTH, CALIFORNIA

J. P. Butler stated he was President of the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau. He testified the daylight saving "has been certainly a bugaboo in the farmers' program of work. The shorter store hours gave no opportunity for the agricultural laborer to get a little shopping done on the way home or get into town unless he quit early to do it. He had a request for a steady ranch hand with the Extension Service for three months with still no takers. He said if it had not been for the Mexican nationals, the citrus packers would not have been able to get the crop in.

He felt there should be a sufficient appropriation to cause as many Mexican nationals to be on the job as there was the past year. He said two years ago without them he personally lost 100 tons of tomatoes; he just couldn't get them packed. The volunteer labor was insufficient and not satisfactory; they meant well, but did not understand picking tomatoes, destroying half as many as they picked in just putting them from the pail into the can.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF ROBERT O. PRICE, CITRUS GROWER, 2370 EUCLID AVENUE, UPLAND, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Robert R. Price testified he had been a citrus grower for 36 years and was chairman of the County Production Labor Committee and also represented the County Farm Bureau. He reiterated the testimony of others before him that he considered it absolutely essential additional funds be provided the Farm Production Council to carry on after June 30th, to save the crops in his county. He said the camp in Chino taken over by the Farm Production Council, holding about 300, furnished labor for that whole section covering general farming and walnuts. It now has 150 Mexican nationals contracted for by the different farmers and some of the citrus growers in the citrus belt. He added, "Without these Mexican nationals it would have been impossible last year to save the citrus crop. They are absolutely essential. We have only a few of the local help employed."

The witness said he thought they would be able to get the navel orange crop harvested with the present supply of Mexicans and the 500 Italian prisoners located at Cucamonga.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF HENRY L. LUCAS, SECRETARY, LUCAS RANCH
COMPANY, 701 WEST NEVADA, ONTARIO, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Henry L. Lucas stated he operated a family farming corporation of 1,190 acres in the Chino Valley, 400 acres of dairy with 450 head of dairy cows, and a fruit ranch at Cucamonga composed of apricots, peaches, walnuts and grapes and citrus. He added he was President of the Southern California Farmers Association, 21 farmers organized to acquire workers for farm work, making contracts with the Federal government for Mexican labor.

He said indirectly they worked with the Farm Production Council, getting considerable information as to how to facilitate the manipulation of labor and to rent cots and other equipment for the Italian prisoners at the Cucamonga Camp. He said the cots were ordered on Thursday afternoon and were there by Saturday morning when the prisoners arrived.

The witness related experience with Mexican nationals contract that "the men got up and went at any time they wanted to. We were supposed to have 400 Mexicans the day before the prisoners came and we got down to 150 and there were no more available." Realizing they were going to be short of help, his organization reopened the question of Italian prisoners and applied through the Extension Service for 400, and after some office to office negotiating in Los Angeles, the matter was referred to the Army which phoned shortly if 500 of them could be handled Saturday morning (January 20th).

Asked if he found the Italian prisoners' work satisfactory, the witness said, "Yes and no." He thought the method of handling them had a great deal to do with it. He said, "They are very interested in the work, fairly high in intelligence, and they want to know why they do things this way and that way, they are very sensitive, which we might readily understand. They have been kicked around, I suppose.

"Most of the prisoners were captured in Africa and some of the boys have told us that even as close as they were to Italy, they have not been able to get back home for three years. All in all they are happy to be here, I think, but there is a lot to worry about. Some of them have families they haven't heard from in three years. It seems to the extent the growers are able to keep the men interested in the work they are doing, and off their personal troubles, they seem to be very satisfactory. They are careful, and try to please, but they don't work very hard."

Asked if they are as good as the Mexican nationals, the witness said: "In some ways, yes; in some ways no. As far as the carefulness of work is concerned they are as good and probably a little better than the average. As far as the amount they accomplish, they are not so good." He said they had no trouble with the prisoners trying to get away or any other difficulty. The prisoners were under Army guard. The prevailing wage was paid directly to the Army and the Army paid the prisoners 10 cents a day whether they work or not, according to the Geneva regulations, and if they worked 80 cents for eight hours; that is in coupons usable at the camp PX.

The witness felt that looking at it over a State-wide point of view, the Farm Production Council should be continued. His interest in it was from the standpoint obtaining Mexican nationals, he said there were doubtless hidden benefits from the Farm Production Council and its moral support gave much encouragement to the farmers in trying to help figure out the labor problems in this area. He related the labor shortage in 1942 and the improvement of the situation in 1943 through less loss of crops. He also related the beneficial assistance the county committee gave in getting together and in coordinating the ideas of the farmers who are by nature independent.

The witness reiterated his plea for a change in the daylight saving hour.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF ROY SEBRING, GROWER, CHINO, CALIFORNIA

Roy Sebring stated he was a farmer and was secretary-treasurer to the Farm Loan Association, also a member of the San Bernardino County Farm Production Labor Committee.

He was asked to give a statement concerning the viewpoint of the growers and farmers in his area with relation to the farm labor situation and the Farm Production Council. He said he had heard no criticism in his district, that the arrangements to harvest the crops had worked out well, and that they thought the committee absolutely essential. He said the Farm Production Council had gotten the labor out where it was needed and gave prompt action. He said this was particularly true when the harvest crisis was reached on walnuts and tomatoes, 300 Mexican Nationals were brought in immediately which saved both crops. This was in contrast to the severe losses in tomatoes especially in 1942 due to lack of help.

The witness added that daylight saving was not looked upon with favor by the farmers.

He definitely favored the good cooperation with the Extension Service in securing quick action on supplying agricultural help.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF MILTON FRATER, WALNUT GROWER, 1705 NORTH TOWNE AVENUE, POMONA, CALIFORNIA

Milton Frater testified he was a walnut grower, having 90 acres, and a member of the Los Angeles Farm Production Council Committee. He related the benefits derived from the Farm Production Council in setting up labor camps, organizing the farmers, assisting in drawing up contracts, and arranging for Mexican Nationals, thus giving unorganized groups of farmers an opportunity for obtaining help. He was in favor of continuing appropriations for the Council to carry on to provide more Mexican Nationals and agricultural laborers. More agricultural laborers could have been used in 1943. The farm production situation was much easier in 1943 over 1942 due to the better conditions in securing labor. The witness said his area had a few Indians from the Arlington reservation but said they were not so good as the Mexican Nationals.

Mr. Frater said he was opposed to the daylight saving time.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF ROY NASH, MANAGER, COMMISSARY DEPARTMENT CITRUS GROWERS, INCORPORATED, ANAHEIM, CALIFORNIA

E. Roy Nash said previous to his coming with the citrus growers, he was connected with the feeding program for Mexicans in the Northern part of the State and he had daily contact with the California Farm Production Council which proved very pleasant and of much assistance, particularly in supplying housing equipment and maintaining several camps in the northern area. He said his contacts with the farmers pointed very favorably toward the Farm Production Council.

The witness stated his large organization was unable to obtain certain merchandise and the only means of obtaining it was through the Farm Production Council Supply.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF RALPH H. TAYLOR, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY, AGRICULTURAL COUNCIL SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA

Ralph Taylor stated he represented 32 different commodity farm organizations with a membership close to 70,000 growers. He said there were tremendous difficulties due to the daylight saving problem, both in winter and in summer, and he had received many complaints, estimating a reduction in working time about 10 per cent. In the winter it is a problem of being able to see in the early hours of the morning and in the summer having to wait until the dew is off and fruit on trees has dried before picking. Parents objected to children on streets or roads in the dark mornings enroute to school in great danger of being killed. It was difficult for farm people to see where there was a saving of power; they felt rather that more was being used because they turned on power earlier to provide heat and light in the early cold hours. He said his contacts in the east indicated the situation is no better there.

The witness stated his organization had already gone on record as opposed to daylight saving time in California.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF CAMILLE A. GARNER, FARMER, AND FIELD CROPS REPRESENTATIVE OF THE CALIFORNIA FARM PRODUCTION COUNCIL.

Garner, reviewed the activities of the Farm Production Council for the last year. He outlined the projects undertaken for the present period and plans beginning January 1, 1944.

The witness said after the war there would be large lots of surplus properties available, and continuance of this agency or formation of some State agency, to negotiate for purchases of such properties would assist agriculture in this State because it would be impossible for the individual farmers to bid on the large lots called for.

Transportation facilities were increased by the Farm Production Council, averting a grievous shortage in certain areas and saving perishable crops. The witness also related the many instances of delving through the red tape in Washington, D. C., and getting the necessary procedures working in time to be of benefit to California farm production. One instance of cooperation received from the USES was during a critical situation which arose in Santa Clara County in the pear and peach canning season when the cannery asked the Governor to suspend the child labor laws to permit employment of minors and attempts were made to canvass the area for volunteer workers. The witness said the USES made a drive through the use of sound trucks to appeal to people on the street to volunteer to completely man the 29 canneries in the operation.

The witness stated that the Farm Production Council desired to assist the individual farmers, whether he was a member of an organization or not, processor, canner, or handler of farm commodities.

He reported the council had received over 3,900 Mexican Nationals and provided the housing of them. It had 33 separate camps, 22 of which were mobile units.

Upon the completion of Mr. Garner's comprehensive report of the expenditures and activities of the California Farm Production Council, the Chairman called for William B. Parker, Director of the Farm Production Council, and A. J. McFadden a member of the council to testify further about the work of the Council.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF GORDON LYONS, MANAGER OF SUGAR BEET GROWERS ASSOCIATION, 145 SOUTH AMERICAN STREET, STOCKTON, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Lyons represented the Sugar Beet Growers Association of California and said that this organization handled its own labor as far as the Mexican nationals were concerned. The same was true of the Asparagus Growers Association and the tomato growers.

He pointed out that even though these organizations did handle their own help, they felt their job was much easier due to the housing and labor pools provided by the Farm Production Council and while these organizations were able to look after their own labor interests fairly well, they didn't know when they might find it quite necessary to call on the council for help. He said the industry favors additional appropriation for continuing the activities of this council.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF S. E. GOODALL, SECRETARY OF THE LOS ANGELES COUNTY FARM BUREAU, 129 WEST SECOND STREET, LOS ANGELES, CALIFORNIA

Mr. Goodall reported that the City of Los Angeles Bureau of Power employees' strike coincident with an electrical storm had taken from service certain circuits in the San Fernando Valley, largely agricultural districts, involving poultrymen and dairies, and hatcheries of 250,000 chick capacity. The eggs became cold and were lost, some 100,000 brooder chicks cold and many were dead. Lack of electric lights caused reduction of about a million eggs within a day or two. He estimated some 2,000 dairy cows going unmilked.

Various State and Federal officials were contacted and this committee promised a meeting to give the matter proper consideration.

The committee went into an executive session and sent a telegram to the Governor of California, the Mayor of Los Angeles, and E. P. Taylor, Business Agent of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Los Angeles, urging immediate action to prevent further impairment of production of essential food in the important war production center on the Pacific Coast.

SUMMARIZED TESTIMONY OF WILLIAM B. PARKER, DIRECTOR, CALIFORNIA FARM PRODUCTION COUNCIL, AND A. J. MCFADDEN, MEMBER OF THE COUNCIL, SACRAMENTO, CALIFORNIA

Mr. McFadden presented the committee with a budget to begin July 1, 1944, to June 30, 1945. He said on the basis of the unknown needs when the council started and the knowledge and experience since its inception, the proposed budget was a much more rational estimate of the money needed.

The witness stated $14,000,000 worth of crops weren't harvested in 1942 while in 1943 none was lost with the State's expenditure of $2,000,000, putting us ahead $12,000,000 on that basis. Federal assistance was received because the State got in and helped itself, thus receiving about $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 more than we did last year.

Mr. Parker stated he had a record made of his testimony before the House Committee Hearing in Washington showing that California tried to help herself and, therefore, we were entitled to certain consideration in this State that might appear out of line with other States.

Mr. McFadden pointed out that, "the projects carried out by the Farm Production Council have had a value which will carry into the future in showing the farmers how they can help themselves—They have gotten away from the idea that you have got to call on Uncle Sam for everything."

Mr. Parker said that California farmers had used over 28,000 boys and girls under 18 years of age on the farms up to October 30, 1943, and they did a much better job this year than they had ever done before, because of paid supervision provided by the council.

Mr. Parker pointed out that, "the overall crop increase requested by the Federal Government for the entire United States is about 43 per cent over 1943. California had a decrease of 7 per cent in 1943 as against 1942, so we will have to come up to about 11 per cent over 1943." He said the labor picture didn't look so good in view of Michigan asking for 18,000 Mexicans more than they had in 1943, Rocky Mountain States requesting 26,000 more, and Washington and Oregon wanting 20,000 more. If the Federal Government increases the farm machinery allotment and the farmers get the crops planted, Mr. Parker felt the Government goal could be met. The harvest problem would, of course, be accentuated to the extent of wanting the number of Mexican laborers increased.

The 85 per cent limitation of shock situation was brought up, and Mr. Parker said the President signed a bill (February 15, 1944), which provides money for importation of timber cutters, and this would provide raw materials such as shock.

The chairman stated the committee intended to hold hearings before the special session in Northern California and wanted to study the reports and estimated budgets submitted and asked Mr. Parker to appear at that time to answer more detailed questions.

Mr. Parker was to submit the proposed budget to the Department of Finance and to the Governor for consideration.

Will Postwar California Be Saddled With "Okies"? From San Francisco News, April 18, 1945

OPPONENTS ARGUE OVER WAGES, LIVING STANDARDS, LABOR MARKET

By Jane Sudekum
(Last of Two Articles)

Will California be overrun with agricultural workers after the war? Will peace bring back the "Okies" with their rattletrap autos, their shack towns, their poverty?

Those are questions many Californians are asking themselves.

That seasonal workers are necessary to California's commercial agriculture is an accepted fact. What their living conditions and wages will be and how many there will be after peace are subject to speculation.

On one side there are men and women who maintain there will be a return of conditions which bred the stampede of the thirties. They predict there will be from six to 10 persons for every job. On the other are those who believe the labor supply will not be overabundant, that wages will stay high, and living standards will go up as a result.

Both Sides Have Points

Both sides have arguments to uphold their stands. But both agree on one thing: The postwar agricultural worker situation in California depends to a great extent on industry—how long it keeps producing at full capacity and what wages it pays.

President Ray Wiser of California Farm Bureau, an organization of farm families, looks through rose-colored glasses to a postwar production period that will see peacetime industry absorbing many war workers and veterans.

"America has a tremendous backlog of buying power," he said.

Many Ranches Labor-shy

Mr. Wiser also points out that many ranches are getting by without sufficient labor, even though California has in the past year been using between 23 and 46 thousand Mexican nationals. After the war, he says, industry will need workers to produce items not being made during wartime and ranchers will need replacements for the Mexicans and for persons who have taken temporary jobs when the War Food Administration has issued appeals for labor to harvest peak crops.

Others point out that California will be developed as a gateway to the Orient; that improved transportation methods will promote sales of perishable foods.

They add that farm conditions which have been improved in wartime will stay that way.

Wages Are Up

Wages are up, they say, and there is not much chance they will go down for at least two years after the war because the Federal Government has agreed to cover prices on basic foods for two years after the President's declaration of peace. The subsidy does not affect many on this State's crops, but the belief is that while the basics' prices are up other food prices will stay on the same level.

Housing conditions in employer furnished quarters, improved to attract workers in wartime, will stay that way, they say.

Ranchers, too, they point out, have been forced by the need to hold laborers the year round to regularize their crops. They have arranged their work schedule into a pattern that keeps a corps of workers on the year-round basis in contrast with one that called for a horde of men for a few weeks.

"But," counter members of the other side, "what is going to hold wages up if there are countless migrant workers fighting for a chance to earn a few cents an hour? What is to keep owners from letting their camps run down when workers will camp on a ditch bank if they can get a few days' work? What is going to keep a rancher from going back to his old schedule if it is more convenient?"

Use Estimates

They bring up estimates made in a study by the California State Reconstruction and Re-employment Commissioner.

"From 666,000 to 835,000 jobs will be lost in California within a year after military demobilization," reports the commission. "Some of them—at least 169,000, possibly 406,000, will be replaced by peacetime jobs. But California's resulting economic problems will be more severe than those of the Nation because California bore a greater proportionate share of the weight of war work, war installations and wartime population increase than any other State."

To these persons looking for jobs may be added service men who have passed through California and decided to settle here.

If California keeps its lure—and the Chamber of Commerce sees no reason why it shouldn't—it may expect to attract many families whose income source has been cut off by new mechanical inventions, say the men and women who see an over abundant supply of labor as the State's fate.

"Tractored Out" Class?

The perfection of the cotton picker and sugar beet topping machine will put perhaps several million people into the "tractored out" class of depression days, they believe.

Both sides agree that the Central Valley development will absorb some of the agricultural workers and that new service industries will provide jobs for some who would otherwise be thrown on the work pile. How many, no one ventures to guess.

California's problem, then, is to find jobs for men and women who otherwise will glut the agricultural worker market.

Exhibit 4*Discussion of Annual Average U. S. Farm Wage Rates from Congressional Record, March 10, 1943, p. 1827

By Senator Millard E. Tydings (Maryland)

Senator Tydings: First of all, what is the trouble? Is it that the military forces are depleting the farms of workers? No; that is not the trouble, for the testimony before various committees shows that 70 per cent of the farm depletion went into industry. I do not blame the farm workers for going into industry, for the following very proper reasons: Mr. President, what do you suppose the average farm weekly wage is in this country? I have before me the figures for every State in the Union, with board and without board, for 1939, 1940, 1941, and 1942. Listen. For the Nation, as a whole, in 1939 the average was $27.39 a month with board, and $35.82 without board.

In 1940 the average was $28.08 a month with board, and $36.68 without board a month.

In 1941 the average was $34.85 a month with board, and $43.64 a month without board.

In 1942 the average was $46.64 a month with board, and $56.07 a month without board.

In other words, the average wage, even in 1942, was less than $2 a day. There is the problem, Senators.

The figures given represent the average for the whole country, but I ask to have incorporated in the Record at this point a table showing the wages, with and without board, for each State in the Union. I believe the wages are highest in California, where a shortage of labor has been occasioned by the transfer to camps of large numbers of Japanese, who formerly worked on the farms, and lowest in some of the Southern States where in some instances wages are but half as much as the average which I read.

They (wages) have been going up each year, but even with the increase the average in 1942 was $56.07 a month, out of which a man must provide food, clothing, and shelter for himself and his family.

Some may think men will be held on the farms in the face of such a disparity between industrial and agricultural wages. If they are, I do not know human nature. The only people left on the farms are those who have remained because the farmers have raised the pay in order to hold them, those who love to farm, those who find that farming is what they like to do best.

Mr. President, who is the farmer about whom I am talking? We are looking to that farmer in our own homes today and tomorrow for breakfast, for dinner and for supper. We are looking to him for the clothes on our backs, whether they be cotton or wool, for the hides which make the shoes on our feet, and for the lumber in all our homes. He is the one who furnishes all these things. He is creating all the wealth on which all war industries and all industrial wages depend, and in the midst of the highest wages in all history he is getting $56.07 a month for contributing the things without which we could not run the Nation's plants, or even an Army, or fight a war.

I know that for a long time farmers were blinded by the fact that they received a yearly check, paid to them from money borrowed by the Government in an effort to even up things. Now that chickens are coming home to roost. That is why the farms have been depleted. The military services have gotten only 30 per cent of the men who have left the farms. The industrial plants have gotten 70 per cent.

Mr. President, the farmer of this Nation, and particularly the farm worker, has been the real forgotten man during the last 20 years. The whole economic system has been set up with no consideration whatever for the farmer. The farmer pays, in direct and indirect taxes, his share of the social-security program, of unemployment insurance, and old-age taxes, but he gets none of it for himself.

The farmer, through his taxes, will pay off the huge debt which this Government is going to drive up perhaps to the $250,000,000,000 mark, to pay all the high wages now being drawn, and to pay all the manufacturers the billions of dollars they receive under contracts. The farmer gets none of it.

Every time the prices of manufactured articles increase, either because of wage increases or through social-security payments which are added to the cost of the articles, the farmer's income is correspondingly depressed.

We can not raise wages on the farm without increasing the cost of food and clothing and shelter. It is not possible. But why should it not be done?

When we increase the cost of manufactured articles, we depress the income of every farmer and farm worker in this country; and that has been taking place for a long time. Politicians travel about the country and tell what stanch friends they are to a particular group, and the great gains which have been made, but they fail to tell the remaining groups that the gains were made quite often at their expense. People have been falling for that boloney, one group being put up on stilts at the expense of another group which is already away down, right on the bottom.

It is not possible to increase the cost of manufactured articles, as a result of increased wages, without passing the increase on to the farmer and to the other consumers of the country. It is not possible to increase the cost of food because of the necessity of raising wages without increasing the cost of living.

Let us put ourselves in the farm worker's position. There he is on the farm, working 10 hours a day, seven days a week, without any overtime pay, with no social security benefits, without the benefit of retirement pay, and he is working for less than $2 a day, when he can go right down the road and get $158 a month, which is the average, work eight hours a day, get time and a half for overtime on Saturday, if the industry operates under the 48-hour week system, and get unemployment insurance and old-age pensions thrown in.

Mr. President, we hear talk about a food famine. There is not going to be any famine. You know it and I know it. There will not be as much food as we have been used to, not so many varieties as we have been accustomed to have. We shall have a great deal more rationing than we have had up to now, but no one is going to starve. There will be enough to keep us going, and if not, we will have to cease some of our shipments abroad, for first we are going to live without starving, and we can be assured that our boys overseas are going to live, too. We will give away only what we can spare by sacrificing greatly. We are not going to give away food to the point where we starve to death. So do not be frightened. Of course, there will be a shortage of food.

Senator Johnson, of Colorado: The O'Mahoney amendment does not say anything about married men, does it?

Senator Tydings: There has been a good deal of loose talk with no facts to support it. For example, it is said that the Tydings amendment did not do any good.

I got in touch with General Hershey several days ago and again yesterday. He said that the first two months the so-called Tydings amendment was on the books, 364,000 regularly employed and irreplaceable farm workers who were called for the draft were deferred. That was in just two months. I was informed only yesterday that more than 1,000,000 regularly employed and irreplaceable farm workers will be deferred under my amendment during 1943.

I will state it. My way would be to pay the men who work on the farms more money, and let the ceilings go up correspondingly, just as we have paid the men in the manufacturing plants more money, and the prices of all manufactured products have gone up and have been increased to the farmers and to all other consumers. I would give equality of justice to men who are producing equally. That is my solution.

I would go down to the OPA, if I could do so, and have it explain to the country that the farmers are entitled to every bit of consideration that the industrial workers are entitled to. We are not going to hold farm workers on the farms—I care not how many laws may be passed—until we rearrange the work and until we pay agricultural skill in line with what is paid to industrial skill. Seventy per cent of the men who have left the farms have gone to industry. The Army has not raided the farms; it has taken only 30 per cent of those who have left. No one will begrudge the farm workers all the wages and all the short hours and other benefits the farms will stand.

However, while industrial workers have gone up in their economic scale, farm workers have remained on the lowest scale. In many cases, the increases received by industrial workers have to some extent decreased the income of the farmers and of the farm workers. Therefore, my solution would be to pay the farm worker a decent wage, to add that wage to the cost of production of agricultural commodities, and to give justice to the farmer whose son is in the armed forces, just as we give justice to others in America whose sons are in the armed forces.

Late Vacations Urged for Harvest Helpers

Exhibit 7

BERKELEY, May 3.—Office people, clerks and other year-round workers are urged to schedule vacations in late August, September and October and to spend their two weeks in the harvest fields helping produce the Nation's food supply.

In an appeal for part-time workers to help harvest California's crops during those three peak months, Warren R. Schoonover, State Supervisor for the Emergency Farm Labor program of the Agricultural Extension Service, said:

"During the past two months and in April the number of seasonal workers has been sufficient to accomplish all the farm tasks necessary. The same condition, we hope, will prevail during the months of May, June and July despite increasing demands. However, as the major seasonal crops come in during August and on into September and October the labor requirements will rise sharply and critical shortages may develop. We will need hundreds of volunteers at that time."

The number of migratory workers who will be available during peak months is uncertain and difficult to predict, Schoonover says. Furthermore, he points out, the number of Mexican Nationals and prisoner of war workers allocated to California by Government agencies is far below the estimated needs.

"Last year the vacation volunteers provided the needed help to harvest many of the late summer and early fall crops and to attain maximum production," Schoonover said. "It is likely that they will be needed in 1945 if food production goals are to be met. Late vacations for these people is a wartime contribution."

Farm Production Council Resolution Regarding Continuation of Mexican Nationals Program

WHEREAS, Mexican National farm workers have proved themselves particularly suited to the various types of farm work in California, including stoop labor; have proved themselves effective and efficient workers; have provided no insurmountable problems in housing, feeding or transportation; have been fairly easy to instruct because of the availability of persons familiar with agriculture who speak both Spanish and English; and work congenially with our regular farm workers; and

WHEREAS, The indicated supply of prisoners of war for farm work will be inadequate to meet California's wartime emergency needs; and

WHEREAS, All indications are that there will be a continuing short farm labor supply in 1945;

WHEREAS, Our continued participation in the war will require a maximum production of essential food and fiber crops in 1945 to adequately provide for our military forces, our allies, and our civilian population; therefore be it

Resolved, That the Farm Production Council does herewith urge that the Congress of the United States make adequate statutory and financial provision for the continuation of the Mexican National farm labor importation program through the calendar year of 1945, without interruption.

Office of Labor

Employment Agreement (Mexican Workers)

THIS EMPLOYMENT AGREEMENT, made this _____ day of _____, 19____ between the War Food Administrator, hereinafter called "Administrator," and _____ of _____ State of _____, hereinafter called "Employer."

WITNESSETH:

WHEREAS, The Administrator and the Employer wish to cooperate in making agricultural workers available to alleviate the present shortage of agricultural labor and to aid in the successful prosecution of the war,

Now, THEREFORE, In the consideration of the undertakings hereinafter stated, the Administrator and the Employer agree as follows:

1. The Administrator shall use his best efforts to recruit and transport agricultural workers for employment by the Employer, from points of origin or intermediate points in the United States or Mexico to the destination point (s) hereinafter stated. Upon completion of such employment, the Administrator shall transport the employed workers to the points of origin or to such intermediate points in the United States as the Administrator shall determine to be proper.

2. The Employer shall employ, upon the terms herein, agricultural workers transported by the Administrator in numbers not greater than, and to the destination points indicated below, in accordance with a delivery schedule to be mutually agreed upon by the Administrator and the Employer, provided, however, that in no event shall delivery of the workers be made later than 30 days prior to the termination date of the "period of employment" as set forth in paragraph "a" below.

Number of Workers-----, to be delivered to-----
 Number of Workers-----, to be delivered to-----

a. Each worker shall be employed, exclusively by the Employer and as an agricultural worker, for at least seventy-five per cent (75%) of the possible workdays (each day in the week except Sunday to be considered a possible workday), from and including the day following the date of the arrival of such workers at the destination point to and including -----, 19-----, and for such further time as the Employer and the Administrator may mutually agree, such entire time being hereinafter called the "period of employment."

b. The Employer shall be required to furnish such employment to a Worker hereunder only so long as the Worker is willing and able to work under the supervision and direction of the Employer. He shall not require the Worker to work on Sundays.

c. The Individual Work Agreement between the Administrator and each Worker provides that for such time as the Worker is unemployed under a period equal to seventy-five per cent (75%) of the period (exclusive of Sundays) for which he has been contracted, he shall receive a subsistence allowance at the rate of $3.00 per day. Accordingly, if the Employer does not furnish employment to each Worker for at least seventy-five per cent (75%) of the possible workdays as provided in paragraph 2a and paragraph 2b of this Agreement, the Employer shall pay to the Administrator upon demand, after termination of the employment under each Worker's Individual Work Agreement, the Employer's prorata share as determined by the Administrator of such subsistence allowance.

d. For each calendar day (exclusive of Sundays) on which the Worker is willing and physically able to work and is not provided employment in excess of four hours, the Employer shall at his expense, provide subsistence to the Worker.

e. A workday shall contain not less than eight hours nor more than twelve hours; provided, however, that to determine the amount of employment under paragraph 2 of this agreement, hours of work less than eight done on any day except Sunday may be added to hours of work less than eight done on any other day except Sunday, and for such purpose each eight hours of work shall be counted as a workday worked.

f. Work shall be paid for in lawful money of the United States Government at the end of each week of work, or at the end of the customary payroll period if these periods do not exceed semi-monthly intervals, at not less than the prevailing piecework or hourly wage rates for similar work under the same conditions and within the particular area of employment; provided, however, that the Administrator reserves the right to terminate the period of employment of, and to remove any worker whether he is employed at hourly rates, piece-work rates or other rates who does not average wages of at least 30¢ per hour worked in any five successive days of actual employment. Unless the Employer shall inform the Administrator within two days thereafter that such right of removal exists, and requests that the Administrator remove such worker, the Employer shall pay the Worker the agreed wages or the prevailing wages, whichever shall be the greater, but in no event less than 30¢ per hour worked in such five days. The prevailing wages may be determined in such manner as the Administrator may direct.

g. The Employer shall pay all costs of transportation of the Workers (and the members of their families transported with them by the Administrator to the above-specified point (s) of destination) between said destination point (s) and the place or places at which the Workers are to perform their work, and return to said destination point (s), together with all costs of transportation of the Workers between the places where they are housed and the places where they work.

h. No deduction from wages shall be made for commissions, fees, or any other purpose (except as may be required by law).

i. The Employer shall pay to the Administrator in trust for each such worker who has been transported by the Administrator from Mexico for employment in the United States, ten (10%) percent of his wages, which portion of his wages such worker will have assigned to the Administrator in trust to be held or controlled and disposed of by the Administrator under the terms of its agreement with the worker. This payment shall be made at the request of the Administrator to the Wells Fargo Bank and Union Trust Company of San Francisco for the account of the Bank of Mexico, S. A., and in no event more than 10 days after the termination of the period of employment of the Worker. The Employer shall transmit to the Administrator checks covering the payment, together with payroll lists. The Administrator shall make the official audit and transmit such checks to the bank for deposit.

j. The Workers shall be entitled to the benefit and protection of all applicable child labor, and other laws and regulations of the Government of the United States and of the State or States in which the work is performed.

k. The Workers shall not be required to purchase articles or services for consumption of use by them or their families at any source not of their choice.

l. The Workers shall be entitled to freedom from discrimination in employment because of race, creed, color, or national origin, in accordance with the provisions of Executive Order No. 8802 of the President of the United States, dated June 25, 1941.

m. The Employer shall provide without charge suitable lodgings for the Workers and their families during the period of employment, including making available to them without charge such shelter facilities as are owned by the Employer and are not otherwise occupied within the period of employment. The Administrator shall inspect the lodgings provided, and his determination as to suitability shall be final.

n. The workers shall have the right to elect from their group their own representatives to negotiate with the Employer.

o. There shall be no strikes, lockouts, or stoppages of work during the period of employment. All disputes between the Workers and Employer shall be determined by mediation according to procedure prescribed by the Administrator.

3. The Administrator shall determine from time to time, and his determination shall be conclusive, whether the Employer has paid all sums to be paid by him hereunder, and shall have the right to pay to the persons he determines to be entitled thereto, all or any part of any such sums which he determines have not been paid, in which case the Employer shall repay to the Administrator, upon demand by him, all sums so paid, together with interest thereupon at the rate of six per cent (6%) per annum from the date or dates of such payments by the Administrator.

4. Workers and members of their family 18 years of age and over may work for the Employer only after entering into work agreements with the Administrator. Members of a Worker's family who are under 14 years of age shall not be employed but older members under 18 years of age may be employed (subject to school and labor laws), at prevailing piece or hourly wages for adults, provided the Employer previously has entered into an agreement for such services in the presence of a representative of the Administrator and with the consent of the appropriate Mexican consul, the Worker and the minor.

5. The Employer shall keep and permit examination of such records of employment, wages and subsistence, furnish such reports thereon, and employ such forms therefor, as the Administrator may require.

6. If the Administrator determines that the Employer has violated any of the terms or undertakings of this Agreement, or is not utilizing the workers fully and efficiently and in accordance with this Agreement, he may, without waiving any other remedy or course of action, deprive the Employer of the further services of any or all of the workers under this Agreement, thus terminating the period of employment.

7. All rights, privileges and powers conferred herein upon the Administrator may be exercised by him or his duly authorized representative.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, the Administrator and the Employer have executed this Agreement as of the date first above written.

MAJOR GENERAL LEWIS B. HERSHEY,
DIRECTOR SELECTIVE SERVICE SYSTEM
WASHINGTON, D. C.

March 24, 1945

Considerable dissatisfaction in many parts of the State over induction of agricultural workers necessary to the production of essential foods. This brought about largely through lack of definite policy of Selective Service. Reliably informed proportion of induction of agricultural workers in California much greater than in other states. Urge investigation of situation and that clarifying instructions be sent at once to State office of Selective Service and to local boards in California so that essential crops may be produced.

NATIONAL HEADQUARTERS, SELECTIVE SERVICE

Washington 25, D. C.
March 28, 1945MR. RAY B. WISER
PRESIDENT, CALIFORNIA FARM BUREAU FEDERATION
BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA

DEAR MR. WISER: Receipt is acknowledged of your telegram of March 24, 1945, expressing dissatisfaction over the induction of agricultural workers.

Registrants in agriculture are classified under the Tydings Amendment which provides for the deferment of every such registrant who is considered to be necessary to and regularly engaged in an agricultural occupation or endeavor essential to the war effort and for whom a satisfactory replacement is unobtainable. The agencies of the Selective Service System have been instructed to consider for induction only those registrants in agriculture who do not qualify for deferment under the above provisions of the Tydings Amendment.

Every registrant in agriculture has the right to appeal his case if he believes that he has been classified erroneously. The registrant, his claimed dependents or any person who has filed written evidence of his occupational necessity may appeal to the board of appeal, and in certain instances to the President, by filing written notice with the local board within ten days after the mailing of the Notice of Classification.

S. G. TINSLEY GARNETT, Lt. Colonel, Signal Corps, Manpower Division

LABOR — No. 105

Re: Review of Selective Service Appeal Cases in Agriculture

Recent experience has again demonstrated that the best results in deferment of agricultural workers have been secured when the County War Board and the Selective Service Local Board work closely together; best not only in number of registrants deferred, but in the quality of such deferments since Selective Service is also interested in seeing that the best qualified men are deferred. In other words, deferments are obtained at the county level.

Some County War Boards have lately worked out cooperative arrangements where none existed before. In cases where cooperative relationships have been in effect for months and even years, appeals or requests for assistance in securing deferment are a rarity! For emphasis we repeat; if your County War Board wants necessary agricultural registrants deferred then work continually with your Local Selective Service Boards. (Incidentally, there is more to working with a draft board than just "working them over" when they don't do exactly what you want.) No matter what success or lack of it you may have had in the past if the War Board wants good cases deferred it will develop a close working relationship with the Local Draft Boards.

Henceforth it will be the policy of the State War Board to return appeal cases or requests for intervention to County War Boards unless new, substantial evidence not previously considered is submitted supported by independent investigation by a County War Board member.

This policy has been determined to be necessary following the information that State Selective Service Headquarters is reviewing in Sacramento each case of an agricultural registrant taken to appeal, regardless of whether the registrant is sustained in I-A or deferred in II-C by the Appeal Board. Each case file on appeal is now routed back to the Local Board by way of Selective Service Headquarters. Of late the only cases in which the State Director has intervened following Appeal Board determination are those in which have occurred denials of procedural rights by the Local Board. These have been few. When both Local Board and Appeal Board have agreed in their judgment, and procedural rights (both of the County War Board and the registrant) have not been violated, the State Director has consistently rejected requests for reconsideration.

New evidence is needed particularly on any of the following items that apply:

- (1) If the case is a father and son deal why is the son necessary? In Selective Service's eyes father and son deals are hard to justify.

- (2) Give complete details of all other men who are working on the farm and reasons why none of them can do the work now handled by the registrant.
- (3) What is the work history of the registrant and why is he necessary to this job?
- (4) What efforts have been made to get a replacement? This should not be a general statement such as "The shortage of milkers."

Although all this may sound unnecessary, the County War Board should realize that generally the best cases have already been put into Class II-C and action is being asked for registrants who have already been classed I-A by both Local and Appeal Boards. A good story is needed to overcome such handicaps.

The State War Board is willing to assist County War Boards get justified deferments but there is no use going to Selective Service Headquarters with only the same information they have already considered and passed on. We have no special persuasive powers with which to induce them to change their minds. Also, our influence in asking for intervention in well supported cases is weakened when we try on others; hence, this advice to you that only good cases supported by new evidence based on a personal investigation by a War Board member will even be attempted.

California USDA War Board

Amendment to the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940

(From Congressional Record, April 18, 1945, Page 3549)

That Section 5 (k) of the Selective Training and Service Act of 1940, as amended, is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"In carrying out the provisions of this subsection, the selective-service local board in classifying the registrant shall base its findings solely and exclusively on whether the registrant is necessary to and regularly engaged in an agricultural occupation or endeavor essential to the war effort and whether a satisfactory replacement can be obtained, without reference to the relative essentiality of the registrant to an agricultural occupation or endeavor as compared with any other occupation, service, or endeavor; and the foregoing provision of this sentence shall apply upon any appeal or review of a decision made thereunder by a selective service local board. Such deferment shall be made by said board without consideration of any other circumstance or condition whatsoever; and during the period of such deferment for such purpose, no other classification, of said registrant, shall be made by said board: Provided, that no registrant who is qualified to serve in the armed forces shall be deprived thereby of the right to volunteer for such service."

The amendment was agreed to.

The amendment was ordered to be engrossed, and the joint resolution to be read a third time.

The joint resolution was read the third time and passed.

The following page is from the Sacramento Bee, May 3, 1945, stating President Truman vetoed the bill liberalizing draft deferments for farm workers.

Exhibit 13

Truman Vetoes Farm Worker Deferment Bill, Is Sustained

(From Sacramento Bee 5/3/45)

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(AP)—President Truman won his first tussle with Congress today when the house emphatically sustained his veto of legislation liberalizing draft deferments for farm workers. The roll call vote was 185 for overriding and 177 against. Two-thirds, or 241 votes, were necessary to override.

Truman criticised the bill as discriminatory in putting "the agricultural group * * * on a plane above both industrial occupation and military service."

Republicans voted almost to a man to override, but were unable to muster enough Democratic aid to give them a two-thirds majority.

Supporters of the legislation had won a preliminary test.

They turned back, by a record vote of 194 to 168, a motion to send the legislation back to the military committee, which would have had the effect of pigeonholing it at least temporarily.

It was Truman's first tussle with congress since he became President April 12th.

OBLIGATION TO SERVE

"In time of war it is the paramount obligation of every citizen to serve his country to the best of his ability," the President said in his veto message to the house.

The President said he did not believe Congress really intended, in passing the Selective Service Act, that agricultural workers "should be given blanket deferment as a group."

He added he thought Congress had not intended it to be the national policy that agricultural employment "was more essential than any other type of employment, including service in the armed forces of the United States in the protection of our country."

The vetoed measure would have revised the Tydings amendment to fix a procedure for deferment of agriculture and kindred occupations according to work actually performed.

AGAINST GROUP PRIVILEGES

Asserting that in his opinion, "no group should have any special privileges," the president declared:

"Enactment of such a law would not only be an injustice to the millions already inducted into our armed forces and those yet to be inducted. It would do violence to the basic principle embodied in Section 5 (E) (1) of the Selective Training and Service Act which prohibits deferment by occupation groups or groups of individuals, a principle which was incorporated into the present law because of the deferment scandals of the last war, particularly in shipyards.

"The resolution would also limit the authority now vested in the President by Section 5 (1) to make final determination of all questions of exemption or deferment under the act, and would deprive him of the right to determine the relative essentiality of the needs of agriculture and the armed forces."

BLUEPRINTS PROCEDURE

The vetoed amendment grew out of congressional dissatisfaction with draft board administration of the Tydings Act which blueprints procedure to be followed by local draft boards in considering cases of farm workers. It provides that a man shall not be inducted if he is regularly engaged in an essential agricultural job, and a suitable replacement can not be found.

The amendment by Representative Flannagan, Democrat of Virginia, went a step further by expressly ordering the deferment of such men without regard to the relative essentiality of farm workers or non-farm workers in any area.

It directed they be deferred "without consideration of any other circumstance or condition whatsoever."

DEFERMENTS ARE GRANTED

War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt announced today that certifications have been issued for selective service deferment of 5,500 more key workers 18 through 29 years of age.

This brings the total to about 353,000, or approximately 50 per cent of the industrial workers in that age span.

The certifications were distributed as follows:

Department of Agriculture, 1,000 deferments to take care of small employers engaged in food processing; Petroleum Administration for War, 2,000, and the Office of Defense Transportation, 2,500.

The authorizations were granted by the government's interagency committee, which announced it had rejected ODT's request for a blanket deferment of all transportation workers. Deferment for a high percentage of these workers had been approved previously.

The interagency committee is made up of representatives of selective service, the War and Navy departments, the War Production Board and War Manpower Commission.

Surplus Property Disposal

Editorial in New York Times March 26, 1945

(Printed in the April 17, 1945, issue of Congressional Record Page A 1896-7 at the request of Hon. Daniel A. Reed of New York)

Estimates of the volume of surplus supplies when the war ends have exceeded $100,000,000,000. The magnitude of these supplies is so enormous that there are bound to be serious repercussions upon our economy if we do not have a carefully formulated program of disposal. While greater progress has been made in this direction than during the First World War, we still seem to be only in the preliminary stages of policy formulation and organization. In this connection the findings and recommendations of the Mead Committee concerning developments to date must be given careful consideration.

Among the findings were these: The Surplus Property Board has formulated no general policies. The "administrative organization for surplus disposal has been extremely confused." Sales of these supplies should be given more "immediate and wide publicity" than in the past. The operations of the Surplus Property Board have been handicapped because of inadequate funds. Surpluses have not been declared promptly, and where they have been declared have not always been promptly sold. For example, only about 15 per cent of the goods declared to be surplus had been sold up to February. The armed forces have not laid out the procedures to be followed when the European War is ended, or determined which items shall be declared surplus and which they expect to use in the Pacific. Lack of coordination is indicated by the fact that some items have been declared to be surplus in some plants, while shortages of the same items prevail in other war plants. Finally, the committee reported that unless immediate action is taken to correct the present inadequacies, the result might be "as chaotic a situation as we had at the end of the last World War."

These findings indicate the need for a prompt overhauling of surplus disposal policy. It is now about six months since Congress enacted legislation creating the Surplus Property Board. While this legislation is inadequate in some respects, it does furnish the basis for prompter action than has thus far developed. The committee is justified in its criticism that the formulation of general policies is "long overdue." It will be highly unfortunate if we should find ourselves only partly prepared to handle the problem of surplus disposal despite all the attention that has been focused upon it. In this field, as in many other phases of our postwar policy, the sands of time are running out rapidly without sufficient progress being made.

Exhibit 15*California Farm Production Council

To: California Farm Production Council; Frank M. Shay, Chairman

From: George Wilson and W. L. Smith

Subject: Report of Surplus Property Committee

Date: October 4, 1944

Pursuant to council direction at its last regular meeting, the committee appointed by the chairman, working with members of the staff, has conducted a study to determine in what way or ways the council can participate in the disposal of surplus war goods.

A conference was held October 2d, with representatives of the following state-wide organizations in attendance: Farm Bureau, Agricultural Adjustment Administration, State Chamber of Commerce, and Extension Service. A thorough discussion was held on the subject, including a rather full report by Mr. V. E. Haslam of AAA, outlining that department's procedure for the disposal of surplus army trucks, tractors, and farm machinery.

On October 3d, the council committee, Mr. Frank Shay and four members of the council's staff, attended a meeting of the Surplus Property Subcommittee of the State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission held at San Francisco and conducted by Mr. Lyman Lantz. The principal speaker (Mr. Frank Bain, Executive Secretary of the Council of State Government), explained in detail the Colmer Bill which provides for the disposition of surplus Federal property. At the conclusion of the morning's discussion, the Surplus Property Subcommittee by formal action reaffirmed its former position of requesting the Farm Production Council to develop immediately ways and means for wide distribution of surplus Federal property to farmers of California.

Your committee also met with Mr. Bonnett, Regional Deputy Director of United States Treasury, Procurement Division, and Mr. F. G. Moyer, Chief of the Property Utilization Division, and discussed the possible ways the council might cooperate with the Treasury in the disposal of property. Mr. Bonnett pointed out that as of this date there was little property of interest to farmers but that shortly large quantities would be available. Mr. Moyer further stated that they would welcome the assistance of the council and, in fact, would gladly work with a council representative and develop a procedure whereby agriculture would benefit from the cooperation of the two agencies.

Your committee's findings and recommendations are embodied in the attached resolution which the committee respectfully submits.

WHEREAS, Great amounts of surplus Federal property will shortly be available to the general public; and

WHEREAS, Farmers of the State of California have need for many items of said surplus property; and

WHEREAS, Federal legislation provides for the disposition of said surplus property on a priority basis; and

WHEREAS, State government, under existing Federal legislation, is allocated second priority for the acquisition of said surplus property; and

WHEREAS, The State Reconstruction and Reemployment Commission has requested the California Farm Production Council to assist in the wide distribution of said surplus property; and

WHEREAS, Various farm organizations and individual farmers have expressed the desire for the council to assist and participate in the wide distribution of said surplus property; and

WHEREAS, It is evident that a State-wide organized effort is needed to distribute quickly said surplus property; now, therefore, be it

Resolved. That the California Farm Production Council shall undertake the project of assisting in every way possible the authorized Federal agencies in the development of plans for wide distribution of Federal surplus property to California agriculture; be it further

Resolved. That the council shall assist in the distribution of said surplus property to agriculture as a service agency and not as a purchaser or seller of said property; be it further

Resolved. That the director be authorized to use the facilities of the council to exhibit samples of available property, receive and transmit orders for said property and perform such other functions as may be necessary in connection with the foregoing resolution.

News Release from Governor of Farm Credit Administration

Release Date: March 27, 1945

"Food production in 1945 will be more important than in any year since the war began," said I. W. Duggan, Governor of the Farm Credit Administration, "but farmers will rise to the challenge." Governor Duggan is here from Kansas City to attend the regular monthly meeting of the Berkeley Farm Credit Board.

"There will be a market at sustained prices this year for every ounce of food farmers can produce," he continued. "Farmers are keeping their weather eye to postwar problems, though primarily concerned with the immediate task of food production." Pointing to the fact that a lot of what now looks like profit will have to be spent after the war to replace worn-out equipment, make repairs and rebuild fertility of the soils, the Farm Credit governor urged farmers to "salt" money away in war bonds, "earmarked" for specific postwar uses. One of these uses, he said, may be to help shift over into more diversified crops or away from some of the war crops that farmers have been producing. "Agriculture faces much greater reconversion problems than do industry and labor and aside from a short period of foreign demand from war-ridden countries for semirelief, there is no great backlog of orders for agricultural products," he said.

Repayments of mortgage debts have reduced the annual interest bill of farmers and ranchers in California, Nevada, Arizona and Utah, by more than $3,000,000 since 1940, Duggan emphasized. The FCA official also pointed out that land prices in the last few years for the whole United States were up nearly 50 per cent on the average compared with the 1925-39 level. In some areas percentage increase is much greater. "Farmers and ranchers should 'Stop, Look and Listen' before going into debt to buy land at the price for which it is now selling in most areas," Duggan declared. "Too many people are thinking of land values in terms of present income instead of normal value. Experience has shown that it is farm income over a period of years which really counts in determining the value of land."

Report on Investigation of Manpower by Subcommittee on Appropriations, United States Senate

(From Congressional Record 3/5/43)

By Hon. Theodore Francis Green of Rhode Island

Agriculture Presents the Most Difficult and Critical Manpower Problem But the Army Is the Last Place, Not the First Place, to Look for Its Solution

The most critical manpower problem and the most difficult one to solve is that of providing the necessary farm workers to produce the crops necessary to feed our own armed forces and civilian population and still meet our foreign commitments. It has been charged that the Army, in determining its strength for 1943, ignored the needs of agriculture for manpower to such an extent that enough food will not be produced to go around. The evidence presented here shows that the Army has not ignored agriculture in the war effort. On the contrary, it shows that the proponents of a smaller Army are ignoring the unpleasant but vital fact that total war, by its very nature, places a most severe strain on manpower and agriculture as well as on all the other resources of the country in order to support armed forces of sufficient strength to crush the armed forces of enemies mobilized for total war. It shows that to cut the Army as a first resort to ease that strain is to admit the inability of the country to wage the total war she has entered. This is, in short, to admit defeat before we have begun the battle. This is unconscionable. Every other means of meeting this critical and difficult problem must be exhausted first. All the evidence clearly shows that this has not been done.

Manpower and Food Must Be Mobilized for Total War on a Scale Comparable to That of Our Enemies' and Allies' Efforts

It is a noncontroversial fact that we are still living in this country on a high peacetime standard with regard to everything, and particularly food. In fact, the standard of food for the civilian population is higher than is has ever been before due to the ability of the worker to purchase more and better food than ever before.

We are engaged in a life and death struggle with powerful and brutal nations who have fully mobilized all resources of manpower, food, and other materials for total war. There does not appear to be as full a realization of these facts in this Country with regard to food and manpower as there is with regard to critical materials. We have established rigid controls on nonessential use and on allocations of materials. But, up to now, we have not yet begun to do these things with regard to the vital war resources of food and manpower on any scale comparable to that of our enemies nor even to that of our allies.

1943 Food Program Can be Met If Food and Farm Labor are Properly Distributed

As a matter of fact, evidence presented here has demonstrated that at the present time we have ample food if it is properly distributed. Very little consideration has been given to the fact that increases in our armed forces substantially reduce the requirements of the civil population. However, we can get along with a great deal less food, both in and out of the armed forces, especially if we ration ourselves to the extent that even the English have, to say nothing of the Germans and Russians. It has been reported that English children raised under the ration system are more healthy than before rationing. The same thing is true of the health of the English worker and his efficiency. This is due to the fact that the ration is a better balanced diet than that which they were accustomed to. I am sure that the health of the people of this country would be much better if they ate a better balanced diet, and that this can be produced in adequate quantities.

It is true that the agricultural program for 1943 requires an increase in the production of certain crops over that of 1942. It is not true that a shortage of farm workers, due primarily to the expansion of the armed forces, will necessarily prevent this program from being met. Nor is it true that a reduction in the number of men to be inducted into the Army during 1943 is the way to solve the problem. On the contrary, the January 13th Labor Report of the Department of Agriculture shows that there were more than 8,170,000 workers on farms as of December 31, 1942. This is only 100,000 less than were on the farms December 31, 1941; yet the armed forces were expanded by almost 5,000,000 during 1942. Total farm production in 1942 exceeded that for 1941 by 12 per cent. A recent survey of the Department of Agriculture disclosed that two-thirds of all farmers expect to meet and excel their 1942 production, despite the tightening labor situation. There have been many reports of a scarcity of skilled help for dairy and poultry farms, but total milk production during January, 1943, surpassed the record established for the same month last year. Egg production during January was also substantially higher than a year ago.

Principal Drain on Agricultural Labor is Industry, Not Army

The principal cause of reduction in the number of farm workers is the attraction of high-paid employment in war industry where common labor receives pay varying from 65 cents per hour to $1.25 per hour, and further, time and a half for overtime and in a few cases double time for overtime. This work is in cities where living and working conditions are better. These jobs are most attractive to farm laborers who are paid as low as $1.05 a day with board or $1.35 a day without board.

Loss of manpower by the farms to the military services is secondary. To reduce the number of workers leaving the farms to enter the armed forces, Congress passed an amendment to the Selective Service Act (the Tydings amendment) which provides for deferment of workers on productive farms. This amendment has reduced the number of farm workers being inducted into the military services but it has not stopped the drift of farm labor to high paid industrial jobs. The War Manpower Commission, by an order, froze farm labor employed on dairy farms, poultry farms, and cattle-feeding farms. This measure has been ineffective due to a lack of sanctions to enforce it. Far more men left the farms to go into industry than to join the armed forces. During the period of September, 1941, to September, 1942, 921,000 workers left the farms to enter industry, while only 694,000 were drafted or volunteered for military services. Therefore, reduction in the size of the military force will not solve the farm labor problem. As a matter of fact, it would have little effect because farm workers on productive farms are already deferred from military service and a law which would but prohibit the military services from taking farm labor could do little more.

The problem of farm labor is a serious one and it must be solved but the reduction of the Army is not the way to solve it.

Solution is to Keep Essential Farm Labor on Productive Farms

The most important and most necessary step to stop the flow of farm workers to high paid industrial jobs is one which will hold the existing supply of farm workers on essential farm jobs. There seems no way of doing this except by some law such as in effect in England and Canada.

One-third of Country's Farms Produce 84 Per Cent of All Crops

Another step is that farmers operating subsistence or submarginal farms could be moved to productive farms and the small subsistence farms be cultivated by the farm laborer's family, or several such farms could be cultivated by a single farmer and his family. One-third of the farms of this Country produce only 3 per cent of the total crops of the country. On the other hand, one-third of the farms of the Nation produce 84 per cent of the farm crops of the Nation. Obviously the employment of the labor on some of our farms is used most ineffectively and in a manner not consistent with the demands of war for the most efficient productivity of all resources of men and materials.

Many Other Steps Should Be Taken Which Will Solve Problem Without Reducing Army

Another step that can be taken is the immediate importation of Puerto Rican labor for farm work for the duration of the war. There are several hundred thousand Puerto Ricans unemployed and anxious to work at the present time. Mexican farm workers should be brought into the country in far larger numbers than the Department of Agriculture and the War Manpower Commission imported last year.

Another step that can be taken is the utilization of the Japanese in the concentration camps of the War Relocation Authority. Other aliens in internment camps and prisoners of war, who will be coming into this country in ever-increasing numbers, should be utilized as farm labor insofar as practicable.

Another step is a national publicity campaign to stimulate the return to the farms of farm laborers now employed in industrial plants.

Another step is an intensive recruiting campaign among workers in banks, real-estate offices, insurance offices, stores, school children, school teachers, and women not in the labor force, in small towns for work on the farms during the planting and harvesting season. This program is now being carried out by the Department of Agriculture and the War Manpower Commission.

Another step is intensification of the training program of the Department of Agriculture, augmented and assisted by agricultural training programs under the vocational educational authority of the States. This training program is necessary to increase the efficiency of our farm labor.

During the last World War a great deal of the food was raised by small victory gardens. An intensive campaign to promote the development of victory gardens and poultry raising in the back yards throughout the Nation would materially increase our food supply. Housewives and school children could tend these gardens and tend the poultry with no inroads whatsoever on the manpower supply of the country.

A greater utilization of the over 6,000,000 women living on farms but not included in the farm working force, would also help to solve the farm-labor problem during the harvest season.

Another step is providing sufficient labor-saving farm machinery by pooling such machinery in counties in order to secure maximum use. Where possible that use should be on a 24-hour basis, 7-day week. Adequate spare parts for farm machinery should be assured by the War Production Board.

These Steps Solve the Problem Without Reducing the Army --As a Last Resort Troops Can Harvest Crops in Emergencies.

All these steps should be taken before cutting down the size of the Army which the joint chiefs of staff have decided are essential to their plans for defeating the enemy as early as possible. These steps are all practical and will solve the farm-labor supply for the calendar year 1943. They make possible the labor necessary to meet the food program as now set up by the Department of Agriculture.

They are no more than the dictates of modern war require and less than our enemies and many of our allies are already doing. They require no cut in the size of the Army.

The War Department has presented a plan whereby Army troops could be used to help harvest crops in emergencies even though this would interfere with their Army training. Under this plan these troops would be used as military units so that they can be adequately housed, fed, and disciplined. This does not mean that the troops of such a unit must all work on a single large farm so that small farmers could not be helped. The individual members of the military unit can work on all the farms surrounding the location of the camp of the unit.

The Army, in determining its size for 1943, has very evidently given long and serious consideration to the needs of manpower to produce the necessary munitions of war and food necessary for all our commitments, as well as to civilian production of items necessary for the health and comfort of our people. The figures presented in support of the plant of the combined chiefs of staff clearly prove that we have ample manpower in this country to provide armed forces necessary to win the war as quickly as possible, to provide the workers necessary for essential industries, and for the protection of the Department of Agriculture's food program. However, it is clearly apparent that manpower must be allocated and employed efficiently if we are to meet all these requirements. This will require an efficient mobilization of all the country's resources, including agricultural manpower. Failure to do so will jeopardize the winning of the war.

Essential Requisites for Food Production

By Albert S. Goss, Master, National Grange, February 20, 1943

(At the request of Hon. George D. Aiken of Vermont, this speech was printed in the Congressional Record March 5, 1943)

Since the dawn of history the greatest problem of mankind has been food and clothing. First, we must eat. We of the present generation of Americans have never appreciated what this means. Living in the most productive Nation on earth in the age of greatest abundance, we have come to take an ample food supply for granted. Even in this era of abundance, we have been living close to the margin of insufficiency. In fact, during our days of prosperity a large part of our population was not well fed. This is attested by the fact that when our income increased some 15 or 20 billions in 1941 we bought 11 per cent more food than during the five years previously (1935-39). Incidentally we used less in 1942 because we couldn't get it, and now we are brought face to face with the problem of food for the first time in the lives of most of us.

For nearly two years we have been trying to point out the dangers of a food shortage and what must be done to prevent it. For a year over this radio station and through every means at our command, we have been warning of the dangers ahead if we continued our shortsighted farm- and price-control policies, but for the most part our warnings have gone unheeded, or we have been called alarmists, profiteers or pettifoggers, and we have gone blindly ahead pursuing the policies which are chiefly responsible for our shortages.

Now with rationing, black markets, and real shortages at our door, we seem to be getting hysterical. Congressmen, editors, and radio commentators are talking about millions of Americans starving. There is no need for hysteria. We are going on more limited rations, and we can't eat many of the things we want, but we are not going to starve over here. Let us look the facts in the face and try to see just what is ahead of us.

America can raise enough food to feed itself and our own armed forces and feed them well. We cannot raise enough to feed both ourselves and our allies well. The problem reduced to simple terms is two-fold.

First, how much are we going to be willing to sacrifice to aid our allies; and, second, how can we maintain maximum production so that hunger can be kept at a minimum at home and abroad?

If we maintain maximum production at home, if we do the very best we can to raise all we can, the American people generally are not going to complain too much about sacrifices necessary to supply our allies. If we don't raise all we can, if we have to make unnecessary sacrifices, and if our allies don't get all we should be able to give them, our people could and should complain. Our present shortages are due almost entirely to the mistaken and short-sighted policies against which we have been warning for many months. So far these shortages have not been serious at home. Many have been inconvenienced, but nobody has really suffered. At best the inconvenience is going to become worse. Our problem is to hold it at a minimum and to do our best to prevent real suffering among our allies.

In my judgment the peak of food production has been reached and we are now on the decline. That decline can be halted and possibly put into reverse if we adopt a sound program. This means a right-about face on a number of National policies, for it is difficult to conceive of a program more effective in reducing food production than to carry out some of the policies we are now pursuing. Farmers are told that they must produce more food with less labor, less machinery, and less fertilizer. Let's be sensible. It can't be done. If we put our dependence upon fine phrases, we will have less food.

PRESENT PRODUCTION OUTLOOK

In 1941 and 1942 we have harvested the two greatest crops in history and Secretary Wickard has set up goals for the 1943 production substantially above 1942. I believe the farmers are going to give all they have in them to try to meet them. They are going to do a good job, but our chances of meeting the goals are rather poor. Unless most unusual conditions prevail, or unless there is a change in price-control policies in Washington, our chances of doing even as well as last year are pretty slim.

1. We had the best growing season on record in 1942. Under the law of averages, we cannot expect its equal in 1943.

2. We have not been able to maintain our equipment, and replacements are cut to about one-third of our 1940 level. Power machinery is badly needed. Last year we were allotted 197,000 tractors, almost but not quite enough to cover replacements. This year we are cut to 37,000.

3. We have lost over 3,000,000 men from our farms, and while the drain has been slackened, it is still going on.

4. Price control policies have been forcing many farmers out of production. They have forced unfattened beef cattle and producing dairy cows to the slaughter block at an unprecedented rate.

REMEDIES SUGGESTED

Now, what can be done about it?

1. We can't do anything about the weather. Even the Office of Price Administration can't regulate that. We can only hope and pray for the best, but we will have to take it as it comes.

2. As to equipment, we are in no position to say where the critical materials are most vitally needed in the form of equipment. It may be best to let food production go down in order to build escort vessels or airplanes. All we can do is to urge that in building an armed force we keep our economy in balance, so that we develop no weak sources of supply because of having overbuilt some segments of our total war machine. However, we should recognize that without essential equipment, food production will decline, and measure carefully the effect on our war economy.

3. There are several approaches to the manpower problem, but the one most favorably considered in some quarters is the least workable, in our judgment. I refer to the proposal to freeze the men on the farm. Not only is it un-American but an unwilling worker is not worth his hire. He can and likely will do more damage than his services are worth. We want none of it.

The two great drains on farm labor have been military service and war industry, the latter taking twice as many men as the former.

The Tydings amendment, which provides for deferring essential, nonreplaceable farm labor, will relieve the pressure of the military service if administered according to its intent.

Some relief can be expected from mobilizing and training school labor and women workers, but this could not be great at best. Some substantial help can be expected from moving farm hands with more or less experience from places where production is low to work where production possibilities are high, but such labor placement must not be surrounded with unworkable conditions.

DRAIN TO INDUSTRY

As to the drain to industry, we believe that the greatest source of relief in the farm-labor problem would be to find means for everyone everywhere to do a full day's work during the war emergency. With the average workweek in industry at less than 43 hours, farmers who work from 60 to 160 hours can see little hope of keeping farm labor from seeking war-industry jobs at war-industry wages. They believe that if everyone worked 74 to 60 hours there would be manpower enough for all. Then with farm prices on an equitable level farmers could get their share of the labor supply. They don't believe we can win the war on a basic 40-hour week, when our enemies are working from 60 to 75 hours.

Farmers view the recent 48 hour mandate with mixed feelings. It should make some more men available, but actually the increased hours at time and a half for overtime increases the wage discrepancy, and early reports indicate will draw still more men from farms. The action is a good illustration of the fallacies of the unbalanced price-control policy which underlies most of our trouble. The American public is told that two great groups are contributing to serious dangers of inflation—agriculture and labor. To prevent disaster we are told that it is necessary to freeze farm prices and wages where they are. In the next breath industrial wage rates are boosted 84 per cent while ceilings are clamped down to prevent farmers, merchants, and other from changing their prices to meet this increased cost. Figure it out for yourself. Forty hours at $1 an hour equals $40. Add eight hours at a dollar and a half and you get $52 for 48 hours work or $1.081, a boost of 84 per cent. The time-and-a-half provision was enacted into law to force employers to spread the work in times of unemployment. Now in time of labor scarcity, and with labor drawing the highest income in history, wages are given another boost to preserve social gains, with no regard to the effect on the food supply.

This takes us to the heart of the problem. There are two schools of thought with reference to handling food and inflation.

The first advocates adjusting prices to meet increased costs. This is based on the philosophy of abundance. There is no surer way to avoid inflation than to provide an abundant supply. Where abundance sufficient to control prices is impossible, rationing can be used to assure equal treatment to all. This school believes that price-fixing should be used only to prevent profiteering.

The second advocates freezing prices and using subsidies to meet farmers' increased costs. This leads to untold governmental regulation, to black markets, and to scarcity. It never has been successfully done over any extended period in the history of the world.

I will use just one illustration to show what an impossible program we are undertaking. Ceilings have been placed on milk. Milk costs fluctuate rapidly due to weather, pasture conditions, costs of feed, labor, and a thousand things. Four or five months ago the dairymen of Southern California sought relief from ceilings which held their income below cost. The California Milk Control Board had all the figures, but for months could get no action. In the meantime local hay became exhausted and dairymen had to reach farther and farther for a hay supply. The price rose from about $28 to $40 a ton. The Office of Price Administration proposed to meet the situation by putting a ceiling of $30 on hay. That works all right on the economists charts in Washington, but hay can't be bought and shipped where needed at such a figure. Dairymen have to bootleg hay or sell their cows, for cows can't wait five months for something to eat. The result has been an enormous slaughter of dairy cows. A similar situation prevails all over the country.

The policies of the Office of Price Administration have been more responsible for food shortage than all the other causes combined, and the shortages are resulting in blackmarket operations which are already attaining volume approaching a scandal. We are persistently pursuing a policy of trying to do the impossible. Last Monday a representative of the Office of Price Administration flatly refused to recommend a change in milk ceilings which were below cost because it would affect the Little Steel formula.

Here we are, in the days of our greatest National income, with surplus purchasing power causing inflation nightmares, refusing to let the people pay the cost of producing their food supply, and by that action strangling production. Today the public is paying the lowest per cent. of its income for food of any time for which records are available. Less than 22 per cent of the income goes for food, but in order to preserve so-called social gains, we are increasing our industrial wage scale 8-1/3 per cent and denying many lines of farm production the cost of producing the food. People with money to buy with would rather pay the cost of producing food than to go without it.

All this is being done in violation of the clear mandate of law. In the Price Control Act of October 1942, after setting up certain standards for controlling wages and prices the act says, "provided that modification shall be made in maximum prices established for any agricultural commodity * * * in any case where it appears that such modification is necessary to increase the production of such commodity for war purposes." Could any instruction be plainer? The price-control policies now pursued completely ignore the law in this respect.

Please don't misunderstand me. Farmers are not asking any blanket increase in prices. On most crops prices are all right today, but on some, particularly those involving a lot of hand labor, such as dairying, for example in many localities, they are below production costs. These commodities are comparatively few in number, but they are vital in our food supply. If we don't get enough income to pay the costs of raising and harvesting such crops, we won't have the crops. There are 25,000,000 bushels of unharvested soybeans in the fields today. The same is true of sugar beets, peanuts, and a long list of other crops. Farmers are not incurring these losses because they want to, but because they can not help it.

The alternative to a compensatory price is a subsidy. Time will not permit an adequate discussion of this subject. Besides I have outlined the basis of the objections of the Grange many times before. Subsidies are no cure. They are an easy way to dodge a disagreeable issue, but they lead to inflation and disaster. I'll close with one illustration. Suppose we refuse to let consumers pay the cost of producing our food and make up the difference with subsidies. At the end of the war we will have developed an unbalanced economy which would have to be brought back into balance somehow. Our enormous debt will then necessitate cutting off the subsidies. Then one of two things will happen. Either farmers will have to raise prices or go bankrupt and stop producing. If they can't get the cost of production in times of full employment and excess income, what chance would there be to raise prices with unemployment staring us in the face? You know the answer. It is chaos. Every attempt in the history of the world to pursue the course we are now pursuing if persisted in, has ended in chaos. Any nation which can not or will not pay the cost of its food bill is headed for disaster, and America is no exception.

Estimated Crop Losses in California Due to Farm Labor Shortages During 1942

In response to requests from several groups identified with the State's agricultural industry, the staff of this Service has prepared estimates of the losses of California crops during 1942 that may be attributed to farm labor shortages. On January 20 a preliminary report was released covering this subject. The estimates appearing in that report have been revised where necessary, and are included herein, along with similar estimates for cotton and walnuts.

Such estimates do not have the same degree of reliability as estimates of total production. In most instances they must be based upon partial checks and collective opinion, carefully weighed and appraised. While it would be possible to obtain fairly accurate records of losses from specified causes by making repeated farm-to-farm surveys for this purpose, it is obvious that such procedure would be prohibitive in cost. Losses of crops frequently result from a combination of causes, which makes it difficult to accurately evaluate the separate causes of losses.

It is well to bear in mind that some loss is sustained each year in the production and harvesting of perishable crops. Losses estimated herein as assignable to labor shortages apply to those over and above such usual harvesting losses or abandonment, and to losses sustained at other critical periods of crop development.

Some losses attributable to labor shortages doubtless took place in crops other than those listed, but such were small in relation to total production of each, and a reasonably accurate appraisal of them is not feasible. Additional intangible losses represented by reduced grade, quality, and price of products were sustained because of inadequacy of labor. Loss due to reduced grade, quality and price was especially heavy with respect to cotton. Again, the net income of producers was further reduced in many cases by excessive expenses in securing and maintaining labor crews, as turnover in farm labor during the past season was unusually high.

Loss of production directly resulting from evacuation of Japanese during the spring of 1942 is excluded from these estimates.

Cottonseed -----	193,000	Tons	9,264,000	14,600	701,000
Total-----				$14,582,000

* Estimated loss in cotton includes that part of the crop not harvested, as well as loss in value because of weather damage before being picked.

The estimated aggregate value of all major California crops harvested in 1942 amounted to $769,000,000.

Reducing these estimates of crop losses to a common denominator of values reveals that only a small part of the total fruit and field crops of the State was lost. The heaviest loss took place in cotton and canning tomatoes. However, had not extremely favorable weather conditions prevailed throughout the usual harvesting season, losses certainly would have been much heavier.

Reasons for Food Shortages

(From The Sacramento Bee, Tuesday, March 20, 1945)

(The first of four articles telling why food is short and likely to get shorter still, although American production is at record peak.)

By Ovid A. Martin, Associated Press Farm Writer

WASHINGTON, March 20—(AP)—The United States faces a food situation which soon may put civilians on the slimmest diet of the war.

This is true despite the fact we have had eight successive years of expanding and record breaking food production.

Why?

The question has been asked increasingly this month by housewives often unable to find butter, chicken, cheese, sugar and eggs.

The Senate has voted an investigation, with special attention to foodstuffs shipping to foreign lands.

THE EXPLANATION

Explanations are to be found largely in two facts:

The government released more food than it should have, judged by what we know now, to civilians in 1944.

In planning this year's production, officials operated on the belief the war in Europe would end in 1944.

To understand how and why shortages have developed let's first examine the food situation in broad general terms.

After a slump during the early depression years, food production began to increase in 1937. It reached a peak in 1944. The increase was sharpest between 1941 and 1944. By the latter year, the output was 38 per cent above the 1935-39 average.

PRODUCTION WILL BE DOWN

But in 1944, production of many commodities leveled off and started downward. Given average weather conditions, production this year probably will drop 5 to 10 per cent below that of last year.

Turn now to demand, or consumption. Like production, demand started rising in 1937. It shot up sharply after the United States got into the war. But unlike production, which reached its peak last year, the demand curve still points upward. The peak of the demand has not yet been reached.

WHY DEMAND IS GREATER

More food is required now than at any time since the war started. There are two main reasons:

Military requirements—for both this country and her fighting allies—are larger than ever before.

Requirements for foreign relief and other export commitments have only lately come to the fore.

All this raises the question "why has production decreased?"

It should be said at the first that not all products are declining in production. Notable exceptions are cereal grains and milk.

But in the case of meat, butter, chickens, eggs, food fats and shortening and sugar supplies are going down.

MEAT SETUP DRAWS FIRE

The meat situation is attracting the most attention—and the bitterest complaints.

To get a picture of how and why the meat shortage came to pass, let's delve into the government's livestock production program.

At the outset of the war, the United States had an enormous reserve of grain, accumulated under the "ever normal granary" program.

The government moved quickly to convert this grain into meat, milk, poultry, eggs and other livestock products by feeding it to animals. It spurred farmers with price guarantees and subsidized feed supplies.

FLOOD OF LIVESTOCK

Farmers responded—and how! Livestock production—particularly hogs—shot up so sharply that by the Winter of 1943-44 the Nation's markets and slaughtering facilities were unable to handle it. Permit systems were set up, requiring farmers to hold market ready stock until room could be found for it at the markets.

This flood of hogs, coupled with a rising output of beef, soon was converted into a flood of meat—a flood which outstripped the rationing program, military needs, lend-lease requirements and cold storage facilities.

Faced with the possibility of losses through spoilage, the government took meat off the ration list in the Spring of 1944.

Civilians splurged. It is estimated they consumed meat at a record annual rate of nearly 160 pounds a person during the first six or eight months of the year. They now are down to a rate of about 126 pounds. During the '30s they averaged about 135.

FAMINE OF PORK FOLLOWS

In producing this quick flow of hogs, the country depleted her grain reserves. This meant a sharp reduction of new livestock in 1944—which is being felt now in a relative famine of pork.

Looking back, it is easy to see that probably the government's price incentives were too favorable. Less favorable incentives perhaps would have still brought on a flood of hogs but within limits of processing and storage facilities. This would have helped avert the feed shortage of 1944.

And the government could have obtained more pounds of livestock products from the grain than it did. Its price incentive program encouraged farmers to feed hogs to extra heavy weights. A billion bushels of corn fed to hogs marketed at light or medium weights will provide more pork than the same amount of grain fed to hogs marketed at heavy weights.

Some idea of the inefficiency of the program may be gained from this official estimate: Twenty-five per cent more feed was used in 1943 than 1942, but output of livestock products increased only 13 per cent.

Exhibit 23

(From the Sacramento Bee, Wednesday, March 21, 1945)

WASHINGTON, March 21—(AP)—Last Summer and Fall some Allied military leaders were saying the war in Europe could end by Christmas.

The government began to cut back production of war materials and arrange for a gradual conversion to peacetime production.

War Food Administration officials—haunted by the fear of farm surpluses, agriculture's troublemakers of the thirties—followed suit.

They believed if Germany were defeated in 1944 much less food would be needed to meet military and lend-lease requirements of 1945.

SEVERE FEED SHORTAGES

Meat production was declining because of a severe feed shortage the first eight months of 1944. But bountiful harvests largely replenished feed supplies by the Fall of that year.

Fearing surpluses, the WFA made no effort to bring about a substantial revival in meat production—which a return of plentiful feed supplies would have made possible. The agency kept in force the reduced price guarantees for hogs which it established earlier when feed became scarce and live stock liquidation became necessary.

Had food officials planned last September with the idea the European war could continue well into 1945, they undoubtedly would have raised the hog price guarantee. This would have encouraged higher production late in 1944 and through 1945.

GRAIN IS UNUSED

As it is, millions of bushels of grain now stand unused because there are no animals to feed. When it became apparent there was to be no early end to the European fighting, it was too late to do anything which would have brought more pork to market before the Winter of 1945-46.

Only beef production is likely to be greater this year than last. But greatly reduced supplies of pork, lamb, mutton and poultry make beef all the harder to get.

Cattle men contend beef production could be even larger than now indicated had not price control and other regulations hindered production. They say that the spread between prices which "feed lot" operators must pay for unfattened cattle obtained from western ranges, and the prices which they get from packers for fattened cattle, has been too narrow. They say this discourages the feeding of cattle to heavy weights and quality grades.

CATTLE UNDERWEIGHT

Many cattle go to market thin and underweight. This deprives the Nation of 300 to 600 pounds of extra beef per head.

Official concern over possible surpluses is reflected in poultry and egg production, too. Last Fall, when end of the European conflict appeared to some to be near at hand, WFA called upon farmers to reduce egg-laying flocks and to plan fewer chickens for meat in 1945.

WFA was influenced also by unhappy experiences it had with an egg surplus in the Spring of 1944. More eggs were produced than the market could absorb or storage houses hold. Producer prices dropped sharply. This forced the Government to step in and buy eggs in order to carry out a price guarantee and prevent great waste. Even so, some of the eggs rotted.

Civilians could get all the meat they wanted then and consequently tended to eat fewer eggs. Now the situation has reversed. There is a shortage of meats and civilians are demanding more eggs as a substitute for meats.

FEWER EGGS, POULTRY

Yet this year's output of both eggs and poultry meat will be smaller than in 1944. WFA efforts to revive production came a little late.

Some WFA officials expect a severe egg shortage next Fall and Winter. This expectation is based upon reports of widespread sales of laying hens for meat and upon prospects that fewer eggs will move into cold storage this Spring.

The same policies and feed grain developments which caused the pork glut in 1944 have contributed to a tightening of cooking fats and shortening.

The butter shortage appears perplexing when milk production is being maintained at record levels. The explanation is simple. Government price policies tend to encourage putting milk into dairy products other than butter—chiefly bottled milk, evaporated milk, dried milk and cheese.

LABOR SUPPLY IS SHORT

Food production is being adversely affected by many other factors. The farm labor supply is the smallest in nearly 40 years. Farmers have not been able to get anywhere near the farm machinery needed. Fertilizers have not been plentiful. Shortage of rail and truck transportation has often interfered with movement of feed to live stock producers.

A recent Agriculture Department report said only 65 per cent of the Nation's milk cows were being milked on March 1st. This is the lowest percentage for that date since 1934 and the second lowest in 17 years.

Exhibit 24

(From the Sacramento Bee, Thursday, March 22, 1945)

WASHINGTON, March 22—(AP)—Government control of foods in wartime involves the regulation of distribution as well as production. Shortages of the past and present often reflect an uneven distribution.

Rationing is designed to distribute supplies evenly. But there are loopholes as well as violations which enable some consumers to get more than their share.

Even now, when complaints of meat shortages are rampant, show cases are well filled in some areas. Often in the same city one store will have more meat per customer than another.

CLOSE TO PRODUCTION

Food supplies tend to remain close to the source of production. Normally, it is only when nearby consumers get all they want that supplies move out to areas of lesser production.

This has been true especially in the case of meats and butter, the great bulk of which are produced and processed in the Midwest.

Because of this—and some black marketing—there has been a tendency for a larger and larger portion of the hogs and beef cattle to be bought and slaughtered by small, local plants serving very limited areas. As a consequence, the large packing plants which normally supply the more distant areas have been getting a smaller portion of the meat animals.

DEPEND ON BIG PLANTS

Aggravating bad distribution among civilians has been the fact that the government has had to depend very largely upon the bigger plants to supply the army and lend-lease and to provide foreign relief. These plants have been forced to cut down on supplies moving to their civilian customers.

The government from time to time has tightened regulations designed to channel more meat animals into pens of the larger plants, but those moves have not been completely successful. Officials say the only way to obtain an even distribution would be to place a policeman on every livestock farm, in every slaughter plant and in every retail store.

REDS GET SALT PORK

Often complaints revolve around an insufficient supply of a particular cut or type of meat. For example, complaints are being made in the South of a shortage of salt pork, highly desired by some consumers there. Much of this type of meat, which the large packers would normally ship to the South, is filling lend-lease requirements of Russia.

Another cause of maldistribution is an understandable attempt on the part of some processors to favor their better customers. It is their desire to hold these customers for peacetime markets. Frequently transportation difficulties cause temporary local shortages.

Government distribution policies for sugar, as well as a wartime decline in the domestic production, have affected supplies of this commodity. Last year the government allowed civilians larger rations, principally for canning. It also increased allowances to industrial users, such as soft drink makers, bakers and candy makers.

These increased allowances, sharply opposed by some government authorities, had the effect of largely depleting sugar reserves. The action in granting larger rations was prompted largely by the belief the war in Europe was about over.

Now food officials regret their 1944 liberality. They since have reduced allowances for both civilians and industrial users.

Looking backward, it is easy to see now rationing could have been used more effectively in 1944 to make supplies of present shortage items last longer.

CHANGED RATION SETUP

Meats, lard, shortening, other fats (except butter) and some canned foods were taken off the ration list in the Spring. They were not returned until late in December, after it became apparent the war would continue well into 1945. When they finally were restored to rationing, the action was not taken without an inter agency controversy.

The move was urged by the Office of Price Administration but was opposed by the War Food Administration.

This difference in opinion is explained largely by the fact OPA is "consumer minded." That is, it is fearful of shortages. WFA, on the other hand, is largely "producer minded" which influences it to fear surpluses. The matter was settled in favor of OPA by the Office of Economic Stabilization, referee in such controversies.

Exhibit 25

(From the Sacramento Bee, Friday, March 23, 1945)

WASHINGTON, March 23—(AP)—Upon its entry into the war, the United States promised Axis dominated countries American food would "win the war and write the peace."

Propaganda broadcasts to Europe told of plans to set aside a portion of each year's production for relief stockpiles. Yet, except for wheat, dry beans and a few other minor items, no such stockpiles were accumulated.

As a result, the full force of foreign relief demands is falling suddenly upon current production.

REASON FOOD IS TIGHT

That production is hard pressed to supply Allied and American military requirements are this country's civilian needs. That's one reason why food is tight now.

Two developments contributed largely to abandonment of the stockpile idea: (1) Reports, both official and unofficial, that European relief needs would not be so great as had been expected; (2) official fear that such stockpiles may become surpluses and unduly depress farm prices.

A warning that this country would face a situation such as exists today was made in 1943 by a special food advisory committee of the War Food Administration. This committee was made up of representatives of various government agencies concerned with the war food problem.

IS NO FOOD BASKET

The committee declared the United States "cannot become the food basket of the United Nations." It urged immediate action be taken by the United Nations to obtain increased production of selected foods in other areas—particularly in colonial areas, neutral countries and in South America—to help meet war and foreign relief needs.

The committee took issue with what it called a "general impression that this country can make up deficits" in war and relief needs. It said:

"Americans as a whole, including those in government, have never wholeheartedly convinced themselves that we are out of the surplus days of the 20's and 30's. Surplus cobwebs have got to be brushed from an official brain on the subject of food. We must realize that food supplies will remain low until at least two years after the end of the war."

LOST AMID OPTIMISM

A few moves were made to encourage production in other areas, but they, like the stockpile plans, were largely lost in the wave of peace optimism which gripped the country in 1944.

Evidence points also to a lack of coordination between agencies responsible for food production and those making promises to meet lend-lease and relief needs.

Those commitments far exceed requirements which WFA had expected, particularly in the category of meats, fats and vegetable oils and dairy products—the major scarcity items.

Because the foreign demands exceed WFA expectations, the government has set up a special committee headed by Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley. This committee's job is to divide available supplies in a manner designed to meet essential military requirements minimum lend-lease and foreign relief needs without cutting American civilians excessively.

MORE BELT TIGHTENING

This division, President Roosevelt told a news conference, will require further civilian belt tightening so that Americans may fulfill humanitarian obligations to the war hungry.

How long will this belt tightening last?

As far as meats are concerned, no improvement is in sight before fall or early winter. Marketings of livestock increase seasonally then. But no substantial increase in civilian rations is expected before 1946. By that time it will be possible to raise hog production above the present restricted levels.

IMPROVEMENT COULD COME

Some improvement in the beef supply could come later this year if the government offered incentives which would encourage the feeding of cattle to heavier weights.

No improvement in civilian supplies of food fats and shortening is expected before 1946. The production of lard this year is expected to drop 25 per cent below last year, and official estimates indicate farmers will plant fewer acres to peanuts and soybeans, sources of vegetable oils.

The butter supply may not improve materially until after the defeat of Japan.

Shortages may exist for another year in the case of canned fruits and vegetables. Production of these items will be adversely affected by shortages of labor and materials.

Only in the case of cereals, including flour, are plentiful supplies assured.

A recent agricultural department survey of farmers' planting plans emphasized that short farm labor supply—officially described as the smallest in 35 years—will prevent any increase in food and livestock feed crops this year. If the weather turns unfavorable, production might drop disastrously low.

Wanted, a Modern Joseph to Prepare for Food Famine on Today's Horizon

(From Editorial from Morning Call, Paterson, N. J., Published in the Congressional Record, April 17, 1945, Page A1914, at the Request of Hon. Gordon Canfield (N.J.))

One year ago the Morning Call made a plea for more aid and encouragement to the farmers of the Nation, warning of an inevitable food famine for ourselves as well as the scorched and plundered nations in the battle zones.

Our shortsighted food administrators, however, still blinded by the false and godless philosophy of prosperity through economic scarcity, refused to listen and slumbered contentedly on, oblivious to the fact that the continuous turning of plowshares into guns and farm hands into soldiers has been slowly but surely depleting our farms of both manpower and equipment so necessary to keep our farm lands at full production. Now as a result, according to James Patton, president of the National Farmers Union, we are likely to lose 25 per cent of our potential food production this year, at a time when food and more food is the need of the hour. Already the great surpluses of which our Department of Agriculture boasted last year are dwindling like ice in a Summer's sun, due to the unprecedented and apparently underestimated demands of the starving peoples which our victorious Armies have been liberating by the millions. Our War Food Administrator also underestimated the supposedly "vast surpluses on hand in the Army warehouses," for only last week Assistant Secretary of War Patterson revealed that the 108 day Army supply at overseas ports had been reduced to less than 70. In fact the entire reserve at home and abroad is now so low that if it were all released it would not feed our civilian population for one week.

Already as our loyal housewives are daily finding out, where only last year there were bulging surpluses as reported by our Secretary of Agriculture, shortages have already developed in meat, fats, oils, sugar, and dairy products. Even the faithful chicken has suddenly become as scarce on the market here in Paterson as an egg in England. And it is not all going to our half-starved allies either, for early this past Winter the Bureau of Agricultural Economics revealed that we did not even then have enough to take care of Europe's barest relief needs in four of the six prime food necessities—meat, fats, and oils, sugar, and milk.

So in spite of last year's bumper crops, blessed with good farming weather, scarcity in this land of wealth and plenty looms in front of us at a time when the whole world is crying for food. Should there be a Nation-wide drought this year to add to our mounting food troubles (and it is pretty near time Dame Nature decreed one) how long will our fast vanishing stock piles fill the breach? It takes no divine prophecy to foretell another food famine to plague the world, thanks to the wasteful and destructive follies of mankind, as it did 3,660 years ago in the prophet Joseph's time.

What Egypt faced then, America may face in 1945. Would that we had another Joseph in Washington today to foresee and prepare for its coming; a Joseph, who would step up Spring farm plantings all over this long blessed land, who would rebuild and provide modern farm machinery, and construct vast granaries and storehouses to meet the famine that will descend and bring tragedy upon us in the wake of war if we are as criminally unprepared as we are today to meet it.

Government by Decree

(By Warren B. Francis)

(From Editorial by Warren B. Francis, Los Angeles Times April 8, 1945, published in the Congressional Record of November 17, 1945, Page A1902 at the request of Hon. John Phillips (California))

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Few people seem to do anything about the weather, as Mark Twain observed. Nor do they do anything about Government by decree.

Several years ago an enterprising advertising man won a seat in Congress by promising to repeal a law a day. The time seems to be ripe for a candidate who will promise to hold down the issuance of directives to one a day.

Careful checking of the official records shows that miscellaneous Government agencies issued 1,338 orders, rules, regulations, amendments, and other instructions in a three-week period. Lawyers, businessmen, Washington observers, and even bureaucrats cannot keep up with this stream of decrees unless they devote full time to checking on the revisions, modifications, changes, and interpretations.

A GREAT FLOOD

Historically, Executive orders signified a White House decision. They were aimed at other Federal agencies, at assorted Government officers. They have come from the President's office in legitimate fashion for generations. These formal documents bears the President's signature.

The stream of proclamations, ultimatums, and other directives lately has reached the proportion of a surging flood. They have the standing of Executive orders, though signed by a host of individuals, and also the effect of congressional enactments.

In the case of laws, presumably some debate and discussion and deliberation precedes final approval. In the case of Executive orders, there is no such assurance.

SOME OF THE FACTS

The degree to which the administrative branch of the Government has taken advantage of hastily conferred authority to tell the people where to head in cannot be appreciated without a few statistics.

Thanks to the research of an enterprising Californian, some of these vital facts are available. The Washington representative of the California Chamber of Commerce, Charles J. S. Williamson, has noted there were, on a single day, 33 pages of "detailed amended instructions in relation to meat inspection." He adds, pointedly, "What meat?"

In one seven-day period the output of rules, orders, decrees, and other directives ran from a high of 168 to a low of 62, totaling 444 for the week. One order carried nearly 50 footnotes, referring affected parties to earlier versions.

This "octopus," to steal a phrase from the industrious Californian, seems to be an insidious animal. He is infiltrating into the home-front ranks with the persistence of Japanese. He is using a streamlined model of the "If you can't lick 'em, join 'em" vehicle. He is using the war effort as a smoke screen to cloak his movements.

Significant warning about the dangers of government by decree can be found in a congressional report warning about the number of orders signed by the President. This does not enumerate the volume of decrees from such agencies as the O.P.A., W.M.C., W.P.B., and other alphabetical conglomerations.

HOW LONG?

Ironically, the "do this—or else" notices derive the force of law by being printed in the Federal Register. Not one is enforceable—as in the case of the curfew—until it appears in that publication. The Federal Register, incidentally, bears the motto, "Littera Scripta Manet." Loosely translated, this means "The written word remains."

A review of the orders, etc., prompts two questions: How long does the written word govern the conduct of the Nation? When is somebody going to do something about it?

Tables of Labor Requirements for California Crops—Major Seasonal Operations, are attached and made part of the Senate Journal of May 16.

CALIFORNIA DEPARTMENT OF EMPLOYMENT
CALIFORNIA UNEMPLOYMENT INSURANCE APPEALS BOARD
SACRAMENTO 14, CALIFORNIA, May 17, 1945

*Senator John Shelley, State Capitol,
Sacramento, California*

DEAR SIR: The California Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board at a meeting in Sacramento, on May 16, 1945, approved the revision of Regulation No. 43, relating to agricultural labor which has been proposed by the Chiefs of the Division of Accounts and Tax Collections and the Division of Public Employment Offices and Benefit Payments. Affirmative votes were cast by Toland C. McGettigan and Edgar E. Lampton, with Commissioner Michael B. Kunz dissenting. A copy of the revised regulation as submitted and approved is attached.

As a result of the public hearing on the regulation, which was held in Sacramento, on March 6, 1945, in accordance with Section 90(b) (2) of the Unemployment Insurance Act, various protests were received which have been fully considered. A further hearing before the Appeals Board, as required by Section 90(b) (3) of the act was held in Sacramento on March 26, 1945, at which time the protestants orally presented their views concerning the proposed regulation.

One of the grounds of protest to the regulation is that the proposed regulation unduly restricts the term "agricultural labor" so as to exclude from the exemption certain types of services which are agricultural labor and have been so held by the courts. After consideration of the entire record in this matter and on the basis of recent decisions of the California Supreme and Appellate Courts, the regulation was approved as representing a proper and legal definition of the agricultural labor exemption under the act. (See California Employment Commission vs. Butte County Rice Growers Association, 25 A.C. 604; California Employment Commission vs. John Kovacevich, Jr., 68 A.C.A. 744; and The Irvine Company vs. California Employment Commission, et al ----- A.C.A. -----). In view of these decisions, the Appeals Board concluded that any inclusion of services as agricultural labor other than as provided in Regulation No. 43, as approved, is a matter for legislative rather than administrative consideration.

The proposed regulation was also protested on the basis that since the regulation is substantive and not merely procedural, the promulgation thereof is within the jurisdiction of the California Employment Stabilization Commission rather than the chiefs of divisions. Under Section 90(b) of the act the rule making power is vested in the Chief of the Division of Accounts and Tax Collections and the Chief of the Division of Public Employment Offices and Benefit Payments, and the scope of the power delegated is not confined by law to procedural matters. Therefore, Regulation No. 43 as proposed is considered by the Appeals Board to be a valid exercise of the authority to promulgate rules and regulations by those in whom that authority has been vested by law.

A further ground of protest to the proposed regulation is that neither the commission nor the chiefs of the two divisions legally, by revision of the regulation, can alter the regulation defining agricultural labor so as to enlarge the term and include certain services as agricultural labor which were not previously so regarded. No legal authority has been cited, nor has any been found, to preclude a reasonable revision of an administrative regulation from time to time in the course of proper administration of the law and consonant with the decisions of the courts in interpreting the subject matter of the regulation. It was therefore the conclusion of the Appeals Board that the regulation had been properly and lawfully promulgated.

In accordance with the act, Regulation No. 43, as revised, will become effective after filing with the Secretary of State and publication in a newspaper of general circulation, which will be approximately June 1, 1945.

Very truly yours,

FORREST M. HILL, Secretary

Regulations of California Unemployment Insurance Act

43 EXTENT OF AGRICULTURAL LABOR EXEMPTION

(b) In the employ of the owner or tenant of a farm on which the materials in their raw or natural state were produced, in connection with the drying, processing, packing, packaging, transporting, and marketing of such materials.

(c) In the employ of the owner or tenant of a farm with respect to ordinary farming operations in connection with the operation, management, conservation, improvement, or maintenance of such farm and its tools and equipment, if substantially all of such services are performed on a farm.

(d) The provisions of paragraphs (b) and (c) are not applicable with respect to the services referred to unless such services are carried on as an incident to ordinary farming operations as distinguished from manufacturing or commercial operations. Nor are the provisions of said paragraphs applicable to services performed in commercial canning or commercial freezing.

(e) As used herein, the term "farm" includes, among others, stock, dairy, poultry, fruit and truck farms; plantations, ranches, ranges, nurseries, orchards and vineyards.

On page 1 of said bill, strike out lines 1 to 10, inclusive and insert

"SECTION 1. Chapter 5.5 is added to Division 2 of the Education Code, to read:

CHAPTER 5.5. RECALL

2151. A member of any elective governing board of a school district who has held office at least six months, may be recalled at any time by the voters, by following the recall procedure set forth in this chapter. This chapter shall not, however, apply in the case of any member of any board of education of a city the charter, if any, of which provides for the recall of members of such board.

2152. A petition demanding the election of a successor to the person sought to be recalled shall be filed with the county clerk. The petition shall be signed by voters equal in number to at least 20 per cent of the entire vote cast at the last election for the election of a member, or members, of the governing board of the district. The petition shall contain a statement of the grounds on which the recall is sought, for the information of the voters. Any insufficiency of form or substance in this statement shall not affect the validity of the election and proceedings held thereunder.

2153. The signatures to the petition need not all be appended to one paper. Each signer shall add to his signature his place of residence and occupation, giving street and number. If no street or number exists, then a designation of the place of residence shall be given which will enable the location to be readily ascertained. Each separate paper shall have attached to it an affidavit made by a voter of the school district. The affidavit shall state that the affiant circulated that particular paper and saw written the signatures appended thereto; and that according to the best information and belief of the affiant:

(a) Each is the genuine signature of the person whose name it purports to be.

(b) The signer is a voter of the district.

2154. Petitions demanding the recall of a member of the governing board of a school district shall indicate the date of each signature thereon.

No such petition is valid for the purpose for which it was circulated after the expiration of six months from the date the first signature was affixed thereto, unless it has been filed in accordance with the provisions of this chapter.

2155. Within 10 days from the date of filing the petition, the county clerk shall examine and from the records of registration ascertain whether or not the petition is signed by the requisite number of voters. He shall attach to the petition his certificate showing the result of his examination. If the county clerk's certificate shows the petition to be insufficient, a supplemental petition, in form a duplicate of the original petition bearing additional signatures, may be filed within 10 days of the date of the certificate of insufficiency. The county clerk shall, within 10 days after the supplemental petition is filed, examine it, and if his certificate shows that all the signatures to the petition are still insufficient, no action shall be taken thereon. The petition shall remain on file as a public record, and the failure to secure sufficient signatures shall not prejudice the filing later of an entirely new petition to the same effect.

2156. If the petition, together with supplementary petitions, if any, is found to be sufficient, the county clerk shall submit it to the county superintendent of schools having jurisdiction over the district without delay. The county superintendent of schools shall at once order a special election to be held within not less than 35 nor more than 40 days after the date of the order, to determine whether the voters will recall the officer. If a regular election for the election of members of the governing board of the district is to occur not less than 35 nor more than 60 days from the date of the order calling the special election, the county superintendent of schools may, in his discretion, order the holding of the special election at the time the regular election is held."

2157. If a vacancy occurs in the office after a recall petition is filed, the election shall nevertheless proceed as provided in this article.

2158. One election is sufficient for the recall and election of one or more members of the governing board of a school district, but a separate petition is necessary to propose the recall of each member.

2159. Any qualified person may become a candidate for election at a recall election in the same manner as a qualified person may become a candidate at a regular election.

2162. On the recall ballots, under each question, there shall be printed the name of those persons who have become candidates in the manner provided by this code for such office as candidates to succeed the incumbent if he is recalled from office by the recall election. No vote cast shall be counted for any candidate for the office unless the voter also voted on the question of the recall of the person sought to be recalled from that office. The name of the person against whom the petition is filed shall not appear on the ballot as a candidate for the office.

2164. The board of supervisors shall canvass all votes for candidates for the office and declare the result as in a regular election. If the vote recalls the member, the candidate who has received the highest number of votes for the office shall be declared elected, for the remainder of the term. If the person who received the highest number of votes fails to qualify within 10 days after receiving the certificate of election, the office shall become vacant and shall be filled according to law.

2165. The cost of any recall election held under this chapter shall be borne by the school district in which such election is held.

SEC. 2. This act is hereby declared to be an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace and safety within the meaning of Section 11 of Article IV of the Constitution and shall therefore go into immediate effect, to become operative July 1, 1945. A statement of the facts constituting such necessity is as follows:

No law now exists permitting the recall of members of governing boards of school districts excepting in the case of members of boards of education of cities the charters, if any, of which provide for their recall. As a consequence the electors of a school district have, generally speaking, no recourse against acts of the governing board of the district, or any member or members thereof which are detrimental to the school district and the pupils thereof.

In order that this situation be corrected at the earliest possible moment and members of all governing boards of school districts be made subject to recall, it is necessary that this act take effect immediately."
